Mr. Speaker, a college education is no longer a luxury; it is a necessity. In today's high-tech, highly competitive economy, a college-educated workforce is crucial to our Nation's success. But there is more than that at stake here. For many people, a college education is part of the American Dream. Republicans are working hard to make this dream a reality. These accomplishments bring us closer to the goal of ensuring that every qualified American who wants a college education will be able to afford one.

I want to congratulate my colleagues who have worked so hard on these issues, and I am very proud that the Republican Congress has made it such a priority to open the doors of higher education even further.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. STABENOW) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. Speaker, for the past six months, I have been reading letters on the floor of the House of Representatives from senior citizens from all over the state of Michigan. These seniors have shared their stories with me about the high cost of prescription drugs. They all have one thing in common: these seniors rely solely on Medicare for their health insurance, so they do not have any prescription drug benefit. They must pay for their prescription drugs themselves, and with the high prices, they often are forced to make decision between buying the prescription drugs they need or buying food or heating their homes. We must enact a voluntary, Medicare prescription drug benefit that will provide real help for these seniors.

This week, I will read a letter from Mary Hudson from Fenton, Michigan.

I understand that Mary currently does not fill most of her prescriptions because she cannot afford them.

Sometimes, her son buys her medication for her and sometimes she goes without.

If Mary did purchase all of the prescription medication she needs, her bills would be approximately $1715.40 per year.

I will now read Mary's letter. "Dear Debbie, Last summer, I went to a doctor with bladder problems and high cholesterol and was given prescriptions cost $44—which I got filled—but the other was $90—which I would not. Who can afford those prices and pay other bills too?

Thanks for your interest in seniors, Debbie, and for anything you can do to help us. Love, Mary."

Mary deserves a genuine Medicare prescription drug benefit. Time is running out to do something in this Congress. We must enact real prescription drug reform before we adjourn.

CONGRESS IGNORES ITS CONSTITUTIONAL RESPONSIBILITY REGARDING MONETARY POLICY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, at a frantic pace we anxiously rush to close down this Congress with excessive legislation while totally ignoring the all-important issue of monetary policy.

Congress has certainly reneged on its responsibility in this area. We continue to grant authority to a central bank that designs monetary policy in complete secrecy, inflating the currency at will, thus stealing value from the already existing currency through a dilution effect.

The Federal Reserve clings to the silly notion that economic growth causes inflation, thus trying to avoid the blame it deserves. The Federal Reserve then concludes that an economic slowdown is the solution to the problem it created. Those who argue to continue the inflationary process are equally in error. As if the economy were an airplane, the monetary authorities talk about a soft landing with the false hope of painlessly paying for the excesses enjoyed for a decade.

It should surprise no one that our financial markets are getting more volatile every day. Inflating a currency and causing artificially low interest rates always leads to malinvestment, overcapacity, excessive debt, speculation, and dangerous trade imbalances. We now live in a world awash in a sea of fiat currencies, with the dollar, the yen, and the Euro leading the way. The inevitable unwinding of the wild speculation, as reflected in the derivatives market, is now beginning.

And what do we do here in the Congress? We continue to ignore our constitutional responsibility to maintain a sound dollar. Our monetary policy of the last 10 years has produced the largest financial bubble in all of history, with the good times paid for by borrowing and an illusion of wealth created in a speculative stock market. Our current account deficit, now running over $400 billion per year, and our $1.5 trillion foreign debt, has been instrumental in financing our extravagance. Be assured, the piper will be paid. The markets are clearly reflecting the excesses of the 1990s.

Already we hear the pundits arguing over who is to be blamed if the markets crash or a recession hits. Some have given the current President credit for the good times we have enjoyed. If the crash comes, some will place the blame on him as well. If problems hit later, the next President will get the blame. But the truth is our Presidents deserve neither the credit for the good times nor the blame for the bad times.

The Federal Reserve, which maintains a monopoly control over the money supply, credit and interest rates, is indeed the culprit and should be held accountable. But the real responsibility falls on the Congress, for it is Congress' neglect that permits the central bank to debase the dollar at will.

Destroying the value of a currency is immoral and remains unconstitutional. It should be illegal. And only a responsible Congress can accomplish that.

In preparation for the time when we are forced to reform the monetary system, we must immediately begin to consider the problems that befall a nation that permits systematic currency depreciation as a tool to gain short-term economic benefits while ignoring the very dangerous long-term consequences to our liberty and prosperity.

PENDING SALE OF ATTACK HELICOPTERS IN TURKEY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TANCREDO). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge the Department of State not to issue an export license for the sale of attack helicopters to Turkey.

As my colleagues are aware, in July of this year, the Turkish government announced that it had awarded a $4 billion contract for attack helicopters to the American company Bell-Textron.

However, before the sale can take place, the Department of State must issue an export license and its decision must take into account both foreign policy and human rights considerations.

As I look at these considerations, it is clear to me that sending 145 attack helicopters to Turkey runs directly counter to American interests and values in the region. The United States has a national interest in fostering peace and stability in the Eastern Mediterranean region.

Recent developments in this regard have been encouraging, in particular the thaw in relations between Greece and Turkey. Yet, the sale of attack helicopters threatens to reverse this positive trend and unleash a regional arms race.

This is not in our interest. It is also not in our interest to see these helicopters used not for legitimate self-defense or NATO purposes but instead to terrorize and threaten.

Turkey has had a long record of using U.S.-supplied military equipment in direct violation of U.S. law. In 1974, Turkey employed U.S.-supplied aircraft and tanks in its invasion of the northern part of Cyprus, an area that Turkish forces continue to occupy today with the use of U.S.-supplied military equipment.

For the past 16 years, Turkey has been illegally using American weaponry, especially attack helicopters, in a scorched-Earth campaign against its Kurdish minority and has threatened to use them against Greece and Cyprus as well.

To date, according to reports from various human rights organizations, the Turkish military has killed over 30,000 civilian Kurds, destroyed over 2,000 Kurdish villages, and created perhaps as many as 2.5 million Kurdish refugees.

Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, and even our State Department have reported that Turkey has illegally used American attack helicopters in these horrendous crimes against humanity.

The administration appears ready to grant an export license despite statements by the State Department in 1998 that it would condition approval of an export license on Turkey's meeting a series of eight human rights benchmarks.

A review of the State Department's annual human rights report issued earlier this year can lead to only one conclusion, that Turkey has not met the criteria laid down in 1998.

In light of its own report, the State Department should follow the principled example of our NATO ally Germany.

Just a few weeks ago, Peter Struck, the parliamentary leader of Germany's ruling SPD party, announced that a pending multi-billion-dollar sale of Leopard II tanks to Turkey would be blocked on human rights grounds.

Mr. Struck added that he did not expect this decision to change in light of the fact that no progress was being made in Turkey's human rights performance.

The overall impact of going through with this helicopter sale would be to damage America's credibility as a champion of human rights and endanger regional stability in an area of considerable strategic significance to the United States.

The argument that Turkey needs these additional attack helicopters to defend itself against possible attack by Syrian, Iraqi, or Iranian tanks is suspicious. The existing Turkish military inventory already provides an overwhelming deterrent against these alleged threats.

This arms deal is also not in Turkey's best interest. Turkey recently became a candidate for accession to the European Union. For this purpose, it needs to undertake massive restructuring and modernization of its economy. It also needs to reduce the military's role in government, make dramatic improvements in human rights, resolve territorial issues with Greece, and help to solve the Cyprus problem.

By moving to expand its fleet of attack helicopters, Turkey sends a signal of misplaced priorities and undercuts its quest to join Europe.

In short, I call upon the administration to take a principled stand against this pending sale of 145 attack helicopters to Turkey and deny the export license.

EDUCATION IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to talk about education. We will hear later tonight from the two presidential candidates a lot about education. We will have two very differing messages.

George W. Bush, the Republican candidate, will talk about getting money to the classrooms, getting money to the school districts and requiring accountability, accountability that young people can read, that young people understand math, that young people understand science and English and reach certain levels of excellence.

Then we will have the Gore plan that talks about, if you do what we want you to do, we will furnish some money. If you hire teachers, we will help you. If you do new school construction, and I would say also and if you are urban, we may help you. But it certainly will not be to the most of the hundreds of thousands of school districts in this country, only a few privileged few.

Now, it is interesting as we listen to this debate that we keep it in perspective. The Federal Government claims that they provide seven percent of the basic education money from K–12, seven percent.

Now I am going to give my colleagues the actual figures to Pennsylvania, the fifth largest State in the country, a sophisticated State, 3.3 percent of the money in school districts. Of the 530 school districts in Pennsylvania, 3.3 percent of their budget comes from the Federal Government.

So the question I ask is, that is 47 percent of seven percent, so what happens to the 53 percent? Is it all chewed up in Federal and State and regional bureaucracies that we know are often funded by the Federal Government? If that is the case, then if we are going to impact education from Washington, we have to figure out how to get the money into the classroom.

Last year and the year before, we had a program called Dollars to the Classroom that took a lot of programs and made it much easier for school districts to use them and get the money out to the school districts without all the bureaucratic work that is needed, without the grantsmen, without the consultants that you need to get Federal money.

It is interesting for the American public to realize, Mr. Speaker, that one of my most suburban school districts gets just a little over one percent of its money from the Federal Government. Are we going to fix education in that community? I have dozens of school districts that get between one and two percent of their money from the Federal Government.

Are we going to fix education there?

We can help a little bit. We can guide a little bit. But if we are going to have Washington-based programs that they have to apply for that they have to meet all the requirements of, most smaller school districts will not even apply.

I think it is important as we listen to this presidential debate that we talk about getting dollars to the classroom, that we require accountability, but not Federal bureaucracies in charge of our school districts.

My colleagues, we cannot improve education by more Federal programs, more Federal bureaucrats, more Federal rules and with only 47 percent of the Federal dollars reaching the classroom if Pennsylvania is like most States. And I believe that is probably the case in most States.

So it is important that if we are going to really help education from Washington that we allow the local leaders, we make it easy to get the Federal dollars there. If they need maintenance, they can do maintenance. If they need teachers, they can hire teachers. If they need books, they can buy books. If they need computers, they can buy computers. Not Washington telling them, we will help you if you do what we think you should do.

So I think it is very important as we listen to this Presidential debate that we realize that Washington cannot make our school districts better. We can only be a small player if we get the money to the school districts and we allow them to make the decisions that teachers and the administrators and the parents involved in their young people's education, that Washington does not have the answers, Washington will not make it better, it will make it more complicated, few dollars will reach the classroom.

All these bureaucracies that are funded with that 53 percent do not teach a student, do not make a classroom better, do not make a school better, and does not help the role of education.

So as I conclude my comments this evening, it is important that we get the money to the classroom, that we require accountability that students can read, they can do math, they can do science, and they know English. That will give them the basis for their life and will give them a good education.

ENERGY DEREGULATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, as things are cooling off here in Washington and the temperature of the city is dropping, to the relief of the local communities, back in San Diego things are heating up. And sadly, they are heating up not because of the weather but because of the inappropriate action of Government and the inaction of those who should be taking care of their constituents.

A few years ago, the State legislature of the State of California tried an experiment called energy deregulation, at the same time that those of us in the Congress were working on deregulation of telecommunications. But unlike what we did successfully here in Washington, the State did not assure competition, access, and infrastructure for the energy consumers of San Diego County, and soon to be the entire State of California.

Now, it may seem like a political comment to say that, when politicians make mistakes, terrible things happen. But I think too often some of our elected officials do not consider the impact on the real people in the community who are out there doing the great things that we take for granted.

Mr. Speaker, I am in a sad position tonight to announce that an institution in my district in Pacific Beach, a landmark that has been there for 54 years, is going to close because the State legislature of the State of California passed a so-called energy deregulation bill that is now causing electric power rates to rise to such astronomical levels that small businesses are going bankrupt.

The small business I am speaking of is DeVaney's Bakery in Pacific Beach. It has been a bakery that has been around since 1946. It has been a family-owned business that has served not only the local community but the entire sub-region of the coastal area that we call San Diego.

It is sad to see that Sacramento adjourned, Mr. Speaker, this year before they addressed this absolutely critical economic and social crisis in San Diego, which is soon to spread throughout the State of California. I would hope that the speaker and every Member of this Congress would join with me in asking that we try to work together here to do what we can to save the constituency and the citizens of San Diego County, and soon to be California, from this horrendous mistake by the State legislature.

Mr. Speaker, it took a bipartisan effort in Sacramento to create this disaster that is closing down this landmark in Pacific Beach.

I would ask us here in Washington to step forward and make a bipartisan effort to save businesses throughout San Diego County and California from the devastating effect of this legislative mistake in Sacramento. So I ask us to learn from this tragedy of DeVaney's Bakery and let us work together at trying to see what we can do to protect the constituents from Sacramento's mistake. I hope we do not find excuses to walk away before we can address this issue. It is sad that Sacramento did that. I would ask us, both Democrats and Republicans, to work together. I hope I am not here next week announcing the next business that had to go under.

I would remind Mr. Speaker that this is not just a San Diego problem. San Diego and California has been a driving force at generating revenue for this Federal Government that has constituted what we call the surplus. If we do not address this power crisis in San Diego, it will not only spread throughout California, it could severely hurt the entire Nation's ability to continue the economic prosperity that so many of us in elective office want to point to and take credit.

Now the challenge is, will we rise to protect this economic recovery by addressing this government problem that was created in Sacramento and may only be corrected now by working together to protect the consumers, the taxpayers, the citizens and, yes, even small businesses like DeVaney's Bakery that has been around so long and will not be around tomorrow because of mistakes that have been made by others, but that we must address.

END-OF-SESSION ISSUES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TANCREDO). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

BANKRUPTCY REFORM

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, we are nearing the end of the current session as everyone knows and it is very apparent that nerves are frayed and that tempers are short but that is to be expected. That is an occupational disease of being a Member of Congress or of being the member of any parliamentary body anywhere in the world. But we have a special affliction here in Washington because we indulge in this almost every single year with every single year's budget, with every single year's end incessant haggling over minutia and some grand themes in this end-of-the-session battle in which we find ourselves once again.

Bankruptcy reform, which began some 3½ years ago in this very Chamber, is one of those grand items to which I refer as being includable in the end package of legislation which we will be considering in the next few days, perhaps after the new CR is passed even into next week. But there is a distinct difference in taking the bankruptcy reform measure and putting it at the end process for the purpose of yet one final vote on it. It is one that has been thoroughly debated. It is not like at the last minute some appropriator jams something into the omnibus bill at the end about which we know nothing and we are surprised months later to learn that there is a swimming pool now in the middle of the desert where never there was one before. Those kinds of special favor types of items continue to appear in the end product. We acknowledge that. Sometimes we wonder whether there is anything we can do about it except to adopt the proposal that I have proposed for 18 years, no, no, for many, many years now, that is, to have an automatic continuing resolution if we have not reached a budget by the end of the budget year.

In any event, the bankruptcy reform bill is not like that swimming pool in the desert. Rather, it is a measure that has been well received by Members of the House, by Members of the other body, by the business community, by the credit unions of our Nation, by taxpayers groups, by taxing authorities like States and local governments, all manner of working entities in our country have testified before us, giving us ample evidence upon which to base this movement to make sure that everyone gets a new start, a fresh new start who deserves one but who, by the same token, will guarantee in that process that those who can repay some of their debt should be compelled to do so in a fair, proportionate way in which we have fashioned the mechanism for doing just that.

So when we bring this massive bankruptcy reform bill to the end game, we are not shoving it into some omnibus bill hoping that nobody sees it. No, we are bringing it to the floor after I would say one of the most thorough continuing debates that any subject has received for many, many years. I know, because I and my staff have been involved in it from the very beginning, through many, many hearings, hundreds of documents, many private discussions and consultations with bankruptcy experts and with credit institutions and with bankrupts themselves, people who have filed for bankruptcy, women who are left in a home without a husband, without a provider, providers, people who deal in State government with the complex problems of support and support collection. You name it, we have heard from that kind of individual in our regular hearing process. That is what is so bountiful in the outcome of the bankruptcy reform movement, that indeed it is the product of every coloration in our society of people who have to do business with each other in order for this economy to continue to work as well as it has.

By the way, in almost every set of remarks that I make back in my district about bankruptcy reform, I pride myself in reasserting that within the hearing process, it was not just a cameo appearance by people where we knew what their testimony was going to be and we ho-hummed our way through those hearings, I have to maintain and I will to my dying day that the final product of bankruptcy reform reflected actual testimony recommendations and clarifications made by the witnesses from out there in the world of commerce and in the world of the bankruptcy courts themselves. So it was not as if we were prompted by a pre-prepared agenda with cooked legislation that we were just going through the motions in these hearings but, rather, an intense investigation into the entire process. We learned from it.

I remember after the first hearing that someone testified on behalf of, I think, women, or single mothers or people who were devoid of support in their own household, but I was so struck by it that I instructed my staff to make sure that the next time there will be language in our next version of the bankruptcy reform that will cure the problem brought to us by that witness. As I say, this was legislative magic at its best, witnesses testifying, developing solutions to problems, and we who were charged with the responsibility of packaging all that in a reform measure succeeded in doing so.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

EDUCATION

Mr. SCHAFFER. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I want to talk about education. Tonight there will be a debate between the two Presidential candidates and we of course all across the country are looking forward to that. Education is likely to be one of the issues raised. I say this because, politics being as it is, candidates tend to look to opinion polls to help identify those issues that are the most important to the people in the country. When they are inclined to do that in America today, they will find that education is the number one issue on the minds of most Americans. My point tonight is twofold, one, I want to talk about some of the work we have done here in the United States Congress as a Republican majority and as Republicans across the country to try to elevate the importance and prominence of education and to push forward a plan that is designed to improve the quality of education in America, and secondly I want to talk about what has been done over the last 8 years, because, without a doubt, the Clinton-Gore regime that has held the White House for the last 8 years has defined itself as an administration that has missed many opportunities and has failed to lead with respect to education.

I will start out by quoting the Vice President. He published a report called Report of the National Performance Review. It was published in 1993. In that report back in 1993, here is what the Vice President said, and I quote:

> The Department of Education has suffered from mistrust and management neglect almost from the beginning. To overcome this legacy and to lead the way in national education reform, the Department of Education must refashion and revitalize its programs, management and systems.

My point being, Mr. Speaker, is that going all the way back to 1993, the Vice President of the United States fully understood the nature of the U.S. Department of Education, an agency that hemorrhages cash on virtually a day-by-day basis. This is an agency that we look to to try to get dollars to the classroom, to utilize the education expenditures of the American people in a way that will help children learn but, to our disappointment and even to the disappointment of the Vice President and others over at the White House, this Department of Education has failed in its noble mission.

One does not have to look too far to find examples of that. Here is the reality of what has occurred since 1993. Just a few month ago, the General Accounting Office in reporting to the Committee on Education and Workforce of the House said the following, and I quote again:

> The Department is riddled with continued weaknesses in information systems controls which increase the risk of unauthorized access or disruption in services and make Education's sensitive grant and loan data vulnerable to inadvertent or deliberate misuse, fraudulent use, improper disclosure or destruction which could occur without being detected.

That was in testimony to the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations going back to March of this year.

We have seen similar other kinds of characterizations of the Department of Education as we in our efforts to try and be frugal with the taxpayers' money have asked hard questions about where does the money go. It is frustrating as a parent myself of five children, three of them in public schools today, to learn that of every dollar that we spend on education through our Federal budget, only about 60 percent of those dollars is actually spent in the classroom. In other words, there is upwards of 40 percent, and that is probably a generous estimate, that is wasted, squandered, lost, lost through fraud, lost through abuse, sometimes lost through crime. I will go through some of those examples here today because it underscores our Republican effort around the country to try to get dollars to the classroom.

There is a difference of opinion here in Washington and a difference of opinion that will be expressed later on tonight by the two candidates for President of the United States.

Democrats have always been in favor of spending more money. Whether it comes to the Department of Education or any agency, spend and spend and spend has been their philosophy. While we are not necessarily always opposed to spending if it is for a good and just cause, our Republican philosophy is very different. It is one that says spend wisely, be accountable for how money is allocated and budgeted and spent. So we are the party, the Republican Party, that asks the tough questions about where do these dollars go? How is the money allocated? Has it actually reached children in classrooms? Has it been effective? As parents we are just kind of normal people who ask these questions as most normal people would when they come to Washington, D.C. We work hard as all taxpayers do to earn various livings and come from various professional and employment backgrounds. We pay taxes to the Federal Government. We do not like paying taxes, but we are willing to do that when it is right and when the cause is just; but we expect people here in Washington will follow the money and make sure that when we say we are going to spend a dollar on education we actually do it.

It was not until the Republican Party took the majority of the Congress that these difficult questions were even asked in the first place. Here is what we found out: the U.S. Department of Education in 1998 could not even audit its books. We set up a very rigorous evaluation process. We required every Federal agency to come up with a new standard of accountability to hire outside auditors to come in and examine their books, give an outside professional unbiased opinion of the finances of various Federal agencies, and the U.S. Department of Education came to us in the 1998 audit and the independent auditors actually said the books were so bad over there, so poorly managed, that they could not even audit the books, let alone tell us how the dollars were spent.

In 1999, Mr. Speaker, things did not get much better. The Department was able to finally balance its books but it, of course, failed that audit. So we find these reports coming back to us from independent auditors, from government auditors, painting a very bleak picture when it comes to the accountability of the funds that are spent down the street at the United States Department of Education.

Now we still want to have a powerful role and an important role in improving schools across the country, but we point these examples out to show that there really are two different approaches to how we improve schools in America. There is the Democrat approach, the Al Gore approach, that says just spend the money, never ask the tough questions, never mind whether the dollars really get in the classrooms; whether these dollars spent really improve student performance; whether they really improve our standing among international peers. Just spend the money and that is the right thing to do because, after all, we care about education, we care about kids; and if we just spend the money, things will sort of correct themselves.

That is in stark contrast to what we will hear the governor of Texas speak about tonight and what Republicans stand for and have stood for here in Washington, which again says there is money to be spent; and we believe that the Federal Government has some role to play in trying to help local administrators, school board members, superintendents, and teachers teach children; but we really are about accountability. We want to make sure that we squeeze every ounce of efficiency out of every dollar that is spent, and we start by being honest about what is wasted, what has been abused, where fraud, where theft has occurred over in the Department, and we raise those important issues, not to embarrass anyone. We do want to cause a certain amount of alarm, I suppose, because these issues need to be addressed; they need to be fixed.

That ultimately is our goal to fix these problems and create a Department of Education that actually is on the mark; that actually helps children learn; that really gets dollars to the classroom and creates, through a system of assistance with the various 50 States, a support system that allows those States to define their educational priorities and to ultimately meet them and help children, because that is what really matters in the end.

It does not matter how much money we spend. It does not matter how many new programs we create. What matters more than anything else is results and what we can do here in Washington that helps children learn.

Now we have a great record where this is concerned as a Republican majority. We have passed legislation over the last few years that is intended and designed to shrink the size of the U.S. Department of Education, to consolidate programs. There are some 760 education programs spread out throughout several different agencies. We want to consolidate those programs.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFFER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I noticed that at the exact moment when the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SCHAFFER) was talking about the fact that the Federal dollars that are being spent could be better spent at the local level, in walked the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING), who for years has been determined to make certain that we know that the best way to spend those dollars is at the local school board level.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for those comments.

Mr. Speaker, I was waiting for the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) to grab a microphone there so I could recognize him and yield some time to him as well, because it has been the Republican leadership on the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, under the direction of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING), and also the efforts being led by Republican governors throughout the country, that have shown a new way to reach out to children and to manage government programs in a way that helps kids far better than what we have seen come out of the White House over the last 8 years.

We have focused on some key principles that I know the chairman cares deeply about, and principles that he has made the basis for the work that we have done and undertaken in the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, and those principles are all about recognizing the strengths of local communities, of States, of recognizing the autonomy of parents to play the primary role in helping drive the education of a child and local communities. And ultimately this message of accountability is something that we talk about every day.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFFER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I want to echo some of the things that he has already said. For the first 20 years in the Congress of the United States all I ever heard was that if we just had another 100 programs from the Federal level, one-size-fits-all, if we just had a few more billion dollars, if we just could participate more from the Federal level, that somehow or another we would close the achievement gap with the disadvantaged youngsters because that is our major role from the Federal level.

Well, obviously it did not work, and every study showed that it did not work. One-size-fits-all from Washington does not work. So we wasted a lot of money, but worse than that a lot of time because what happened is we cheated children, pre-school children particularly in Head Start, for the first 10 years because nobody ever talked about quality. The only thing we talked about was if we could just cover more children that somehow or another that would work. What they forgot was that it was supposed to be a reading readiness program and a school readiness program; but what it turned out to be was, as a matter of fact, a poverty jobs program and a baby-sitting program.

We finally got it turned around.

So when we became the majority, we said, gee, we have to change. The taxpayer is not getting very much for the money but, more importantly, the children who are to benefit from all of these wonderful programs, one-size-fits-all from Washington, were not getting any help. So the achievement gap, of course, never closed.

We said we are going to have, first of all, seven key principles that Republicans are going to push every time we talk about any legislation from Washington, D.C. Number one, if it is not a quality program, then do not bother with the program. Get rid of the program. We need to have better teaching. We need to have local control. We need to have accountability. We need to make sure that we get the dollars to the classroom, where they can really help the children. We need to make sure that we return to basic academics and parent involvement but not only parent involvement, parent responsibility. The reason public charter schools work, one of the major reasons, is because of the parent responsibility. They are responsible to enforce the dress code. They are responsible to enforce the homework code. They are responsible to get the children to school and get them home from school. They assume that responsibility. Now what does that do? That attracts the best teachers. That attracts the best administrators, the best supervisors, because they want to teach. They want to be in an environment where they can teach. So one of the very first things we talked about, even before we became the majority, was we need to give flexibility to the local school districts to design these programs rather than say here is one-size-fits-all, take it or like it, even though you do not benefit from it.

So we got a token before we became the majority. We said here we will give you six States for flexibility and they said we will give you 12 now the next time. Two of those States that did very, very well with the flexibility they got were Maryland and, above all, Texas. Governor Bush reached across the aisle, working with a Democrat majority in the House and the Democrat majority in the Senate, and said we have to do something about improving education for all children in this State. So they got about 4,000 waivers from the Federal Government. They could commingle money. They could make programs work. They could design them the way they believed they will benefit their children. The result is that their Black and Hispanic students are achieving above the overall average of all of their students. Now, that is giving you flexibility with accountability, and accountability is the big word.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) has been on the front line in the negotiations and in the real fight that has taken place here in Washington between the Republican-oriented solutions with respect to education and the Democrat-oriented approaches to education that come out of the White House. This key philosophy of flexibility is so important. There are many of our colleagues and many people around the country who think these are just nebulous terms and some kind of nebulous debate on the point of flexibility; but those of us who are in the well on a day-to-day basis fighting over the concept of flexibility see the real difference that takes place based on who the leadership is down at the White House.

So I am wondering if the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) would perhaps take a little more time and maybe describe for our colleagues what takes place at some of these meetings when there is a Republican philosophy of flexibility sitting across the table from the Democrat philosophy as proposed by AL GORE of a centralized, Washington-knows-best attitude. It is a real clash but one that I believe we need to win on the side of flexibility. I think it is critical and important for our children, and I was hoping the gentleman would elaborate a little further on that point.

Mr. GOODLING. I think that it has been a slow learning process for the minority, because I think they are at the point now where they realize these programs did not work. Well intended, no question well intended, but they now begin to realize, and we hear the word flexibility mentioned now on the other side of the aisle. We hear different things mentioned that we never would have heard for years because the programs did not work. So now they are saying, hey, it looks like Texas, for instance, was very, very successful with that flexibility.

What does it mean to a State? Well, first of all, before we allowed any kind of flexibility, the only purpose for the Federal auditor to go out into that school district was to see whether the money was spent on the right student.

They were not sent out to see whether the students were benefiting from what is being spent. They were just sent out to see, is the money going to the right children?

Obviously, it was going to the right children, but it was not helping those children. So this is the battle we go through every time, the philosophical battle of another Federal program, one-size-fits-all from Washington, D.C. will solve these problems; another $1 billion will solve these problems. It has not worked.

So we have now taken a different approach. As I indicated, we have these seven key principles, but beyond those seven key principles, of course, is what is happening with the flexibility that is going back.

Governors, local school boards, are so far ahead of us on the Federal level when it comes to reforming schools. They are on the front line all the time. They understand it. So that is why 50 Governors said, Hey, 12 States have flexibility; how about all 50 States? When we get 50 Governors on our side of the aisle say, hey, it is working, we all want it, and obviously the President then had to agree. We sent him legislation and he signed it.

The important thing is that as we brought the legislation then to the floor, every piece of legislation was based on these seven key principles. So when we did the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, we said, let us talk about the seven principles here when we redesign that program, and we did it.

IDEA full funding, again, in those first 20 years I kept saying over and over again, if we really want to help the local school district, I will say the best way we can do that is to step up to the plate with the 40 percent that we coaxed them into this program, guaranteeing them 25 years ago. When we became the majority, we were only up to 6 percent. We are now up to about 15 percent.

What that means is every low-income school district has to take their local funds to support the IDEA mandates from Washington, D.C., which means they must take it away from every other program. That is why I would tell them, if we want to reduce class size, send them the money. They will reduce class size. If we want them to repair a building, send the IDEA money, they will repair buildings.

But no, we need a new program from Washington. That is what we have heard the last couple of years, with our battle over 1,200,000 teachers; our battles over school construction.

We passed the Reading Excellence Act, again saying, on the local level, they know how to do that. But above that we say, use the scientific knowledge that we have on how to teach reading. Do not get into the fad businesses that so many districts unfortunately fell into.

Our charter school expansion, in my estimation, probably the only hope for many center city children is the charter school program, again because the parents are very much involved. The parents are demanding excellence from their children, excellence from their schools, and the best teachers went there. It may be their only hope of getting a piece of the American dream.

As I mentioned, Head Start, how did it take us so long when every study told us we were failing? How did it take us so long to really do something to make it an effective preschool program?

Promulgating the new Federal tests, we were going to spend $100 hundred million. First of all, the Department of Education was going to design the tests. That would be the last group that I would want to design some tests. But unless we know what the new higher standards are, unless we prepared the teacher to teach the new higher standard, unless we then test the teacher to say they are ready to teach the new higher standard, why would we spend $100 hundred million to design some national test to tell 50 percent of the children one more time they are not doing very well?

The Dollars to the Classroom Act, again, that is where the money counts, down where that teacher is, down where that building principal is. The Vocational Technical Education Act, again the whole thing was based on those seven principles. The Teacher Empowerment Act, we say if they are not getting the proper in-service program, they could take a voucher and get their own in-service program. They know where they can get the best in-service program.

The Students Results Act, again, all we have to do out there in the State and in the local district is show that all of the students improve academically, and then they have the freedom to do what they believe is necessary to bring that about.

We are moving in the right direction. We have to keep moving in that direction. We cannot stop now, or what we will get back to again is, okay, if we just have a new 100 programs that will do the job; if we just spend another $100 billion, that certainly will do the job. Yet, we will repeat the same failures over and over again because Washington does not have the answers. The local area has the answers.

So I thank the gentleman for taking this hour this evening to again remind the American people what our approach is and why it is different, and why it is taking hold and why it is working, and why the Governor was successful in Texas after we gave them the opportunity for the flexibility.

So I appreciate the gentleman's taking this opportunity to remind the American people once again the direction we are trying to move this whole education issue in.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for joining me here on the floor.

I want to go back to the top of the chart here in a moment, but there really is a remarkable difference between the two individuals who the American people will watch later on tonight, and will choose among in deciding who our next president will be in just a few weeks.

The Texas example is almost miraculous on how far students improved in academic achievement in the State of Texas under Governor Bush's leadership versus what we have seen here in Washington for the last 8 years of a White House where President Clinton and Vice President GORE have fully understood, and they even wrote books about the poor management in the Department and the reality that there was not enough flexibility, where we are not getting enough dollars to the classroom. Yet, they have done nothing.

This is an administration that for 8 years has squandered their opportunity to help improve schools, and to look to the real examples and the real bright spots around the country where Republican Governors like George Bush have led the way in academic success and achievement for students.

This Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act is I think one of the most important things we can focus on here in Washington. Just by way of background for our colleagues and those who are monitoring tonight's proceedings here on the floor, the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act was really initiated by the Supreme Court under civil rights legislation.

Congress took the ball from there, but it was the Supreme Court that drove the legislation underlying the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act, thereby making it one of the few really legitimate roles that the Federal government plays in reaching out to some of the neediest children and trying to equalize the playing field so those children can have an opportunity to learn.

What Congress has done over the years is created this huge program which has become a mandate on local States. In other words, the Federal government created the rules, and we have told 50 States they must implement this IDEA program the way the Federal government says they will.

In exchange for that, the Federal government initially promised to pay 40 percent of the expenses associated with implementing that mandate. Many people around the country really rely and children with disabilities really rely on this program and this mandate, and they are counting not only on the program to be implemented accurately and effectively, but they are also counting on the program to be funded.

So we have actually had to fight with the White House, Republicans had to fight with the White House, to try to get us to a point where we are increasing appropriations for the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act. We do not get a lot of help from AL GORE and President Clinton down there at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Mr. GOODLING. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, two budgets submitted by the White House in a row had a decrease in funding for special education, 2 years in a row.

Mr. SCHAFFER. It just defies logic, but again it points out my point that these folks have had 8 years to try to help, to try to help local schools. They have really blown the opportunity. Even when they have Republicans, and we are conservatives and we like to spend less when we can, but here is a program where we believe we ought to pay for what the government promised, and we have no assistance from the White House. AL GORE, Bill Clinton, had other things they wanted to spend money on, not children with disabilities in education.

It is important not only for those children, but it is important because even when Congress does not fund the program to the extent that it promised, the responsibility for carrying out the program still exists.

Every principal of every school in this country has to continue to unfold and provide these services under the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act, just as the law says, and it does not matter whether we provide the money.

That is the real hardship, because what a principal has to do is steal funds from other places in his or her budget. They have to take money from the pay raises for teachers. They have to take money from the staffing budget, providing perhaps more teachers for classrooms. They might have to take the money from the transportation budget, or maybe the technology budget.

Mr. GOODLING. The maintenance.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Maybe fixing the leaky roof is something that has to wait a couple of years because the Vice President has not been willing to help us in our effort to fully fund IDEA.

That I think is probably the most graphic and dramatic statement of how this philosophy of ours towards flexibility has very real implications on every single classroom in America. That is precisely what we heard as we have traveled around the country.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania has helped today unveil his Crossroads 2000 Report, called ''Education at a Crossroads.'' This is really a report that one of the gentleman's subcommittees, the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, had put together as a result of traveling all across America visiting with education professionals, students, parents, teachers, and all the rest.

What they tell us more often than not is this. They tell us, and we can read it right in the report, and for our colleagues, I would urge them to get hold of the Committee on Education and the Workforce for a copy of this report, or my office or the chairman's office, and we will make the report available to anyone who wants it.

But what we are told as we travel around the country is this: Do not create new programs. In fact, do not spend a dime on creating more government, more Department of Education bureaucracy. Do the basics first: Fully fund the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act, and that frees up local schools to pay for the priorities that are truly important in various locations, because the priorities in New York are not the same as they are in Pennsylvania or as they are in Colorado or California. They vary from State to State.

Mr. GOODLING. New York City would get an extra $190 million if we were fully funding the 40 percent, and Los Angeles would get another $90 million.

When we talk about class size reduction, when we talk about school maintenance, think what they could do with that kind of money if they did not have to spend it on our mandate.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Perhaps we can talk about that for a moment, because we have been to New York, to California, and around the country. Even in a big city like Los Angeles, $90 million is not pocket change. That is real money.

Mr. GOODLING. Over 25 years, $90 million a year for 25 years, that sounds like big money to me.

Mr. SCHAFFER. We have heard through the course of the presidential campaign that Congress and that the Federal government should do something other than fully fund the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act.

We have heard the Vice President talk about his goals for trying to manage local schools from here in Washington. Our answer is very different. Ours says, let us fully fund the mandates that are there first.

Let us give Los Angeles, for example, the $90 million a year to spend on whatever they want. If they want to fix the roof, that would be their prerogative. If they want to buy new computers, they could do that. California just had a class size reduction program that the voters voted for.

It makes no sense for the Vice President, in the case of California, to now say, no, I am going to invent a new program for class size reduction, and the fact that you have already accomplished this goal is irrelevant. We are going to give you more money to do things you do not need.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, in that area, of course, last year when I was negotiating this 100,000 teacher business, at the end of the year I made it very, very clear, the gentleman mentioned that the administration, the President and the Vice President have had a great opportunity in the 8 years.

I pleaded with the President, and I said, he can talk about class size reduction, but if he does not have a quality teacher to put in that new classroom, I will guarantee it does not matter whether the teacher-to-pupil ratio is 12 to 1, 20 to 1, 30 to 1, it is not going to make a difference.

Of course, what was the first 33 percent we allowed him to have? More than 30 percent of those had no qualifications whatsoever.

Mr. SCHAFFER. It comes right back to the rallying cry that the gentleman has espoused over and over again, focus on quality, not quantity. We see that not only with this effort toward hiring more employees in schools, but we hear it when it comes to even school construction, that it is just that the White House is intent on just spending the money, and really has no plans to focus on the quality. They never have. In the 8 years they have held the White House, their own reports verify they have never ever focused on quality.

Mr. GOODLING. When we were doing that negotiating last year, it was a perfect time. The New York News newspaper had total front page coverage which said, Parents, do you recognize in New York City, 50 percent of your teachers are not qualified? And I would hold that up every time they would talk, and remind them again, if we cannot put a quality teacher in the classroom, we are not going to help the child.

Mr. SCHAFFER. I am wondering if the gentleman would also be able to tell us about his experiences with the vast numbers of education leaders we have met with from throughout the country who have testified before the Committee on Education and the Workforce, reiterated the kinds of things we have heard in the Crossroads Report that fully funding the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act really represents the ultimate in flexibility. We hear this routinely. I know the gentleman has, as well.

I am wondering if the gentleman could share some of his experiences.

I might also point out, Mr. Speaker, as many of our colleagues know, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) prior to coming to Congress was a school superintendent and one who understands full well how fully funding Federal mandates frees up local leaders to focus on the real priorities, which is ultimately helping kids far better than anybody here in Washington can do.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, in IDEA, as we indicated, for instance, they were promised 40 percent of the average expenditure for students all over this country. Now, 2 years ago, that average expenditure per pupil was about $6300. If they were getting their 40 percent, we can see they would be getting $2500, $2600 for each child. Instead, when we started, they were getting about $400. We are now up to about $600 or $700. We will get to about $800. That is a long way from that $2600 that we promised.

If they have that extra money, as I indicated before, they then can take care of pupil-teacher ratios. Again, this is why we negotiated for 100,000 teachers. If we need money to improve the teachers that we presently have, use it for that purpose. That is very, very important. We need to make sure they have the best quality programs they can have to become better teachers, and that is so important.

Mr. SCHAFFER. The White House has also fought us on this notion of expanding Ed-Flex to all of the 50 States. There were 12 States that piloted this flexibility act where some achieved great things.

The State of Texas as we mentioned as raised dramatically achievement for minority students, for black students and Hispanic students. In fact, the rate of improvement for school children in those categories was far higher than anywhere else around the country. And that is dramatic testimony to the power of flexibility and choice by governors.

We wanted to expand that same kind of liberty to all 50 States. We have received opposition from the White House from the moment we started talking about flexibility for all.

Mr. Speaker, I am wondering if the gentleman might spend a little bit of time talking about that experience.

Mr. GOODLING. No question about. The minority and the former majority and the President were very much opposed to flexibility. As I indicated, when it became that successful for those who undertook that opportunity or took advantage of that opportunity, the President then, of course, got all sorts of heat from 50 governors, and then we were able to move that.

What we also said from our side is not that we even want to do that, but we want to also give them the Student Results Act so they have no trouble commingling money to make programs work. When we have a thousand programs, in this case, 700 and some programs, the amount of money each program gets is so small that we cannot do anything worthwhile with it, but if we try to commingle any of it, as I said earlier, we are in trouble with the auditors.

So we say in the Straight As, we can commingle those dollars, all you have to do is prove to us that you can make sure every child improves academically.

Now, I have been told by some States, well, we have enough flexibility. We know what they are saying. They are basically saying we are just happy to take your money. You do not ask us for anything in return. We just take your money, and we do the same thing over and over again.

We do not have a new idea or a creative idea in our heads, so we will just go on taking the money from the taxpayers, from the Federal Government, because we do not require quality. We do not require anything.

It is catching on, because as I said, Texas is a great success story. Maryland has done well. So my hope is that as I retire, we do not forget what the gentleman said what he hears in his sleep every night, quality not quantity, results not process.

Let us get them to stop spending hours and hours and hours of paperwork. In IDEA alone, we use teacher after teacher after teacher in IDEA, because they spend so much time on paperwork that they cannot do what they are trained to do, which is to teach children, which is what they want to do.

Mr. SCHAFFER. That is the real hardship, I might add, that we see with all of these Federal programs is the paperwork, the red tape, the rules that go along with what amounts to pretty small amount of funds.

The gentleman is right that with so many Federal programs, we spend a lot of money in Washington, about $40 billion a year just on the program costs for the U.S. Department of Education, and that is not even mentioning the other $80 billion that is managed through student loans by the U.S. Department.

We just need to focus on the $40 billion that we budgeted and allocated towards education, each dollar is sent out from Washington to various States and school districts with all kinds of requirements attached to it, much of which has nothing to do with the quality of education. Some governors frankly do not understand that.

This is an easy process for some of them. As the gentleman said, they just get the money from Washington, and they turn around and spend it, and it appears to their constituents that they are accomplishing something with nothing.

Again, where the real hardship is realized is at the street level, at the schoolroom level, the classroom level, where these principals, administrators, secretaries, teachers have to deal with these monotonous rules and these monotonous regulations.

Only about 6 percent to 7 percent, maybe sometimes 8 percent of a classroom budget is Federal funds. The rest comes from your State or it comes from local property taxes. So a tiny portion is all we are talking about when we are talking the amount of dollars that goes into a classroom.

The tragedy is for the 6 percent, 7 percent or 8 percent of Federal funds that makes it into a classroom, probably 50 percent to 60 percent of the paperwork requirements are attached to that small amount of Federal dollars. That is what we want to eliminate.

We want to allow flexibility so that we can actually increase the power of the money that is already spent. We do not need to really spend more, if we just spend it more wisely. We can be more effective.

Mr. GOODLING. When we were negotiating the 100,000 teachers last year, the first thing the administration said is we have to take about 10 percent off the top, I think they wanted 15 percent, to keep on the Federal level. I said, wait a minute, you are not hiring the teachers. The local school board is hiring the teachers. Then they called back and said we certainly need 10 percent for the States off the top.

I said, wait a minute. The State is not hiring the teachers. The local school districts are hiring the teachers; that is where the money should go. Of course, we won that argument because it makes sense.

Mr. SCHAFFER. That is the educational empire which the gentleman just described, which is so hard to understand. There is such momentum, and all of these people that are employed, and not only at the U.S. Department of Education, but the State Departments of Education, they make careers out of this paperwork and these rules. Somebody reads all of this stuff.

Somebody actually opens up the mail when the superintendent fills out the paperwork and sends it to Washington. There is a person here in Washington whose job it is to open up all of these forms and compile them and collate them and make reports on them.

When we start talking about getting rid of the rules and regulations, consolidating programs and increasing flexibility, our goal is to help children. Unfortunately, some people in Washington feel threatened by our objective to help kids.

There is a huge bureaucratic empire that is sustained through all of the monotony, and that is the objective of the Vice President and President. They have worked tirelessly to preserve this large bureaucracy to preserve all of these rules, to preserve these regulations, and make decisions here in Washington D.C.

Our message, our Republican message, is very different, one that the Governor of Texas tonight and every time he speaks articulates for us so well; that is, we should not be trusting of the bureaucrats in Washington. We should be trusting of the teachers who actually know the name of the children.

We should be trusting of the principals who knows the name of the teachers. We should be trusting of the superintendents who can name all of the principals and many of the players in a school district. We should also be trusting the school board members who make the policy decisions who are elected by local communities, by our friends and our neighbors.

The farther away we get from the classroom in terms of decision-making, accountability, the poorer the decisions are made, and the greater the opportunity for mismanagement. My goodness, the President and the President's own agencies have documented this repeatedly, they have written books on the matter of waste, fraud and abuse in their own agency, which are replete with examples and there are real opportunities to fix these problems and get the money to the classroom.

After 8 years, the Vice President has done nothing. He has not lifted a finger to help us in our efforts to streamline this bureaucracy and get the money, get the flexibility, get the decision-making to the people who deserve it.

Mr. GOODLING. I am reminded each time that we were negotiating that both the President and the Secretaries were governors. Think in terms of being a governor, rather than being a Washington bureaucrat, and you will be offering far better solutions to problems, than being a bureaucrat in Washington, D.C.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Of course, Governor Bush understands the perspective of being a governor. He has worked in partnership, not always Republicans; this has not been solely a Republican success, although, it is a Republican philosophy. He has had to work with Democrats here in Congress as well, Democrats of the Texas delegation, Democrats in the Texas State House and the State Senate.

He understands working across the aisle, and that is a real sign of leadership when somebody can, as Governor Bush has done, raise the priority of children over and above everything else, over and above the bureaucracy, over and above the politics and state as a public goal, the number 1 objective for education is to raise the achievement of all children. We are going to start with the ones who are suffering the most.

We have seen the Governor of Texas accomplish that in his State. It has just been remarkable how that kind of leadership has brought all of us together toward that goal. What I am afraid of is that many Americans may not realize the conflict in vision between these two men running for President of the United States.

We have the Bush model from the perspective of a governor that we support that says children should be the number 1 objective of our education reform efforts; that is in stark contrast to the 8-year record of the Vice President, which has been to preserve bureaucracy, to preserve waste, fraud, abuse and mismanagement, to write books on how bad it is, and spend 8 years doing nothing about it. That is a huge conflict in vision and an important choice that I think we all need to think about very seriously.

After this election, the gentleman and I and all of our colleagues here in Washington are going to have to deal with the attitude of the White House.

Mr. Speaker, I am hoping the Bush attitude of putting children first is something that we all will be celebrating and rallying around. I know many people around the country will learn more about that tonight.

I am fearful that not enough share our enthusiasm for putting children ahead of bureaucracy and may be persuaded by this simple, unimaginable message that we hear coming out of the White House and from the Vice President that just says spend more, spend more, spend more. There is nothing else to say, just spend more.

Mr. GOODLING. Again, there is no question that we are moving in the right direction as a new majority, because we are putting children first. Everybody should be thinking about putting children first. They are our future. The tragedy is that 50 percent of our children today are not going to be ready to get a piece of the American dream in the 21st Century, the high-tech century. What a tragedy.

We are going to vote again to bring another 200,000 people from other countries to do our high-tech jobs, our $40,000, $50,000, $60,000 a year jobs because we do not have our own ready to take those jobs.

We cannot survive as a great society if we continue to do that. We must tackle the problem.

Mr. SCHAFFER. The contrast again could not be clearer. The Texas record is one of improving test scores. This is a graph of the Texas 4th graders when it comes to reading skills. Back in 1994, when Governor Bush took over the governorship in Texas, only 75 percent of Texas 4th graders could read at grade level, and that has increased to almost 90 percent in 1999.

That is a remarkable improvement. This is a huge contrast to what has been created by the Clinton-Gore administration. If we take, for example, the third international math study, math-science study comparison, which ranked American students Nationwide against their peers with 21 other industrial countries, we come in 19th.

This is something we have known about for 8 years that the Clinton and Gore regime have occupied the White House, and our test scores have not improved. They have gotten worse. So I guess the question that Americans need to decide in the next few days is whether we want to see the Texas style rates of improvement of dramatic increases in academic performance or whether we want to see the Clinton-Gore kinds of trends, which is declining performance when compared to international peers in the case of math and science.

I love Colorado. It is a great State. But nobody from Colorado is running for President of the United States. Of the two models, the bad Washington, D.C. model versus the good Texas model, I will choose the Texas model every time. I prefer that for my kids. I know most of my friends and neighborhoods around my district would far prefer to see improving test scores for their children, not declining test course. All of this is critically important to maintaining strength and solvency of our Republic.

It is going to be an interesting evening tonight as that debate gets under way in just a minute. I am really hopeful that Americans will remember the difference in opportunity, the opportunity that the White House has had, that AL GORE has had as Vice President of the United States, which he has squandered, he has done nothing about some of the problems that he has known to exist through the Department of Education, versus dramatic improvements that real leadership in Texas have achieved for real children with real parents in real communities in a State that has enjoyed great leadership. Now, that kind of leadership is something that we can have for the whole country.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, the Governor Bush model, of course, is the model I have tried to follow for 26 years, and that is to put people before politics but put children before politics. That is what he has done in Texas. That is why we have seen the kind of improvement that we see in Texas. Those children most in need in Texas are receiving the benefits that all of these programs that were created in Washington wanted to see happen, but it did not happen. It has happened with his leadership and leading a Democrat House and a Democrat Senate.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity to be recognized tonight.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleman from Colorado for allowing me the opportunity to express my thoughts on the education reform debate that is sure to consume much of our time in the remaining days of the 106th Congress. For all the sound and fury generated by the argument over education, the truth is that the differences between the congressional leadership and the administration are not significant; both wish to strengthen the unconstitutional system of centralized education. I trust I need not go into the flaws with President Clinton's command-and-control approach to education. However, this Congress has failed to present a true, constitutional alternative to President Clinton's proposal to further nationalize education.

It is becoming increasingly clear that the experiment in centralized control of education has failed, and that the best means of improving education is to put parents back in charge. According to a recent Manhattan Institute study of the effects of state policies promoting parental control over education, a minimal increase in parental control boosts students' average SAT verbal score by 21 points and students' SAT math score by 22 points! The Manhattan Institute study also found that increasing parental control of education is the best way to improve student performance on the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) tests. Clearly, the drafters of the Constitution knew what they were doing when they forbade the Federal Government from meddling in education.

American children deserve nothing less than the best educational opportunities, not warmed-over versions of the disastrous educational policies of the past. That is why I introduced H.R. 935, the Family Education Freedom Act. This bill would give parents an inflation-adjusted $3,000 per annum tax credit, per child for educational expenses. The credit applies to those in public, private, parochial, or home schooling.

This bill creates the largest tax credit for K–12 education in the history of our great Republic and it returns the fundamental principle of a truly free economy to America's education system: what the great economist Ludwig von Mises called ''consumer sovereignty.'' Consumer sovereignty simply means consumers decide who succeeds or fails in the market. Businesses that best satisfy consumer demand will be the most successful. Consumer sovereignty is the means by which the free market maximizes human happiness.

Currently, consumers are less than sovereign in the education ''market.'' Funding decisions are increasingly controlled by the federal government. Because ''he who pays the piper calls the tune,'' public, and even private schools, are paying greater attention to the dictates of federal ''educrats'' while ignoring the wishes of the parents to an ever-greater degree. As such, the lack of consumer sovereignty in education is destroying parental control of education and replacing it with state control. Restoring parental control is the key to improving education.

Of course, I applaud all efforts which move in the right direction such as the Education Savings Accounts legislation (H.R. 7). President Clinton's college tax credits are also good first steps in the right direction. However, Congress must act boldly—we can ill afford to waste another year without a revolutionary change in our policy. I believe my bill sparks this revolution and I am disappointed that the leadership of this Congress chose to ignore this fundamental reform and instead focused on reauthorizing great society programs and promoting the pseudo-federalism of block grants.

One area where this Congress has so far been successful in fighting for a constitutional education policy was in resisting President Clinton's drive for national testing. I do wish to express my support for the provisions banning the development of national testing contained in the Education Appropriations bill, and thank Mr. GOODLING for his leadership in this struggle.

Certain of my colleagues champion proposals to relieve schools of certain mandates so long as states and localities agree to be held ''accountable'' to the federal government for the quality of their schools. I have supported certain of these proposals because they do provide states and localities the option of escaping certain federal mandates.

However, there are a number of both practical and philosophical concerns regarding these proposals. The primary objection to this approach, from a constitutional viewpoint, is embedded in the very mantra of ''accountability'' stressed by the plans' proponents. Talk of accountability begs the question: accountable to whom? Under these type of plans, schools remain accountable to federal bureaucrats and those who develop the state tests upon which a schools' performance is judged. Should the schools not live up to their bureaucratically-determined ''performance goals,'' they will lose their limited freedom from federal mandates. So federal and state bureaucrats will determine if the schools are to be allowed to participate in these programs and bureaucrats will judge whether the states are living up to the standards set in the state's education plan—yet this is supposed to debureaucratize and decentralize education!

Even absent the ''accountability'' provisions spending billions of taxpayer dollars on block grants is a poor way of restoring control over education to local educators and parents. Some members claim that the expenditure levels for not matter, it is the way the money is spent which is important. Contrary to the view of the well-meaning but misguided members who promote block grants, the amount of taxpayer dollars spent on federal education does matter.

First of all, the federal government lacks constitutional authority to redistribute monies between states and taxpayers for the purpose of education, regardless of whether the monies are redistributed through federal programs or through grants. There is no ''block grant exception'' to the principles of federalism embodied in the U.S. Constitution.

Furthermore, the federal government's power to treat state governments as their administrative subordinates stems from an abuse of Congress' taxing-and-spending power. Submitting to federal control is the only way state and local officials can recapture any part of the monies of the federal government has illegitimately taken from a state's citizens. Of course, this is also the only way state officials can tax citizens of other states to support their education programs. It is the rare official who can afford not to bow to federal dictates in exchange for federal funding!

As long as the federal government controls education dollars, states and local schools will obey Federal mandates; the core program is not that federal monies are given with the inevitable strings attached, the real problem is the existence of federal taxation and funding.

Since federal spending is the root of federal control, by increasing federal spending this Congress is laying the groundwork for future Congresses to fasten more and more mandates on the states. Because state and even local officials, not federal bureaucrats, will be carrying out these mandates, this system could complete the transformation of the state governments into mere agents of the federal government.

While it is true that lower levels of intervention are not as bad as micro-management at the federal level, Congress' constitutional and moral responsibility is not to make the federal education bureaucracy ''less bad.'' Rather, we must act now to put parents back in charge of education and thus make American education once again the envy of the world.

Hopefully the next Congress will be more reverent toward their duty to the U.S. Constitution and America's children. The price of Congress's failure to return to the Constitution in the area of education will be paid by the next generation of American children. In short, we cannot afford to continue on the policy read we have been going down. The cost of inaction to our future generations is simply too great.

SEC. 101. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2001 for the conduct of the intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the following elements of the United States Government:

(1) The Central Intelligence Agency.
(2) The Department of Defense.
(3) The Defense Intelligence Agency.
(4) The National Security Agency.
(5) The Department of the Army, the Department of the Navy, and the Department of the Air Force.
(6) The Department of State.
(7) The Department of the Treasury.
(8) The Department of Energy.
(9) The Federal Bureau of Investigation.
(10) The National Reconnaissance Office.
(11) The National Imagery and Mapping Agency.

SEC. 102. CLASSIFIED SCHEDULE OF AUTHORIZATIONS.

(a) SPECIFICATIONS OF AMOUNTS AND PERSONNEL CEILINGS.—The amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 101, and the authorized personnel ceilings as of September 30, 2001, for the conduct of the intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the elements listed in such section, are those specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations prepared to accompany the conference report on the bill H.R. 4392 of the One Hundred Sixth Congress.

(b) AVAILABILITY OF CLASSIFIED SCHEDULE OF AUTHORIZATIONS.—The Schedule of Authorizations shall be made available to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives and to the President. The President shall provide for suitable distribution of the Schedule, or of appropriate portions of the Schedule, within the executive branch.

SEC. 103. PERSONNEL CEILING ADJUSTMENTS.

(a) AUTHORITY FOR ADJUSTMENTS.—With the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, the Director of Central Intelligence may authorize employment of civilian personnel in excess of the number authorized for fiscal year 2001 under section 102 when the Director of Central Intelligence determines that such action is necessary to the performance of important intelligence functions, except that the number of personnel employed in excess of the number authorized under such section may not, for any element of the intelligence community, exceed 2 percent of the number of civilian personnel authorized under such section for such element.

(b) NOTICE TO INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEES.—The Director of Central Intelligence shall promptly notify the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate whenever the Director exercises the authority granted by this section.

SEC. 104. COMMUNITY MANAGEMENT ACCOUNT.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated for the Community Management Account of the Director of Central Intelligence for fiscal year 2001 the sum of $163,231,000. Within such amount, funds identified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations referred to in section 102(a) for the Advanced Research and Development Committee shall remain available until September 30, 2002.

(b) AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL LEVELS.—The elements within the Community Management Account of the Director of Central Intelligence are authorized 313 full-time personnel as of September 30, 2001. Personnel serving in such elements may be permanent employees of the Community Management Account or personnel detailed from other elements of the United States Government.

(c) CLASSIFIED AUTHORIZATIONS.—

(1) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—In addition to amounts authorized to be appropriated for the Community Management Account by subsection (a), there are also authorized to be appropriated for the Community Management Account for fiscal year 2001 such additional amounts as are specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations referred to in section 102(a). Such additional amounts shall remain available until September 30, 2002.

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF PERSONNEL.—In addition to the personnel authorized by subsection (b) for elements of the Community Management Account as of September 30, 2001, there are hereby authorized such additional personnel for such elements as of that date as are specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT.—Except as provided in section 113 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404h), during fiscal year 2001, any officer or employee of the United States or a member of the Armed Forces who is detailed to the staff of the Community Management Account from another element of the United States Government shall be detailed on a reimbursable basis, except that any such officer, employee, or member may be detailed on a nonreimbursable basis for a period of less than 1 year for the performance of temporary functions as required by the Director of Central Intelligence.

(e) NATIONAL DRUG INTELLIGENCE CENTER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated in subsection (a), $34,100,000 shall be available for the National Drug Intelligence Center. Within such amount, funds provided for research, development, test, and evaluation purposes shall remain available until September 30, 2002, and funds provided for procurement purposes shall remain available until September 30, 2003.

(2) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—The Director of Central Intelligence shall transfer to the Attorney General funds available for the National Drug Intelligence Center under paragraph (1). The Attorney General shall utilize funds so transferred for the activities of the National Drug Intelligence Center.

(3) LIMITATION.—Amounts available for the National Drug Intelligence Center may not be used in contravention of the provisions of section 103(d)(1) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403–3(d)(1)).

(4) AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General shall retain full authority over the operations of the National Drug Intelligence Center.

SEC. 105. TRANSFER AUTHORITY OF THE DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE.

(a) LIMITATION ON DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY OF DEPARTMENTS TO OBJECT TO TRANSFERS.—Section 104(d)(2) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403–4(d)(2)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(A)'' after ''(2)'';

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), and (E) as clauses (i), (ii), (iii), (iv), and (v), respectively;

(3) in clause (v), as so redesignated, by striking ''the Secretary or head'' and inserting ''subject to subparagraph (B), the Secretary or head''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the authority to object to a transfer under subparagraph (A)(v) may not be delegated by the Secretary or head of the department involved.

''(ii) With respect to the Department of Defense, the authority to object to such a transfer may be delegated by the Secretary of Defense, but only to the Deputy Secretary of Defense.

''(iii) An objection to a transfer under subparagraph (A)(v) shall have no effect unless submitted to the Director of Central Intelligence in writing.''.

(b) LIMITATION ON DELEGATION OF DUTIES OF DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE.—Section 104(d)(1) of such Act (50 U.S.C. 403–4(d)(1)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(A)'' after ''(1)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(B) The Director may only delegate any duty or authority given the Director under this subsection to the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence for Community Management.''.

TITLE II—CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY RETIREMENT AND DISABILITY SYSTEM

SEC. 201. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability Fund for fiscal year 2001 the sum of $216,000,000.

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Intelligence Community

SEC. 301. INCREASE IN EMPLOYEE COMPENSATION AND BENEFITS AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

Appropriations authorized by this Act for salary, pay, retirement, and other benefits for Federal employees may be increased by such additional or supplemental amounts as may be necessary for increases in such compensation or benefits authorized by law.

SEC. 302. RESTRICTION ON CONDUCT OF INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES.

The authorization of appropriations by this Act shall not be deemed to constitute authority for the conduct of any intelligence activity which is not otherwise authorized by the Constitution or the laws of the United States.

SEC. 303. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS ON INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY CONTRACTING.

It is the sense of the Congress that the Director of Central Intelligence should continue to direct that elements of the intelligence community, whenever compatible with the national security interests of the United States and consistent with operational and security concerns related to the conduct of intelligence activities, and where fiscally sound, should competitively award contracts in a manner that maximizes the procurement of products properly designated as having been made in the United States.

SEC. 304. PROHIBITION ON UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE OF CLASSIFIED INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 37 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 798A as section 798B; and

(2) by inserting after section 798 the following new section 798A:

''§ 798A. Unauthorized disclosure of classified information

''(a) PROHIBITION.—Whoever, being an officer or employee of the United States, a former or retired officer or employee of the United States, any other person with authorized access to classified information, or any other person formerly with authorized access to classified information, knowingly and willfully discloses, or attempts to disclose, any classified information acquired as a result of such person's authorized access to classified information to a person (other than an officer or employee of the United States) who is not authorized access to such classified information, knowing that the person is not authorized access to such classified information, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both.

''(b) CONSTRUCTION OF PROHIBITION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to establish criminal liability for disclosure of classified information in accordance with applicable law to the following:

''(1) Any justice or judge of a court of the United States established pursuant to article III of the Constitution of the United States.

''(2) The Senate or House of Representatives, or any committee or subcommittee thereof, or joint committee thereof, or any Member of Congress.

''(3) A person or persons acting on behalf of a foreign power (including an international organization) if the disclosure—

''(A) is made by an officer or employee of the United States who has been authorized to make the disclosure; and

''(B) is within the scope of such officer's or employee's duties.

''(4) Any other person authorized to receive the classified information.

''(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

''(1) The term 'authorized', in the case of access to classified information, means having authority or permission to have access to the classified information pursuant to the provisions of a statute, Executive order, regulation, or directive of the head of any department or agency who is empowered to classify information, an order of any United States court, or a provision of any Resolution of the Senate or Rule of the House of Representatives which governs release of classified information by such House of Congress.

''(2) The term 'classified information' means information or material properly classified and clearly marked or represented, or that the person knows or has reason to believe has been properly classified by appropriate authorities, pursuant to the provisions of a statute or Executive order, as requiring protection against unauthorized disclosure for reasons of national security.

''(3) The term 'officer or employee of the United States' means the following:

''(A) An officer or employee (as those terms are defined in sections 2104 and 2105 of title 5).

''(B) An officer or enlisted member of the Armed Forces (as those terms are defined in section 101(b) of title 10).''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of that chapter is amended by striking the item relating to section 798A and inserting the following new items:

''798A. Unauthorized disclosure of classified information.

''798B. Temporary extension of section 794.''.

SEC. 305. AUTHORIZATION FOR TRAVEL ON ANY COMMON CARRIER FOR CERTAIN INTELLIGENCE COLLECTION PERSONNEL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 402 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

''TRAVEL ON ANY COMMON CARRIER FOR CERTAIN INTELLIGENCE COLLECTION PERSONNEL

''SEC. 116. (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Director of Central Intelligence may authorize travel on any common carrier when such travel, in the discretion of the Director—

''(1) is consistent with intelligence community mission requirements, or

''(2) is required for cover purposes, operational needs, or other exceptional circumstances necessary for the successful performance of an intelligence community mission.

''(b) AUTHORIZED DELEGATION OF DUTY.—The Director may only delegate the authority granted by this section to the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, or with respect to employees of the Central Intelligence Agency the Director may delegate such authority to the Deputy Director for Operations.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents for the National Security Act of 1947 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 115 the following new item:

''Sec. 116. Travel on any common carrier for certain intelligence collection personnel.''.

SEC. 306. UPDATE OF REPORT ON EFFECTS OF FOREIGN ESPIONAGE ON UNITED STATES TRADE SECRETS.

Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of Central Intelligence shall submit to Congress a report that updates and revises, as necessary, the report prepared by the Director pursuant to section 310 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–120; 113 Stat. 1606).

SEC. 307. POW/MIA ANALYTIC CAPABILITY WITHIN THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 402 et seq.), as amended by section 305(a), is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''POW/MIA ANALYTIC CAPABILITY

''SEC. 117. (a) REQUIREMENT.—(1) The Director of Central Intelligence shall, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, establish and maintain in the intelligence community an analytic capability with responsibility for intelligence in support of the activities of the United States relating to individuals who, after December 31, 1990, are unaccounted for United States personnel.

''(2) The analytic capability maintained under paragraph (1) shall be known as the 'POW/MIA analytic capability of the intelligence community'.

''(b) UNACCOUNTED FOR UNITED STATES PERSONNEL.—In this section, the term 'unaccounted for United States personnel' means the following:

''(1) Any missing person (as that term is defined in section 1513(1) of title 10, United States Code).

''(2) Any United States national who was killed while engaged in activities on behalf of the United States and whose remains have not been repatriated to the United States.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents for the National Security Act of 1947, as amended by section 305(b), is further amended by inserting after the item relating to section 116 the following new item:

''Sec. 117. POW/MIA analytic capability.''.

SEC. 308. APPLICABILITY TO LAWFUL UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES OF FEDERAL LAWS IMPLEMENTING INTERNATIONAL TREATIES AND AGREEMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

''TITLE X—ADDITIONAL MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

''APPLICABILITY TO UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES OF FEDERAL LAWS IMPLEMENTING INTERNATIONAL TREATIES AND AGREEMENTS

''SEC. 1001. (a) IN GENERAL.—No Federal law enacted on or after the date of the enactment of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 that implements a treaty or other international agreement shall be construed as making unlawful an otherwise lawful and authorized intelligence activity of the United States Government or its employees, or any other person to the extent such other person is carrying out such activity on behalf of, and at the direction of, the United States, unless such Federal law specifically addresses such intelligence activity.

''(b) AUTHORIZED INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES.—An intelligence activity shall be treated as authorized for purposes of subsection (a) if the intelligence activity is authorized by an appropriate official of the United States Government, acting within the scope of the official duties of that official and in compliance with Federal law and any applicable Presidential directive.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents for the National Security Act of 1947 is amended by inserting at the end the following new items:

''TITLE X—ADDITIONAL MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

''Sec. 1001. Applicability to United States intelligence activities of Federal laws implementing international treaties and agreements.''.

SEC. 309. LIMITATION ON HANDLING, RETENTION, AND STORAGE OF CERTAIN CLASSIFIED MATERIALS BY THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

(a) CERTIFICATION REGARDING FULL COMPLIANCE WITH REQUIREMENTS.—The Director of Central Intelligence shall certify to the appropriate committees of Congress whether or not each covered element of the Department of State is in full compliance with all applicable directives of the Director of Central Intelligence relating to the handling, retention, or storage of covered classified material.

(b) LIMITATION ON CERTIFICATION.—The Director of Central Intelligence may not certify a covered element of the Department of State as being in full compliance with the directives referred to in subsection (a) if the covered element is currently subject to a waiver of compliance with respect to any such directive.

(c) REPORT ON NONCOMPLIANCE.—Whenever the Director of Central Intelligence determines that a covered element of the Department of State is not in full compliance with any directive referred to in subsection (a), the Director shall promptly notify the appropriate committees of Congress of such determination.

(d) EFFECTS OF CERTIFICATION OF NON-FULL COMPLIANCE.—(1) Subject to subsection (e), effective as of January 1, 2001, a covered element of the Department of State may not retain or store covered classified material unless the Director has certified under subsection (a) as of such date that the covered element is in full compliance with the directives referred to in subsection (a).

(2) If the prohibition in paragraph (1) takes effect in accordance with that paragraph, the prohibition shall remain in effect until the date on which the Director certifies under subsection (a) that the covered element involved is in full compliance with the directives referred to in that subsection.

(e) WAIVER BY DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE.—(1) The Director of Central Intelligence may waive the applicability of the prohibition in subsection (d) to an element of the Department of State otherwise covered by such prohibition if the Director determines that the waiver is in the national security interests of the United States.

(2) The Director shall submit to appropriate committees of Congress a report on each exercise of the waiver authority in paragraph (1).

(3) Each report under paragraph (2) with respect to the exercise of authority under paragraph (1) shall set forth the following:

(A) The covered element of the Department of State addressed by the waiver.

(B) The reasons for the waiver.

(C) The actions that will be taken to bring such element into full compliance with the directives referred to in subsection (a), including a schedule for completion of such actions.

(D) The actions taken by the Director to protect any covered classified material to be handled, retained, or stored by such element pending achievement of full compliance of such element with such directives.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term ''appropriate committees of Congress'' means the following:

(A) The Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate.

(B) The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives.

(2) The term ''covered classified material'' means any material classified at the Sensitive Compartmented Information (SCI) level.

(3) The term ''covered element of the Department of State'' means each element of the Department of State that handles, retains, or stores covered classified material.

(4) The term ''material'' means any data, regardless of physical form or characteristic, including written or printed matter, automated information systems storage media, maps, charts, paintings, drawings, films, photographs, engravings, sketches, working notes, papers, reproductions of any such things by any means or process, and sound, voice, magnetic, or electronic recordings.

(5) The term ''Sensitive Compartmented Information (SCI) level'', in the case of classified material, means a level of classification for information in such material concerning or derived from intelligence sources, methods, or analytical processes that requires such information to be handled within formal access control systems established by the Director of Central Intelligence.

SEC. 310. DESIGNATION OF DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN PLACE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) during the second half of the twentieth century, Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan promoted the importance of architecture and urban planning in the Nation's Capital, particularly with respect to the portion of Pennsylvania Avenue between the White House and the United States Capitol (referred to in this subsection as the ''Avenue'');

(2) Senator Moynihan has stressed the unique significance of the Avenue as conceived by Pierre Charles L'Enfant to be the ''grand axis'' of the Nation's Capital as well as a symbolic representation of the separate yet unified branches of the United States Government;

(3) through his service to the Ad Hoc Committee on Federal Office Space (1961–1962), as a member of the President's Council on Pennsylvania Avenue (1962–1964), and as vice-chairman of the President's Temporary Commission on

Pennsylvania Avenue (1965–1969), and in his various capacities in the executive and legislative branches, Senator Moynihan has consistently and creatively sought to fulfill President Kennedy's recommendation of June 1, 1962, that the Avenue not become a ''solid phalanx of public and private office buildings which close down completely at night and on weekends,'' but that it be ''lively, friendly, and inviting, as well as dignified and impressive'';

(4)(A) Senator Moynihan helped draft a Federal architectural policy, known as the ''Guiding Principles for Federal Architecture,'' that recommends a choice of designs that are ''efficient and economical'' and that provide ''visual testimony to the dignity, enterprise, vigor, and stability'' of the United States Government; and

(B) the Guiding Principles for Federal Architecture further state that the ''development of an official style must be avoided. Design must flow from the architectural profession to the Government, and not vice versa.'';

(5) Senator Moynihan has encouraged—

(A) the construction of new buildings along the Avenue, such as the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center; and

(B) the establishment of an academic institution along the Avenue, namely the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, a living memorial to President Wilson; and

(6) as Senator Moynihan's service in the Senate concludes, it is appropriate to commemorate his legacy of public service and his commitment to thoughtful urban design in the Nation's Capital.

(b) DESIGNATION.—The parcel of land located in the northwest quadrant of Washington, District of Columbia, and described in subsection (c) shall be known and designated as ''Daniel Patrick Moynihan Place''.

(c) BOUNDARIES.—The parcel of land described in this subsection is the portion of Woodrow Wilson Plaza (as designated by Public Law 103–284 (108 Stat. 1448)) that is bounded—

(1) on the west by the eastern facade of the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center;

(2) on the east by the western facade of the Ariel Rios Building;

(3) on the north by the southern edge of the sidewalk abutting Pennsylvania Avenue; and

(4) on the south by the line that extends west to the facade of the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center, from the point where the west facade of the Ariel Rios Building intersects the north end of the west hemicycle of that building.

(d) REFERENCES.—Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the parcel of land described in subsection (c) shall be deemed to be a reference to Daniel Patrick Moynihan Place.

(e) MARKERS.—The Administrator of General Services shall erect appropriate gateways or other markers in Daniel Patrick Moynihan Place so denoting that place.

SEC. 311. NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY VOLUNTARY SEPARATION ACT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title III of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 405 et seq.) is amended by inserting at the beginning the following new section 301:

''NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY VOLUNTARY SEPARATION

''SEC. 301. (a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the 'National Security Agency Voluntary Separation Act'.

''(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

''(1) the term 'Director' means the Director of the National Security Agency; and

''(2) the term 'employee' means an employee of the National Security Agency, serving under an appointment without time limitation, who has been currently employed by the National Security Agency for a continuous period of at least 12 months prior to the effective date of the program established under subsection (c), except that such term does not include—

''(A) a reemployed annuitant under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system for employees of the Government; or

''(B) an employee having a disability on the basis of which such employee is or would be eligible for disability retirement under any of the retirement systems referred to in subparagraph (A).

''(c) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Director, in his sole discretion, may establish a program under which employees may, after October 1, 2000, be eligible for early retirement, offered separation pay to separate from service voluntarily, or both.

''(d) EARLY RETIREMENT.—An employee who—

''(1) is at least 50 years of age and has completed 20 years of service; or

''(2) has at least 25 years of service,

may, pursuant to regulations promulgated under this section, apply and be retired from the National Security Agency and receive benefits in accordance with chapter 83 or 84 of title 5, United States Code, if the employee has not less than 10 years of service with the National Security Agency.

''(e) AMOUNT OF SEPARATION PAY AND TREATMENT FOR OTHER PURPOSES.—

''(1) AMOUNT.—Separation pay shall be paid in a lump sum and shall be equal to the lesser of—

''(A) an amount equal to the amount the employee would be entitled to receive under section 5595(c) of title 5, United States Code, if the employee were entitled to payment under such section; or

''(B) $25,000.

''(2) TREATMENT.—Separation pay shall not—

''(A) be a basis for payment, and shall not be included in the computation, of any other type of Government benefit; and

''(B) be taken into account for the purpose of determining the amount of any severance pay to which an individual may be entitled under section 5595 of title 5, United States Code, based on any other separation.

''(f) REEMPLOYMENT RESTRICTIONS.—An employee who receives separation pay under such program may not be reemployed by the National Security Agency for the 12-month period beginning on the effective date of the employee's separation. An employee who receives separation pay under this section on the basis of a separation occurring on or after the date of the enactment of the Federal Workforce Restructuring Act of 1994 (Public Law 103–236; 108 Stat. 111) and accepts employment with the Government of the United States within 5 years after the date of the separation on which payment of the separation pay is based shall be required to repay the entire amount of the separation pay to the National Security Agency. If the employment is with an Executive agency (as defined by section 105 of title 5, United States Code), the Director of the Office of Personnel Management may, at the request of the head of the agency, waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position. If the employment is with an entity in the legislative branch, the head of the entity or the appointing official may waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position. If the employment is with the judicial branch, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts may waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position.

''(g) BAR ON CERTAIN EMPLOYMENT.—

''(1) BAR.—An employee may not be separated from service under this section unless the employee agrees that the employee will not—

''(A) act as agent or attorney for, or otherwise represent, any other person (except the United States) in any formal or informal appearance before, or, with the intent to influence, make any oral or written communication on behalf of any other person (except the United States) to the National Security Agency; or

''(B) participate in any manner in the award, modification, or extension of any contract for property or services with the National Security Agency, during the 12-month period beginning on the effective date of the employee's separation from service.

''(2) PENALTY.—An employee who violates an agreement under this subsection shall be liable to the United States in the amount of the separation pay paid to the employee pursuant to this section multiplied by the proportion of the 12-month period during which the employee was in violation of the agreement.

''(h) LIMITATIONS.—Under this program, early retirement and separation pay may be offered only—

''(1) with the prior approval of the Director;

''(2) for the period specified by the Director; and

''(3) to employees within such occupational groups or geographic locations, or subject to such other similar limitations or conditions, as the Director may require.

''(i) REGULATIONS.—Before an employee may be eligible for early retirement, separation pay, or both, under this section, the Director shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this section.

''(j) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

''(1) NOTIFICATION.—The Director may not make an offer of early retirement, separation pay, or both, pursuant to this section until 15 days after submitting to the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate a report describing the occupational groups or geographic locations, or other similar limitations or conditions, required by the Director under subsection (h), and includes the proposed regulations issued pursuant to subsection (i).

''(2) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Director shall submit to the President and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate an annual report on the effectiveness and costs of carrying out this section.

''(k) REMITTANCE OF FUNDS.—In addition to any other payment that is required to be made under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, the National Security Agency shall remit to the Office of Personnel Management for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, an amount equal to 15 percent of the final basic pay of each employee to whom a voluntary separation payment has been or is to be paid under this section. The remittance required by this subsection shall be in lieu of any remittance required by section 4(a) of the Federal Workforce Restructuring Act of 1994 (5 U.S.C. 8331 note).''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents for title III of the National Security Act of 1947 is amended by inserting at the beginning the following new item:

''Sec. 301. National Security Agency voluntary separation.''.

Subtitle B—Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Program Office (DTS-PO)

SEC. 321. REORGANIZATION OF DIPLOMATIC TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE PROGRAM OFFICE.

(a) REORGANIZATION.—Effective 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Program Office (DTS-PO) established pursuant to title V of Public Law 102–140 shall be reorganized in accordance with this subtitle.

(b) PURPOSE AND DUTIES OF DTS-PO.—The purpose and duties of DTS-PO shall be to carry out a program for the establishment and maintenance of a diplomatic telecommunications system and communications network (hereinafter in this subtitle referred to as ''DTS'') capable of providing multiple levels of service to meet the wide ranging needs of all United States Government agencies and departments at diplomatic facilities abroad, including national security needs for secure, reliable, and robust communications capabilities.

SEC. 322. PERSONNEL.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF POSITION OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Effective 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, there is established the position of Chief Executive Officer of the Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Program Office (hereinafter in this subtitle referred to as the ''CEO'').

(2) QUALIFICATIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The CEO shall be an individual who—

(i) is a communications professional;

(ii) has served in the commercial telecommunications industry for at least 7 years;

(iii) has an extensive background in communications system design, maintenance, and support and a background in organizational management; and

(iv) submits to a background investigation and possesses the necessary qualifications to obtain a security clearance required to meet the highest United States Government security standards.

(B) LIMITATIONS.—The CEO may not be an individual who was an officer or employee of DTS-PO prior to the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) APPOINTMENT AUTHORITY.—The CEO of DTS-PO shall be appointed by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(4) FIRST APPOINTMENT.—

(i) DEADLINE.—The first appointment under this subsection shall be made not later than May 1, 2001.

(ii) LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.—Of the funds available for DTS-PO on the date of the enactment of this Act, not more than 75 percent of such funds may be obligated or expended until a CEO is appointed under this subsection and assumes such position.

(iii) MAY NOT BE AN OFFICER OR EMPLOYEE OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.—The individual first appointed as CEO under this subtitle may not have been an officer or employee of the Federal government during the 1 year period immediately preceding such appointment.

(5) VACANCY.—In the event of a vacancy in the position of CEO or during the absence or disability of the CEO, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget may designate an officer or employee of DTS-PO to perform the duties of the position as the acting CEO.

(6) AUTHORITIES AND DUTIES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The CEO shall have responsibility for day-to-day management and operations of DTS, subject to the supervision of the Diplomatic Telecommunication Service Oversight Board established under this subtitle.

(B) SPECIFIC AUTHORITIES.—In carrying out the responsibility for day-to-day management and operations of DTS, the CEO shall, at a minimum, have—

(i) final decision-making authority for implementing DTS policy; and

(ii) final decision-making authority for managing all communications technology and security upgrades to satisfy DTS user requirements.

(C) CERTIFICATION REGARDING SECURITY.—The CEO shall certify to the appropriate congressional committees that the operational and communications security requirements and practices of DTS conform to the highest security requirements and practices required by any agency utilizing the DTS.

(D) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—

(i) SEMIANNUAL REPORTS.—Beginning on August 1, 2001, and every 6 months thereafter, the CEO shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees of jurisdiction a report regarding the activities of DTS-PO during the preceding 6 months, the current capabilities of DTS-PO, and the priorities of DTS-PO for the subsequent 6 month period. Each report shall include a discussion about any administrative, budgetary, or management issues that hinder the ability of DTS-PO to fulfill its mandate.

(ii) OTHER REPORTS.—In addition to the report required by clause (i), the CEO shall keep the appropriate congressional committees of jurisdiction fully and currently informed with regard to DTS-PO activities, particularly with regard to any significant security infractions or major outages in the DTS.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF POSITIONS OF DEPUTY EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall be 2 Deputy Executive Officers of the Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Program Office, each to be appointed by the President.

(2) DUTIES.—The Deputy Executive Officers shall perform such duties as the CEO may require.

(c) TERMINATION OF POSITIONS OF DIRECTOR AND DEPUTY DIRECTOR.—Effective upon the first appointment of a CEO pursuant to subsection (a), the positions of Director and Deputy Director of DTS-PO shall terminate.

(d) EMPLOYEES OF DTS-PO.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—DTS-PO is authorized to have the following employees: a CEO established under subsection (a), 2 Deputy Executive Officers established under subsection (b), and not more than 4 other employees.

(2) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The CEO and other officers and employees of DTS-PO may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of that title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(3) AUTHORITY OF DIRECTOR OF OMB TO PRESCRIBE PAY OF EMPLOYEES.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall prescribe the rates of basic pay for positions to which employees are appointed under this section on the basis of their unique qualifications.

(e) STAFF OF FEDERAL AGENCIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon request of the CEO, the head of any Federal department or agency may detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of the personnel of that department or agency to DTS-PO to assist it in carrying out its duties under this subtitle.

(2) CONTINUATION OF SERVICE.—An employee of a Federal department or agency who was performing services on behalf of DTS-PO prior to the effective date of the reorganization under this subtitle shall continue to be detailed to DTS-PO after that date, upon request.

SEC. 323. DIPLOMATIC TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE OVERSIGHT BOARD.

(a) OVERSIGHT BOARD ESTABLISHED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby established the Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Oversight Board (hereinafter in this subtitle referred to as the ''Board'') as an instrumentality of the United States with the powers and authorities herein provided.

(2) STATUS.—The Board shall oversee and monitor the operations of DTS-PO and shall be accountable for the duties assigned to DTS-PO under this subtitle.

(3) MEMBERSHIP.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall consist of 3 members as follows:

(i) The Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(ii) 2 members to be appointed by the President.

(B) CHAIRPERSON.—The chairperson of the Board shall be the Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(C) TERMS.—Members of the Board appointed by the President shall serve at the pleasure of the President.

(D) QUORUM REQUIRED.—A quorum shall consist of all members of the Board and all decisions of the Board shall require a majority vote.

(4) PROHIBITION ON COMPENSATION.—Members of the Board may not receive additional pay, allowances, or benefits by reason of their service on the Board.

(5) DUTIES AND AUTHORITIES.—The Board shall have the following duties and authorities with respect to DTS-PO:

(A) To review and approve overall strategies, policies, and goals established by DTS-PO for its activities.

(B) To review and approve financial plans, budgets, and periodic financing requests developed by DTS-PO.

(C) To review the overall performance of DTS-PO on a periodic basis, including its work, management activities, and internal controls, and the performance of DTS-PO relative to approved budget plans.

(D) To require from DTS-PO any reports, documents, and records the Board considers necessary to carry out its oversight responsibilities.

(E) To evaluate audits of DTS-PO.

(6) LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY.—The CEO shall have the authority, without any prior review or approval by the Board, to make such determinations as the CEO considers appropriate and take such actions as the CEO considers appropriate with respect to the day-to-day management and operation of DTS-PO and to carry out the reforms of DTS-PO authorized by section 305 of the Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donovan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001 (section 305 of appendix G of Public Law 106–113).

SEC. 324. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

(a) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than March 1, 2001, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees of jurisdiction a report which includes the following elements with respect to DTS-PO:

(1) Clarification of the process for the CEO to report to the Board.

(2) Details of the CEO's duties and responsibilities.

(3) Details of the compensation package for the CEO and other employees of DTS-PO.

(4) Recommendations to the Overseas Security Policy Board (OSPB) for updates.

(5) Security standards for information technology.

(6) The upgrade precedence plan for overseas posts with national security interests.

(7) A spending plan for the additional funds provided for the operation and improvement of DTS for fiscal year 2001.

(b) NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The notification requirements of sections 502 and 505 of the National Security Act of 1947 shall apply to DTS-PO and the Board.

(c) PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY OF DTS-PO.—The procurement authorities of any of the users of DTS shall be available to the DTS-PO.

(d) DEFINITION OF APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES OF JURISDICTION.—As used in this subtitle, the term ''appropriate congressional committees of jurisdiction'' means the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on International Relations, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

(e) STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to negate or to reduce the statutory obligations of any United States department or agency head.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR DTS-PO.—For each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2006, there are authorized to be appropriated directly to DTS-PO such sums as may be necessary to carry out the management, oversight, and security requirements of this subtitle.

TITLE IV—CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

SEC. 401. MODIFICATIONS TO CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY'S CENTRAL SERVICES PROGRAM.

(a) DEPOSITS IN CENTRAL SERVICES WORKING CAPITAL FUND.—Subsection (c)(2) of section 21 of the Central Intelligence Agency Act of 1949 (50 U.S.C. 403u(c)(2)) is amended—

SEC. 406. ELIGIBILITY OF ADDITIONAL EMPLOYEES FOR REIMBURSEMENT FOR PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY INSURANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any provision of title VI, section 636 of the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act, 1997 (5 U.S.C. prec. 5941 note), the Director of Central Intelligence may—

(1) designate as qualified employees within the meaning of subsection (b) of that section appropriate categories of employees not otherwise covered by that subsection; and

(2) use appropriated funds available to the Director to reimburse employees within categories so designated for one-half of the costs incurred by such employees for professional liability insurance in accordance with subsection (a) of that section.

(b) REPORTS.—The Director of Central Intelligence shall submit to the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee of Intelligence of the House of Representatives a report on each designation of a category of employees under paragraph (1) of subsection (a), including the approximate number of employees covered by such designation and an estimate of the amount to be expended on reimbursement of such employees under paragraph (2) of that subsection.

TITLE V—DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

SEC. 501. CONTRACTING AUTHORITY FOR THE NATIONAL RECONNAISSANCE OFFICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The National Reconnaissance Office (''NRO'') shall negotiate, write, execute, and manage contracts for launch vehicle acquisition or launch that affect or bind the NRO and to which the United States is a party.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall apply to any contract described in subsection (a) that is entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) RETROACTIVITY.—This section shall not apply to any contract described in subsection (a) in effect as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 502. ROLE OF DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE IN EXPERIMENTAL PERSONNEL PROGRAM FOR CERTAIN SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL PERSONNEL.

If the Director of Central Intelligence requests that the Secretary of Defense exercise any authority available to the Secretary under section 1101(b) of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261; 5 U.S.C. 3104 note) to carry out a program of special personnel management authority at the National Imagery and Mapping Agency and the National Security Agency in order to facilitate recruitment of eminent experts in science and engineering at such agencies, the Secretary shall respond to such request not later than 30 days after the date of such request.

SEC. 503. MEASUREMENT AND SIGNATURE INTELLIGENCE.

(a) STUDY OF OPTIONS.—The Director of Central Intelligence shall, in coordination with the Secretary of Defense, conduct a study of the utility and feasibility of various options for improving the management and organization of measurement and signature intelligence, including—

(1) the option of establishing a centralized tasking, processing, exploitation, and dissemination facility for measurement and signature intelligence;

(2) options for recapitalizing and reconfiguring the current systems for measurement and signature intelligence; and

(3) the operation and maintenance costs of the various options.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than April 1, 2001, the Director and the Secretary shall jointly submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on their findings as a result of the study required by subsection (a). The report shall set forth any recommendations that the Director and the Secretary consider appropriate.

(c) APPROPRIATE COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS DEFINED.—In this section, the term ''appropriate committees of Congress'' means the following:

(1) The Committee on Armed Services and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate.

(2) The Committee on Armed Services and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

TITLE VI—COUNTERINTELLIGENCE MATTERS

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Counterintelligence Reform Act of 2000''.

SEC. 602. ORDERS FOR ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE UNDER THE FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE ACT OF 1978.

(a) REQUIREMENTS REGARDING CERTAIN APPLICATIONS.—Section 104 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1804) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(e)(1)(A) Upon written request of the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State, or the Director of Central Intelligence, the Attorney General shall personally review under subsection (a) an application under that subsection for a target described in section 101(b)(2).

''(B) Except when disabled or otherwise unavailable to make a request referred to in subparagraph (A), an official referred to in that subparagraph may not delegate the authority to make a request referred to in that subparagraph.

''(C) Each official referred to in subparagraph (A) with authority to make a request under that subparagraph shall take appropriate actions in advance to ensure that delegation of such authority is clearly established in the event such official is disabled or otherwise unavailable to make such request.

''(2)(A) If as a result of a request under paragraph (1) the Attorney General determines not to approve an application under the second sentence of subsection (a) for purposes of making the application under this section, the Attorney General shall provide written notice of the determination to the official making the request for the review of the application under that paragraph. Except when disabled or otherwise unavailable to make a determination under the preceding sentence, the Attorney General may not delegate the responsibility to make a determination under that sentence. The Attorney General shall take appropriate actions in advance to ensure that delegation of such responsibility is clearly established in the event the Attorney General is disabled or otherwise unavailable to make such determination.

''(B) Notice with respect to an application under subparagraph (A) shall set forth the modifications, if any, of the application that are necessary in order for the Attorney General to approve the application under the second sentence of subsection (a) for purposes of making the application under this section.

''(C) Upon review of any modifications of an application set forth under subparagraph (B), the official notified of the modifications under this paragraph shall modify the application if such official determines that such modification is warranted. Such official shall supervise the making of any modification under this subparagraph. Except when disabled or otherwise unavailable to supervise the making of any modification under the preceding sentence, such official may not delegate the responsibility to supervise the making of any modification under that preceding sentence. Each such official shall take appropriate actions in advance to ensure that delegation of such responsibility is clearly established in the event such official is disabled or otherwise unavailable to supervise the making of such modification.''.

(b) PROBABLE CAUSE.—Section 105 of that Act (50 U.S.C. 1805) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g) as subsections (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h), respectively;

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection (b):

''(b) In determining whether or not probable cause exists for purposes of an order under subsection (a)(3), a judge may consider past activities of the target, as well as facts and circumstances relating to current or future activities of the target.''; and

(3) in subsection (d), as redesignated by paragraph (1), by striking ''subsection (b)(1)'' and inserting ''subsection (c)(1)''.

SEC. 603. ORDERS FOR PHYSICAL SEARCHES UNDER THE FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE ACT OF 1978.

(a) REQUIREMENTS REGARDING CERTAIN APPLICATIONS.—Section 303 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1823) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(d)(1)(A) Upon written request of the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State, or the Director of Central Intelligence, the Attorney General shall personally review under subsection (a) an application under that subsection for a target described in section 101(b)(2).

''(B) Except when disabled or otherwise unavailable to make a request referred to in subparagraph (A), an official referred to in that subparagraph may not delegate the authority to make a request referred to in that subparagraph.

''(C) Each official referred to in subparagraph (A) with authority to make a request under that subparagraph shall take appropriate actions in advance to ensure that delegation of such authority is clearly established in the event such official is disabled or otherwise unavailable to make such request.

''(2)(A) If as a result of a request under paragraph (1) the Attorney General determines not to approve an application under the second sentence of subsection (a) for purposes of making the application under this section, the Attorney General shall provide written notice of the determination to the official making the request for the review of the application under that paragraph. Except when disabled or otherwise unavailable to make a determination under the preceding sentence, the Attorney General may not delegate the responsibility to make a determination under that sentence. The Attorney General shall take appropriate actions in advance to ensure that delegation of such responsibility is clearly established in the event the Attorney General is disabled or otherwise unavailable to make such determination.

''(B) Notice with respect to an application under subparagraph (A) shall set forth the modifications, if any, of the application that are necessary in order for the Attorney General to approve the application under the second sentence of subsection (a) for purposes of making the application under this section.

''(C) Upon review of any modifications of an application set forth under subparagraph (B), the official notified of the modifications under this paragraph shall modify the application if such official determines that such modification is warranted. Such official shall supervise the making of any modification under this subparagraph. Except when disabled or otherwise unavailable to supervise the making of any modification under the preceding sentence, such official may not delegate the responsibility to supervise the making of any modification under that preceding sentence. Each such official shall take appropriate actions in advance to ensure that delegation of such responsibility is clearly established in the event such official is disabled or otherwise unavailable to supervise the making of such modification.''.

(b) PROBABLE CAUSE.—Section 304 of that Act (50 U.S.C. 1824) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e) as subsections (c), (d), (e), and (f), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection (b):

''(b) In determining whether or not probable cause exists for purposes of an order under subsection (a)(3), a judge may consider past activities of the target, as well as facts and circumstances relating to current or future activities of the target.''.

SEC. 604. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION ACQUIRED UNDER THE FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE ACT OF 1978 FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT PURPOSES.

(a) INCLUSION OF INFORMATION ON DISCLOSURE IN SEMIANNUAL OVERSIGHT REPORT.—Section 108(a) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1808(a)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(a)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(2) Each report under the first sentence of paragraph (1) shall include a description of—

''(A) each criminal case in which information acquired under this Act has been passed for law enforcement purposes during the period covered by such report; and

''(B) each criminal case in which information acquired under this Act has been authorized for use at trial during such reporting period.''.

(b) REPORT ON MECHANISMS FOR DETERMINATIONS OF DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT PURPOSES.—(1) The Attorney General shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on the authorities and procedures utilized by the Department of Justice for determining whether or not to disclose information acquired under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801 et seq.) for law enforcement purposes.

(2) In this subsection, the term ''appropriate committees of Congress'' means the following:

(A) The Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.

(B) The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 605. COORDINATION OF COUNTERINTELLIGENCE WITH THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION.

(a) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN SUBJECTS OF INVESTIGATION.—Subsection (c) of section 811 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (50 U.S.C. 402a) is amended—

(1) in paragraphs (1) and (2), by striking ''paragraph (3)'' and inserting ''paragraph (5)'';

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), (5), and (6) as paragraphs (5), (6), (7), and (8), respectively;

(3) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph (3):

''(3)(A) The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall submit to the head of the department or agency concerned a written assessment of the potential impact of the actions of the department or agency on a counterintelligence investigation.

''(B) The head of the department or agency concerned shall—

''(i) use an assessment under subparagraph (A) as an aid in determining whether, and under what circumstances, the subject of an investigation under paragraph (1) should be left in place for investigative purposes; and

''(ii) notify in writing the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of such determination.

''(C) The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the head of the department or agency concerned shall continue to consult, as appropriate, to review the status of an investigation covered by this paragraph, and to reassess, as appropriate, a determination of the head of the department or agency concerned to leave a subject in place for investigative purposes.''; and

(4) in paragraph (5), as so redesignated, by striking ''paragraph (1) or (2)'' and inserting ''paragraph (1), (2), or (3)''.

(b) TIMELY PROVISION OF INFORMATION AND CONSULTATION ON ESPIONAGE INVESTIGATIONS.—Paragraph (2) of that subsection is further amended—

(1) by inserting ''in a timely manner'' after ''through appropriate channels''; and

(2) by inserting ''in a timely manner'' after ''are consulted''.

(c) INTERFERENCE WITH FULL FIELD ESPIONAGE INVESTIGATIONS.—That subsection is further amended by inserting after paragraph (3), as amended by subsection (a) of this section, the following new paragraph (4):

''(4)(A) The Federal Bureau of Investigation shall notify appropriate officials within the executive branch, including the head of the department or agency concerned, of the commencement of a full field espionage investigation with respect to an employee within the executive branch.

''(B) A department or agency may not conduct a polygraph examination, interrogate, or otherwise take any action that is likely to alert an employee covered by a notice under subparagraph (A) of an investigation described in that subparagraph without prior coordination and consultation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.''.

SEC. 606. ENHANCING PROTECTION OF NATIONAL SECURITY AT THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

(a) AUTHORIZATION FOR INCREASED RESOURCES TO FULFILL NATIONAL SECURITY MISSION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Justice for the activities of the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review to help meet the increased personnel demands to combat terrorism, process applications to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, participate effectively in counter-espionage investigations, provide policy analysis on national security issues, and enhance secure computer and telecommunications facilities—

(1) $7,000,000 for fiscal year 2001;

(2) $7,500,000 for fiscal year 2002; and

(3) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2003.

(b) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—(1) No funds authorized to be appropriated by subsection (a) for the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review for fiscal years 2002 and 2003 may be obligated or expended until the date on which the Attorney General submits the report required by paragraph (2) for the year involved.

(2)(A) The Attorney General shall submit to the committees of Congress specified in subparagraph (B) an annual report on the manner in which the funds authorized to be appropriated by subsection (a) for the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review will be used by that Office—

(i) to improve and strengthen its oversight of Federal Bureau of Investigation field offices in the implementation of orders under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801 et seq.); and

(ii) to streamline and increase the efficiency of the application process under that Act.

(B) The committees of Congress referred to in this subparagraph are the following:

(i) The Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.

(ii) The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives.

(3) In addition to the report required by paragraph (2), the Attorney General shall also submit to the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives a report that addresses the issues identified in the semiannual report of the Attorney General to such committees under section 108(a) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1808(a)) that was submitted in April 2000, including any corrective actions with regard to such issues. The report under this paragraph shall be submitted in classified form.

(4) Funds made available pursuant to subsection (a), in any fiscal year, shall remain available until expended.

(c) REPORT ON COORDINATING NATIONAL SECURITY AND INTELLIGENCE FUNCTIONS WITHIN THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.—The Attorney General shall report to the committees of Congress specified in subsection (b)(2)(B) within 120 days on actions that have been or will be taken by the Department to—

(1) promote quick and efficient responses to national security issues;

(2) centralize a point-of-contact within the Department on national security matters for external entities and agencies; and

(3) coordinate the dissemination of intelligence information within the appropriate components of the Department and the formulation of policy on national security issues.

SEC. 607. COORDINATION REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO THE PROSECUTION OF CASES INVOLVING CLASSIFIED INFORMATION.

The Classified Information Procedures Act (18 U.S.C. App.) is amended by inserting after section 9 the following new section:

''COORDINATION REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO THE PROSECUTION OF CASES INVOLVING CLASSIFIED INFORMATION

''SEC. 9A. (a) BRIEFINGS REQUIRED.—The Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division and the appropriate United States attorney, or the designees of such officials, shall provide briefings to the senior agency official, or the designee of such official, with respect to any case involving classified information that originated in the agency of such senior agency official.

''(b) TIMING OF BRIEFINGS.—Briefings under subsection (a) with respect to a case shall occur—

''(1) as soon as practicable after the Department of Justice and the United States attorney concerned determine that a prosecution or potential prosecution could result; and

''(2) at such other times thereafter as are necessary to keep the senior agency official concerned fully and currently informed of the status of the prosecution.

''(c) SENIOR AGENCY OFFICIAL DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'senior agency official' has the meaning given that term in section 1.1 of Executive Order No. 12958.''.

SEC. 608. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this title (including an amendment made by this title), or the application thereof, to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of this title (including the amendments made by this title), and the application thereof, to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

TITLE VII—DECLASSIFICATION OF INFORMATION

SEC. 701. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Public Interest Declassification Act of 2000''.

SEC. 702. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) It is in the national interest to establish an effective, coordinated, and cost-effective means by which records on specific subjects of extraordinary public interest that do not undermine the national security interests of the United States may be collected, retained, reviewed, and disseminated to Congress, policymakers in the executive branch, and the public.

(2) Ensuring, through such measures, public access to information that does not require continued protection to maintain the national security interests of the United States is a key to striking the balance between secrecy essential to national security and the openness that is central to the proper functioning of the political institutions of the United States.

SEC. 703. PUBLIC INTEREST DECLASSIFICATION BOARD.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the executive branch of the United States a board to be known as the ''Public Interest Declassification Board'' (in this title referred to as the ''Board'').

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the Board are as follows:

(1) To advise the President, the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, and such other executive branch officials as the Board considers appropriate on the systematic, thorough, coordinated, and comprehensive identification, collection, review for declassification, and release to Congress, interested agencies, and the public of declassified records and materials (including donated historical materials) that are of archival value, including records and materials of extraordinary public interest.

(2) To promote the fullest possible public access to a thorough, accurate, and reliable documentary record of significant United States national security decisions and significant United States national security activities in order to—

(A) support the oversight and legislative functions of Congress;

(B) support the policymaking role of the executive branch;

(C) respond to the interest of the public in national security matters; and

(D) promote reliable historical analysis and new avenues of historical study in national security matters.

(3) To provide recommendations to the President for the identification, collection, and review for declassification of information of extraordinary public interest that does not undermine the national security of the United States, to be undertaken in accordance with a declassification program that has been established or may be established by the President by Executive order.

(4) To advise the President, the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, and such other executive branch officials as the Board considers appropriate on policies deriving from the issuance by the President of Executive orders regarding the classification and declassification of national security information.

(c) MEMBERSHIP.—(1) The Board shall be composed of nine individuals appointed from among citizens of the United States who are preeminent in the fields of history, national security, foreign policy, intelligence policy, social science, law, or archives, including individuals who have served in Congress or otherwise in the Federal Government or have otherwise engaged in research, scholarship, or publication in such fields on matters relating to the national security of the United States, of whom—

(A) five shall be appointed by the President;

(B) one shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(C) one shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate;

(D) one shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate; and

(E) one shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(2)(A) Of the members initially appointed to the Board by the President—

(i) three shall be appointed for a term of four years;

(ii) one shall be appointed for a term of three years; and

(iii) one shall be appointed for a term of two years.

(B) The members initially appointed to the Board by the Speaker of the House of Representatives or by the majority leader of the Senate shall be appointed for a term of three years.

(C) The members initially appointed to the Board by the minority leader of the House of Representatives or the Senate shall be appointed for a term of two years.

(D) Any subsequent appointment to the Board shall be for a term of three years.

(3) A vacancy in the Board shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment. A member of the Board appointed to fill a vacancy before the expiration of a term shall serve for the remainder of the term.

(4) A member of the Board may be appointed to a new term on the Board upon the expiration of the member's term on the Board, except that no member may serve more than three full terms on the Board.

(d) CHAIRPERSON; EXECUTIVE SECRETARY.—(1)(A) The President shall designate one of the members of the Board as the Chairperson of the Board.

(B) The term of service as Chairperson of the Board shall be two years.

(C) A member serving as Chairperson of the Board may be redesignated as Chairperson of the Board upon the expiration of the member's term as Chairperson of the Board, except that no member shall serve as Chairperson of the Board for more than six years.

(2) The Director of the Information Security Oversight Office shall serve as the Executive Secretary of the Board.

(e) MEETINGS.—The Board shall meet as needed to accomplish its mission, consistent with the availability of funds. A majority of the members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

(f) STAFF.—Any employee of the Federal Government may be detailed to the Board, with the agreement of and without reimbursement to the detailing agency, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil, military, or foreign service status or privilege.

(g) SECURITY.—(1) The members and staff of the Board shall, as a condition of appointment to or employment with the Board, hold appropriate security clearances for access to the classified records and materials to be reviewed by the Board or its staff, and shall follow the guidance and practices on security under applicable Executive orders and Presidential or agency directives.

(2) The head of an agency shall, as a condition of granting access to a member of the Board, the Executive Secretary of the Board, or a member of the staff of the Board to classified records or materials of the agency under this title, require the member, the Executive Secretary, or the member of the staff, as the case may be, to—

(A) execute an agreement regarding the security of such records or materials that is approved by the head of the agency; and

(B) hold an appropriate security clearance granted or recognized under the standard procedures and eligibility criteria of the agency, including any special access approval required for access to such records or materials.

(3) The members of the Board, the Executive Secretary of the Board, and the members of the staff of the Board may not use any information acquired in the course of their official activities on the Board for nonofficial purposes.

(4) For purposes of any law or regulation governing access to classified information that pertains to the national security of the United States, and subject to any limitations on access arising under section 706(b), and to facilitate the advisory functions of the Board under this title, a member of the Board seeking access to a record or material under this title shall be deemed for purposes of this subsection to have a need to know the contents of the record or material.

(h) COMPENSATION.—(1) Each member of the Board shall receive compensation at a rate not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay payable for positions at ES–1 of the Senior Executive Service under section 5382 of title 5, United States Code, for each day such member is engaged in the actual performance of duties of the Board.

(2) Members of the Board shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of the duties of the Board.

(i) GUIDANCE; ANNUAL BUDGET.—(1) On behalf of the President, the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs shall provide guidance on policy to the Board.

(2) The Executive Secretary of the Board, under the direction of the Chairperson of the Board and the Board, and acting in consultation with the Archivist of the United States, the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, shall prepare the annual budget of the Board.

(j) SUPPORT.—The Information Security Oversight Office may support the activities of the Board under this title. Such support shall be provided on a reimbursable basis.

(k) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY OF RECORDS AND REPORTS.—(1) The Board shall make available for public inspection records of its proceedings and reports prepared in the course of its activities under this title to the extent such records and reports are not classified and would not be exempt from release under the provisions of section 552 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) In making records and reports available under paragraph (1), the Board shall coordinate the release of such records and reports with appropriate officials from agencies with expertise in classified information in order to ensure that such records and reports do not inadvertently contain classified information.

(l) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN ADMINISTRATIVE LAWS.—The provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to the activities of the Board under this title. However, the records of the Board shall be governed by the provisions of the Federal Records Act of 1950.

SEC. 704. IDENTIFICATION, COLLECTION, AND REVIEW FOR DECLASSIFICATION OF INFORMATION OF ARCHIVAL VALUE OR EXTRAORDINARY PUBLIC INTEREST.

(a) BRIEFINGS ON AGENCY DECLASSIFICATION PROGRAMS.—(1) As requested by the Board, or by the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate or the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, the head of any agency with the authority under an Executive order to classify information shall provide to the Board, the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate, or the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, on an annual basis, a summary briefing and report on such agency's progress and plans in the declassification of national security information. Such briefing shall cover the declassification goals set by statute, regulation, or policy, the agency's progress with respect to such goals, and the agency's planned goals and priorities for its declassification activities over the next two fiscal years. Agency briefings and reports shall give particular attention to progress on the declassification of records and materials that are of archival value or extraordinary public interest to the people of the United States.

(2)(A) The annual briefing and report under paragraph (1) for agencies within the Department of Defense, including the military departments and the elements of the intelligence community, shall be provided on a consolidated basis.

(B) In this paragraph, the term ''elements of the intelligence community'' means the elements of the intelligence community specified or designated under section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401a(4)).

(b) RECOMMENDATIONS ON AGENCY DECLASSIFICATION PROGRAMS.—(1) Upon reviewing and discussing declassification plans and progress with an agency, the Board shall provide to the head of the agency the written recommendations of the Board as to how the agency's declassification program could be improved. A copy of each recommendation shall also be submitted to the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(2) Consistent with the provisions of section 703(k), the Board's recommendations to the head of an agency under paragraph (1) shall become public 60 days after such recommendations are sent to the head of the agency under that paragraph.

(c) RECOMMENDATIONS ON SPECIAL SEARCHES FOR RECORDS OF EXTRAORDINARY PUBLIC INTEREST.—(1) The Board shall also make recommendations to the President regarding proposed initiatives to identify, collect, and review for declassification classified records and materials of extraordinary public interest.

(2) In making recommendations under paragraph (1), the Board shall consider the following:

(A) The opinions and requests of Members of Congress, including opinions and requests expressed or embodied in letters or legislative proposals.

(B) The opinions and requests of the National Security Council, the Director of Central Intelligence, and the heads of other agencies.

(C) The opinions of United States citizens.

(D) The opinions of members of the Board.

(E) The impact of special searches on systematic and all other on-going declassification programs.

(F) The costs (including budgetary costs) and the impact that complying with the recommendations would have on agency budgets, programs, and operations.

(G) The benefits of the recommendations.

(H) The impact of compliance with the recommendations on the national security of the United States.

(d) PRESIDENT'S DECLASSIFICATION PRIORITIES.—(1) Concurrent with the submission to Congress of the budget of the President each fiscal year under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall publish a description of the President's declassification program and priorities, together with a listing of the funds requested to implement that program.

(2) Nothing in this title shall be construed to substitute or supersede, or establish a funding process for, any declassification program that has been established or may be established by the President by Executive order.

SEC. 705. PROTECTION OF NATIONAL SECURITY INFORMATION AND OTHER INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to limit the authority of the head of an agency to classify information or to continue the classification of information previously classified by that agency.

(b) SPECIAL ACCESS PROGRAMS.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to limit the authority of the head of an agency to grant or deny access to a special access program.

(c) AUTHORITIES OF DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to limit the authorities of the Director of Central Intelligence as the head of the intelligence community, including the Director's responsibility to protect intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized disclosure as required by section 103(c)(6) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403–3(c)(6)).

(d) EXEMPTIONS TO RELEASE OF INFORMATION.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to limit any exemption or exception to the release to the public under this title of information that is protected under subsection (b) of section 552 of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the ''Freedom of Information Act''), or section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the ''Privacy Act'').

(e) WITHHOLDING INFORMATION FROM CONGRESS.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to authorize the withholding of information from Congress.

SEC. 706. STANDARDS AND PROCEDURES.

(a) LIAISON.—(1) The head of each agency with the authority under an Executive order to classify information and the head of each Federal Presidential library shall designate an employee of such agency or library to act as liaison to the Board for purposes of this title.

(2) The Board may establish liaison and otherwise consult with such other historical and advisory committees as the Board considers appropriate for purposes of this title.

(b) LIMITATIONS ON ACCESS.—(1)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (2), if the head of an agency or the head of a Federal Presidential library determines it necessary to deny or restrict access of the Board, or of the agency or library liaison to the Board, to information contained in a record or material, in whole or in part, the head of the agency or the head of the library shall promptly notify the Board in writing of such determination.

(B) Each notice to the Board under subparagraph (A) shall include a description of the nature of the records or materials, and a justification for the determination, covered by such notice.

(2) In the case of a determination referred to in paragraph (1) with respect to a special access program created by the Secretary of Defense, the Director of Central Intelligence, or the head of any other agency, the notification of denial of access under paragraph (1), including a description of the nature of the Board's request for access, shall be submitted to the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs rather than to the Board.

(c) DISCRETION TO DISCLOSE.—At the conclusion of a declassification review, the head of an agency may, in the discretion of the head of the agency, determine that the public's interest in the disclosure of records or materials of the agency covered by such review, and still properly classified, outweighs the Government's need to protect such records or materials, and may release such records or materials in accordance with the provisions of Executive Order 12958 or any successor order to such Executive Order.

(d) DISCRETION TO PROTECT.—At the conclusion of a declassification review, the head of an agency may, in the discretion of the head of the agency, determine that the interest of the agency in the protection of records or materials of the agency covered by such review, and still properly classified, outweighs the public's need for access to such records or materials, and may deny release of such records or materials in accordance with the provisions of Executive Order 12958 or any successor order to such Executive Order.

(e) REPORTS.—(1)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Board shall annually submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the activities of the Board under this title, including summary information regarding any denials to the Board by the head of an agency or the head of a Federal Presidential library of access to records or materials under this title.

(B) In this paragraph, the term ''appropriate congressional committees'' means the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), notice that the Board has been denied access to records and materials, and a justification for the determination in support of the denial, shall be submitted by the agency denying the access as follows:

(A) In the case of the denial of access to a special access program created by the Secretary of Defense, to the Committees on Armed Services and Appropriations of the Senate and to the Committees on Armed Services and Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(B) In the case of the denial of access to a special access program created by the Director of Central Intelligence, or by the head of any other agency (including the Department of Defense) if the special access program pertains to intelligence activities, or of access to any information and materials relating to intelligence sources and methods, to the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

(C) In the case of the denial of access to a special access program created by the Secretary of Energy or the Administrator for Nuclear Security, to the Committees on Armed Services and Appropriations and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and to the Committees on Armed Services and Appropriations and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 707. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

Nothing in this title limits the protection afforded to any information under any other provision of law. This title is not intended and may not be construed to create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable against the United States, its agencies, its officers, or its employees. This title does not modify in any way the substantive criteria or procedures for the classification of information, nor does this title create any right or benefit subject to judicial review.

SEC. 708. FUNDING.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title amounts as follows:

(1) For fiscal year 2001, $650,000.

(2) For each fiscal year after fiscal year 2001, such sums as may be necessary for such fiscal year.

(b) FUNDING REQUESTS.—The President shall include in the budget submitted to Congress for each fiscal year under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, a request for amounts for the activities of the Board under this title during such fiscal year.

SEC. 709. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) AGENCY.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term ''agency'' means the following:

(i) An Executive agency, as that term is defined in section 105 of title 5, United States Code.

(ii) A military department, as that term is defined in section 102 of such title.

(iii) Any other entity in the executive branch that comes into the possession of classified information.

(B) The term does not include the Board.

(2) CLASSIFIED MATERIAL OR RECORD.—The terms ''classified material'' and ''classified record'' include any correspondence, memorandum, book, plan, map, drawing, diagram, pictorial or graphic work, photograph, film, microfilm, sound recording, videotape, machine readable records, and other documentary material, regardless of physical form or characteristics, that has been determined pursuant to Executive order to require protection against unauthorized disclosure in the interests of the national security of the United States.

(3) DECLASSIFICATION.—The term ''declassification'' means the process by which records or materials that have been classified are determined no longer to require protection from unauthorized disclosure to protect the national security of the United States.

(4) DONATED HISTORICAL MATERIAL.—The term ''donated historical material'' means collections of personal papers donated or given to a Federal Presidential library or other archival repository under a deed of gift or otherwise.

(5) FEDERAL PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY.—The term ''Federal Presidential library'' means a library operated and maintained by the United States Government through the National Archives and Records Administration under the applicable provisions of the Federal Records Act of 1950.

(6) NATIONAL SECURITY.—The term ''national security'' means the national defense or foreign relations of the United States.

(7) RECORDS OR MATERIALS OF EXTRAORDINARY PUBLIC INTEREST.—The term ''records or materials of extraordinary public interest'' means records or materials that—

(A) demonstrate and record the national security policies, actions, and decisions of the United States, including—

(i) policies, events, actions, and decisions which led to significant national security outcomes; and

(ii) the development and evolution of significant United States national security policies, actions, and decisions;

(B) will provide a significantly different perspective in general from records and materials publicly available in other historical sources; and

(C) would need to be addressed through ad hoc record searches outside any systematic declassification program established under Executive order.

(8) RECORDS OF ARCHIVAL VALUE.—The term ''records of archival value'' means records that have been determined by the Archivist of the United States to have sufficient historical or other value to warrant their continued preservation by the Federal Government.

SEC. 710. EFFECTIVE DATE; SUNSET.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This title shall take effect on the date that is 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) SUNSET.—The provisions of this title shall expire four years after the date of the enactment of this Act, unless reauthorized by statute.

TITLE VIII—DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION ON JAPANESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT

SEC. 801. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act of 2000''.

SEC. 802. DESIGNATION.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) AGENCY.—The term ''agency'' has the meaning given such term under section 551 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) INTERAGENCY GROUP.—The term ''Interagency Group'' means the Nazi War Crimes and Japanese Imperial Government Records Interagency Working Group established under subsection (b).

(3) JAPANESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT RECORDS.—The term ''Japanese Imperial Government records'' means classified records or portions of records that pertain to any person with respect to whom the United States Government, in its sole discretion, has grounds to believe ordered, incited, assisted, or otherwise participated in the experimentation on, and persecution of, any person because of race, religion, national origin, or political opinion, during the period beginning September 18, 1931, and ending on December 31, 1948, under the direction of, or in association with—

(A) the Japanese Imperial Government;

(B) any government in any area occupied by the military forces of the Japanese Imperial Government;

(C) any government established with the assistance or cooperation of the Japanese Imperial Government; or

(D) any government which was an ally of the Japanese Imperial Government.

(4) RECORD.—The term ''record'' means a Japanese Imperial Government record.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF INTERAGENCY GROUP.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall designate the Working Group established under the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act (Public Law 105–246; 5 U.S.C. 552 note) to also carry out the purposes of this title with respect to Japanese Imperial Government records, and that Working Group shall remain in existence for 3 years after the date on which this title takes effect. Such Working Group is redesignated as the ''Nazi War Crimes and Japanese Imperial Government Records Interagency Working Group''.

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—Section 2(b)(2) of such Act is amended by striking ''3 other persons'' and inserting ''4 other persons who shall be members of the public, of whom 3 shall be persons appointed under the provisions of this Act in effect on October 8, 1998.''.

(c) FUNCTIONS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Interagency Group shall, to the greatest extent possible consistent with section 803—

(1) locate, identify, inventory, recommend for declassification, and make available to the public at the National Archives and Records Administration, all classified Japanese Imperial Government records of the United States;

(2) coordinate with agencies and take such actions as necessary to expedite the release of such records to the public; and

(3) submit a report to Congress, including the Committee on Government Reform and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate, describing all such records, the disposition of such records, and the activities of the Interagency Group and agencies under this section.

(d) FUNDING.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

SEC. 803. REQUIREMENT OF DISCLOSURE OF RECORDS.

(a) RELEASE OF RECORDS.—Subject to subsections (b), (c), and (d), the Japanese Imperial Government Records Interagency Working Group shall release in their entirety Japanese Imperial Government records.

(b) EXEMPTIONS.—An agency head may exempt from release under subsection (a) specific information, that would—

(1) constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(2) reveal the identity of a confidential human source, or reveal information about an intelligence source or method when the unauthorized disclosure of that source or method would damage the national security interests of the United States;

(3) reveal information that would assist in the development or use of weapons of mass destruction;

(4) reveal information that would impair United States cryptologic systems or activities;

(5) reveal information that would impair the application of state-of-the-art technology within a United States weapon system;

(6) reveal United States military war plans that remain in effect;

(7) reveal information that would impair relations between the United States and a foreign government, or undermine ongoing diplomatic activities of the United States;

(8) reveal information that would impair the current ability of United States Government officials to protect the President, Vice President, and other officials for whom protection services are authorized in the interest of national security;

(9) reveal information that would impair current national security emergency preparedness plans; or

(10) violate a treaty or other international agreement.

(c) APPLICATIONS OF EXEMPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In applying the exemptions provided in paragraphs (2) through (10) of subsection (b), there shall be a presumption that the public interest will be served by disclosure and release of the records of the Japanese Imperial Government. The exemption may be asserted only when the head of the agency that maintains the records determines that disclosure and release would be harmful to a specific interest identified in the exemption. An agency head who makes such a determination shall promptly report it to the committees of Congress with appropriate jurisdiction, including the Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

(2) APPLICATION OF TITLE 5.—A determination by an agency head to apply an exemption provided in paragraphs (2) through (9) of subsection (b) shall be subject to the same standard of review that applies in the case of records withheld under section 552(b)(1) of title 5, United States Code.

(d) RECORDS RELATED TO INVESTIGATIONS OR PROSECUTIONS.—This section shall not apply to records—

(1) related to or supporting any active or inactive investigation, inquiry, or prosecution by the Office of Special Investigations of the Department of Justice; or

(2) solely in the possession, custody, or control of the Office of Special Investigations.

SEC. 804. EXPEDITED PROCESSING OF REQUESTS FOR JAPANESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT RECORDS.

For purposes of expedited processing under section 552(a)(6)(E) of title 5, United States Code, any person who was persecuted in the manner described in section 802(a)(3) and who requests a Japanese Imperial Government record shall be deemed to have a compelling need for such record.

SEC. 805. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The provisions of this title shall take effect on the date that is 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Managers on the Part of the Senate.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4392) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for intelligence and the intelligence-related activities of the United States government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The managers agree that the congressionally directed actions described in the House bill, the Senate amendment, the respective committee reports, and classified annexes accompanying H.R. 4392 and S. 2507, should be undertaken to the extent that such congressionally directed actions are not amended, altered, or otherwise specifically addressed in either this Joint Explanatory Statement or in the classified annex to the conference report on the bill H.R. 4392.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON TERRORISM

Pursuant to Public Law 105–277, the National Commission on Terrorism, chaired by former Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III, submitted its report to Congress in June 2000. The managers commend the Commission for its effort and contribution on this critical issue.

Many of the Commission's findings strongly support positions Congress has taken. The Commission report reinforces the assessment by Congress of the scope and evolving nature of the international terrorist threat. The Commission further highlights the managers' view that good intelligence is one of the best tools against international terrorism, and that there is an urgent need to rebuild the NSA.

The Commission determined that some policies and other restrictions are hindering efforts to counter terrorism. For example, the Commission highlighted—with concern—the complex manner in which the Justice Department implements the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA). It noted, however, that the Attorney General managed to streamline the Department's processes for considering FISA warrants-still in a manner fully consistent with the law-in order to address the myriad terrorist threats during the millennium period. The Commission noted that the United States government was much more effective in pursuing terrorists during that period. The managers appreciate the Commission's support for the efforts of all involved in countering the millennium threats.

The Commission recommended the elimination of the 1995 DCI guidelines requiring approvals from CIA headquarters before terrorist informants who have human rights violations in their background can be recruited. The rationale stated by the Commissioners was that it should be understood by all in the Intelligence Community that aggressive recruitment of human intelligence sources is one of the highest priorities. The managers share this priority, and will continue to examine the implementation of these important guidelines. The managers are concerned, however, that there may be intangible impediments to recruitment of such terrorist informants. For instance, there may be some in CIA headquarters who believe that Congress and the American public will not support a CIA relationship with a ''terrorist organization insider,'' or close associates of terrorists, even though such persons may often be in the best or only position to provide valuable counterterrorism intelligence. The managers applaud the determined effort of the CIA to ensure that all case officers understand the commitment of the Agency to the recruitment of persons with access to information on terrorist organizations or access to the organizations themselves. The managers also insist that appropriate recruitment of such sources receives the continued and necessary support from CIA management at all levels.

Unquestionably, a robust and effective intelligence effort will, from time to time, require U.S. interaction with extremely dangerous and truly unsavory characters. After all, it is an unfortunate matter of fact that individuals with reputable backgrounds rarely yield the key intelligence leads that are critical to the counterterrorist efforts of the United States.

The managers strongly support an aggressive counterterrorism program, and urge all intelligence officers to continue their heroic efforts to deter terrorist activities against U.S. citizens and interests at home and around the world.

TITLE I—INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

SEC. 101. AUTHORIZATION FOR APPROPRIATIONS

Section 101 of the conference report lists the departments, agencies, and other elements of the United States government for whose intelligence and intelligence-related activities the Act authorizes appropriations for fiscal year 2001. Section 101 is identical to section 101 of the House bill and section 101 of the Senate amendment.

SEC. 102. CLASSIFIED SCHEDULE OF AUTHORIZATIONS

Section 102 of the conference report makes clear that the details of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for intelligence and intelligence-related activities and applicable personnel ceilings covered under this title for fiscal year 2001 are contained in a classified Schedule of Authorizations. The classified Schedule of Authorizations is incorporated into the Act by this section. The Schedule of Authorizations shall be made available to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives and to the President. The classified annex provides the details of the Schedule. Section 102 is identical to section 102 of the House bill and section 102 of the Senate amendment.

SEC. 103. PERSONNEL CEILING ADJUSTMENTS

Section 103 of the conference report authorizes the Director of Central Intelligence, with the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in fiscal year 2001 to authorize employment of civilian personnel in excess of the personnel ceilings applicable to the components of the Intelligence Community under section 102 by an amount not to exceed two percent of the total of the ceilings applicable under section 102. The Director of Central Intelligence may exercise this authority only if necessary to the performance of important intelligence functions. Any exercise of this authority must be reported to the intelligence committees of the Congress.

The managers emphasize that the authority conferred by section 103 is not intended to permit wholesale increases in personnel strength in any intelligence component. Rather, the section provides the Director of Central Intelligence with flexibility to adjust personnel levels temporarily for contingencies and for overages caused by an imbalance between hiring of new employees and attrition of current employees. The managers do not expect the Director of Central Intelligence to allow heads of intelligence components to plan to exceed levels set in the Schedule of Authorizations except for the satisfaction of clearly identified hiring needs that are consistent with the authorization of personnel strengths in this bill. In no case is this authority to be used to provide for positions denied by this bill. Section 103 is identical to section 103 of the House bill and section 103 of the Senate amendment.

SEC. 104. COMMUNITY MANAGEMENT ACCOUNT

Section 104 of the conference report authorizes appropriations for the Community Management Account (CMA) of the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) and sets the personnel end-strength for the Intelligence Community management staff for fiscal year 2001.

Subsection (a) authorizes appropriations of $163, 231,000 for fiscal year 2001 for the activities of the CMA of the DCI. This amount includes funds identified for the Advanced Research and Development Committee and the Advanced Technology Group, which shall remain available until September 30, 2002.

Subsection (b) authorizes 313 full-time personnel for the Community Management Staff for fiscal year 2001 and provides that such personnel may be permanent employees of the Staff or detailed from various elements of the United States government.

Subsection (c) authorizes additional appropriations and personnel for the CMA as specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations and permits these additional amounts to remain available through September 30, 2002.

Subsection (d) requires that, except as provided in Section 113 of the National Security Act of 1947, or for temporary situations of less than one year, personnel from another element of the United States government be detailed to an element of the CMA on a reimbursable basis.

Subsection (e) authorizes $34,100,000 of the amount authorized in subsection (a) to be made available for the National Drug Intelligence Center (NDIC). Subsection (e) requires the DCI to transfer these funds to the Department of Justice to be used for NDIC activities under the authority of the Attorney General and subject to section 103(d)(1) of the National Security Act. Subsection (e) is similar to subsection (e) of the House bill and subsection (e) of the Senate amendment.

The managers note that since Fiscal Year 1997 the Community Management Account has included authorization for appropriations for the National Drug Intelligence Center (NDIC). Over that time, the funding level for the NDIC has remained unchanged. The committees periodically have expressed concern about the effectiveness of NDIC and its ability to fulfill the role for which it was created. The managers are encouraged, however, by the NDIC's recent improved performance and by the refocused role for the organization, which was outlined in the Administration's General Counterdrug Intelligence Plan earlier this year. The managers agree to provide $7.1 million over the requested amount for the NDIC and instruct the Director of the NDIC to provide a spending plan to the intelligence committees and to the appropriations committees within 90 days of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 105. TRANSFER AUTHORITY OF THE DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE

Section 105 is identical to Section 105 of the House bill. The Senate amendment had no similar provision. The Senate recedes.

TITLE II—CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY RETIREMENT AND DISABILITY SYSTEM

SEC. 201. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

Section 201 is identical to Section 201 of the Senate amendment and section 201 of the House bill.

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Intelligence Community

SEC. 301. INCREASE IN EMPLOYEE COMPENSATION AND BENEFITS AUTHORIZED BY LAW

Section 301 is identical to section 301 of the Senate amendment and section 301 of the House bill.

SEC. 302. RESTRICTION ON CONDUCT OF INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

Section 302 is identical to section 302 of the Senate amendment and section 302 of the House bill.

SEC. 303. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS ON INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY CONTRACTING

Section 303 is identical to section 303 of the House bill. The Senate amendment had no similar provision. The Senate recedes to the House provision.

SEC. 304. PROHIBITION ON UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE OF CLASSIFIED INFORMATION

Section 304 is identical to section 303 of the Senate amendment. The House bill had no similar provision. The House recedes.

Unauthorized disclosures of sensitive intelligence information are of great concern. Such disclosures, regardless of whether they involve an intelligence ''success'' or ''failure,'' can compromise irreplaceable sources and methods, and in some cases, can directly endanger lives.

The managers note that the current Executive Order governing classified national security information (E.O. 12958) requires that, in order to classify information, the original classifying authority must determine that unauthorized disclosure of the information reasonably could be expected to result in damage to the national security and the original classification authority must be able to identify or describe the damage. The managers further note that the current Executive Order specifically prohibits the classification of information in order to conceal violations of law, inefficiency, or administrative error or to prevent embarrassment to the government.

It is the intent of the managers that the government may meet its burden of proof under this statute by proving that the information was classified under the applicable statute or Executive Order. The government should not be required to prove that damage to the national security actually has or will result from the unauthorized disclosure. Subsection (c)(2) is not intended by the managers to create a defense based on a technical error in the classification markings, or the lack thereof, or to create a right of the defendant to dispute the propriety of the President's classification decision. The managers believe that requiring the government to prove that the classified information is or has been properly classified under an applicable statute or Executive Order strikes the appropriate balance between protecting only that information that would damage the national security if disclosed and not creating a burden of proof that is so great that the government could never meet its burden without having to disclose unnecessarily additional classified information.

SEC. 305. AUTHORIZATION FOR TRAVEL ON ANY COMMON CARRIER

Section 305 is similar to Section 304 of the House bill. The Senate amendment had no similar provision. The Senate recedes, with amendment.

Section 4(b)(3) of the CIA Act of 1949, as amended, provides the DCI with authority to promulgate regulations governing travel requirements for CIA officers and other federal government employees or members of the Armed Services detailed to the CIA.

Subject to regulation, CIA employees and detailees to the CIA may be permitted to use non-American-flag airlines when it is determined to be essential to satisfy mission requirements. The managers believe that this type of flexibility is necessary for other personnel of the Intelligence Community carrying out intelligence community mission requirements, given the nature of the work of the Intelligence Community. This provision is not intended to supersede the CIA's current regulation relating to this matter. Rather, it is a complementary provision meant to ensure an appropriate level of latitude to the Intelligence Community to carry out the critically important activities in pursuit and defense of the national security.

SEC. 306. UPDATE OF REPORT ON EFFECTS OF FOREIGN ESPIONAGE ON U.S.

Section 306 is similar to Section 306 of the House bill. The Senate amendment had no similar provision. The Senate recedes, with technical amendment.

SEC. 307 POW/MIA ANALYTIC CAPABILITY IN THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY

Section 307 is similar to Section 304 of the Senate amendment. The House bill had no similar provision. The House recedes, with technical modifications.

SEC. 308. APPLICABILITY TO LAWFUL UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES OF FEDERAL LAWS IMPLEMENTING INTERNATIONAL TREATIES AND AGREEMENTS

Section 308 is identical to Sec. 305 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes.

The managers note that section 308 applies only to intelligence activities of the United States. By its clear terms, this provision deals solely with the application of U.S. law to U.S. intelligence activities. Unquestionably, it does not address the issue of the lawfulness of such activities under the laws of foreign countries. It is also not meant to suggest that a person violating the laws of the United States may claim any authorization from a foreign government as justification for a violation of a U.S. law, or as a defense in a prosecution for such violation.

SEC. 309. LIMITS ON HANDLING, RETENTION, AND STORAGE OF CERTAIN CLASSIFIED MATERIALS BY THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Section 309 is identical to Section 306 of the Senate amendment. The House addressed this issue in the classified annex to the report accompanying the bill H.R. 4392, but had no similar statutory proposal. The House recedes.

SEC. 310. DESIGNATION OF DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN PLACE

Section 310 is nearly identical to Section 309 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes, with technical amendments. The managers agreed to technical modifications pertaining to the exact description and location of the parcel of land in Washington, D.C., to be designated in honor of the retiring senior Senator from the State of New York.

SEC. 311. NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY VOLUNTARY SEPARATION PAY ACT

Neither the House bill nor the Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

Section 311 establishes the ''National Security Agency Voluntary Separation Act.'' This provision grants to the Director of the National Security Agency (NSA) the authority to establish a program for early retirement and voluntary separation pay for NSA employees. The provision allows the Director to either offer early retirement for employees who are at least 50 years of age and have 20 years of service, or who have at least 25 years of service, regardless of age. The Director is also permitted to offer $25,000 in separation pay to eligible applicants. The Director is empowered to deny an employee's application for benefit under this section.

The NSA is in a unique period of transition, the success of which will affect the overall capabilities of the Intelligence Community for the next several decades. The Director of Central Intelligence has claimed that the modernization of NSA is his number one priority. There are several aspects to the NSA modernization effort that range from overhauling technical collection, to restructuring acquisition, to new personnel programs, including major outsourcing initiatives. The Director needs the flexibility to institute whatever personnel changes he deems necessary if NSA modernization is to be successful. This provision will give him that needed flexibility. This section is modeled after the CIA Voluntary Separation Pay Act (Public Law 103–36).

The managers understand that such authority could be seen as setting a precedent, and that other agencies may wish to have such authorities as well. In the managers' view, the situation at NSA is unique, not only in the enormity of the task of modernization, but also in the direct impact on national security should NSA modernization fail. Therefore, the managers believe that this is a necessary step to take for the specific circumstance confronting the NSA.

Subtitle B—Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Program Office (DTS–PO)

SEC. 321. REORGANIZATION OF DIPLOMATIC TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE PROGRAM OFFICE

Section 321 reorganizes the Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Program Office (DTS–PO). The managers agree that the current DTS–PO management and Diplomatic Telecommunication Service (DTS) operations structure is fundamentally flawed and believe that a new construct for managing the DTS is necessary. They further agree that retaining the current DTS–PO organization, but with a new management approach, is the best means for improving DTS support to all U.S. government users. Funding has been authorized in this legislation for the purposes of overhauling the DTS–PO management and correcting communications and security deficiencies within the DTS.

The current organizational structure requires that both the DTS–PO Director and Deputy Director concur on technical, funding, and operational issues before actions can be taken. This management-by-consensus approach abrogates the authority of the Director to make final decisions. It is clear to the managers that this management approach is not working, and that the parent organizations inherently lack the ability, and the will, to work together to resolve their mutual DTS issues of concern. Further, it is clear to the managers that the Office of Management and Budget has been frustrated in its obligations to ensure that executive branch organizations work together. Of significant concern is that, as currently operated, DTS–PO has exhibited substantial interruptions in service and presents serious security concerns for the protection of sensitive government communications. Because of these concerns, the managers, and the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of the other committees of jurisdiction, believe that a new management structure for DTS–PO is required and decidedly overdue. Similarly, they are of the view that a transition to a more modern and effective telecommunications system, based on commercial best-business practices, is warranted.

SEC. 322. CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER AND OTHER DTS–PO PERSONNEL

Section 322 establishes the position of Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and a DTS board of directors. The CEO is to be ultimately responsible for the management of the DTS–PO and operation of the DTS. The managers direct the OMB to recruit and hire a communications professional from outside the DTS–PO and the U.S. government for appointment as the CEO. This appointment is to be made no later than May 1, 2001. The CEO is granted the authorities necessary for managing, ensuring funding for, and operating the DTS, the DTS–PO, and their personnel. It is the managers' intent that the CEO will be the final decision authority for implementing necessary changes to the DTS, and for managing all communications, technology, and security upgrades to satisfy DTS United States user requirements. The managers further direct the CEO to certify that the operational and security requirements and practices of DTS conform to the highest security requirements and practices required by any U.S. government agency utilizing the DTS.

Consistent with Section 305 of the ''Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donovan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001'' (section 305 of appendix G of Public Law 106–113), the CEO shall: (1) ensure that those enhancements of, and the provision of service for, telecommunications capabilities that involve the national security interests of the United States receive the highest prioritization; (2) confirm the termination of all leases for satellite systems located at posts in criteria countries, unless all maintenance and servicing of the satellite system is undertaken by United States citizens who have received appropriate security clearances; and (3) implement a system of charges for utilization of bandwidth by all participating agencies, and institute a comprehensive charge-back system to recover all, or substantially all, of the other costs of telecommunications services provided through the DTS to each agency.

Beginning August 1, 2001, and every six months thereafter, the CEO shall submit a report to the oversight committees regarding the activities of DTS–PO during the preceding six months, the current capabilities of DTS–PO, and the priorities of DTS–PO for the subsequent six month period. The semiannual report shall include a discussion of any administrative, budgetary, legislative, or management issues that hinder the ability of DTS–PO to fulfill its mandate.

Upon the appointment of a CEO on May 1, 2001, the current positions of Director and Deputy Director of DTS–PO shall be eliminated. To assist the CEO, and to perform such duties as the CEO may require, there shall be two Deputy Executive Officers. The DTS–PO management staff will consist of not more than four other employees. The Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) shall prescribe the rates of basic pay for the CEO, the two Deputy Executive Officers, and any other DTS–PO employees.

SEC. 323. DIPLOMATIC TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE OVERSIGHT BOARD

Section 323 establishes a Diplomatic Telecommunications Service Oversight Board (''the Board''). The Board shall perform an oversight function with respect to DTS, DTS–PO, and the CEO. Specifically, the Board shall be empowered to review and approve: overall strategies, policies and goals established by DTS–PO; financial plans, budgets and periodic financing requests developed by DTS–PO; overall performance relative to approved budget plans; any DTS–PO reports, documents, and records; and audits of DTS–PO. The CEO will be responsible to this three-member board, which will be chaired by the Deputy Director of OMB. The two other board members shall be appointed by the President, as indicated in the classified annex to this bill. Decisions and directives of the Board shall require a majority vote of the Board. Although the Board will exercise oversight of, and provide management direction to, the CEO, the managers have authorized the CEO to control the day-to-day management and operations of DTS–PO and the DTS.

SEC. 324. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 324 requires that the Director of the OMB submit a report to the oversight committees not later than March 1, 2001. This report shall provide details on steps taken by the executive branch to restructure DTS–PO's management, to enhance the security practices of agencies participating in the DTS, and to develop a spending plan for the additional funds provided for the operation and improvement of DTS for fiscal year 2001.

The managers have determined that the most flexible procurement authority available to DTS–PO users shall be available to the DTS–PO. The notification requirements of sections 502, 504, and 505 of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended (50 U.S.C. 413a, 414, and 415, respectively) shall apply to DTS–PO, the CEO, and the Board.

It is the intent of Congress that the CEO shall have total and immediate insight into the complete operations of current and future DTS–PO and DTS operations. The managers expect the Secretary of State and the head of the other agency users to ensure this access. Likewise, Congress intends that the CEO can request the assistance of the Inspectors General of any agency user of the DTS and DTS–PO. The CEO should receive all reports from the IGs that relate to security of applicable overseas facilities and the DTS.

It is the intent of Congress that the Secretary of State, and the head of any other agency user of DTS, shall support the decisions and recommendations of the CEO in keeping with the current operation and transition of the DTS system. The CEO is expected to report any difficulties or obstacles presented by the agency users of the DTS in the implementation of these provisions.

TITLE IV—CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

SEC. 401. MODIFICATIONS TO CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY'S CENTRAL SERVICE PROGRAM

Section 401 is similar to Section 401 of the House bill and Section 403 of the Senate Amendment. The Senate recedes, with a technical modification.

There is concern among the managers relating to the costs levied by the Central Services Program upon the Langley Children's Center. These costs, for various and miscellaneous items or services provided by the Central Services Program to the nonprofit Center, seem overly burdensome. The Center is of great utility to the dedicated and hard-working parents employed by the CIA. It is the expectation of the managers that the Central Services Program, in an effort to recoup costs, would not impose costs that would have an adverse impact on the continuity of the services provided by the Langley Children's Center.

SEC. 402. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS

The House bill and the Senate amendment contained similar provisions. The Senate recedes to the House, with technical modifications.

SEC. 403. EXPANSION OF INSPECTOR GENERAL ACTIONS REQUIRING A REPORT TO CONGRESS

Section 403 is similar to Section 401 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes, with technical modifications.

The conferees intend that this additional reporting requirement identified in the new Section 17(d)(3)(B) will arise when an investigation, inspection, or audit carried out by the Inspector General focuses upon the official identified in (i) or (ii), specifically, as opposed to an investigation, inspection, or audit of the office that the official heads, with only incidental references to the official.

SEC. 404. DETAIL OF EMPLOYEES TO THE NATIONAL RECONNAISSANCE OFFICE

Section 404 is identical to Section 404 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes. The managers request that the DCI supply the intelligence committees with a report to be submitted annually, beginning October 1, 2001, that includes the number of detailees assigned pursuant to this provision and a description of the positions filled by the detailees.

SEC. 405. TRANSFERS OF FUNDS TO OTHER AGENCIES FOR ACQUISITION OF LAND

Section 405 is similar to Section 405 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes, with a technical amendment.

SEC. 406. ELIGIBILITY OF ADDITIONAL EMPLOYEES FOR REIMBURSEMENT FOR PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY INSURANCE

Section 406 is identical to Section 406 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes.

TITLE V—DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

SEC. 501. CONTRACTING AUTHORITY FOR THE NATIONAL RECONNAISSANCE OFFICE

Section 501 is similar to Section 502 of the House bill. The Senate amendment had no similar provision. The Senate recedes, with a technical amendment.

SEC. 502. ROLE OF DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE IN EXPERIMENTAL PERSONNEL PROGRAM FOR CERTAIN SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL PERSONNEL

Section 502 is identical to Section 502 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes.

SEC. 503. MEASUREMENT AND SIGNATURE INTELLIGENCE

Section 503 is identical to Section 506 of the Senate amendment. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes.

TITLE VI—COUNTERINTELLIGENCE MATTERS

THE ''COUNTERINTELLIGENCE REFORM ACT OF 2000''

Title VI includes Title VI of the Senate amendment. This language is similar to S. 2089, introduced on February 24, 2000. The bill was reported by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence on July 20, 2000 (S. Report No. 106–352). The Senate Judiciary Committee had previously acted favorably upon the bill. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes, with minor modifications.

Title VI, as passed by the Senate on October 2, 2000, included a limitation on the obligation and expenditure of funds authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2001 for the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review (OIPR) within the Department of Justice until two reports were submitted to the appropriate committees. These reports were to describe the use to which the funds would be put in order to improve the efficiency of the FBI and the OIPR in the application and implementation process under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. In anticipation of passage of the Senate amendment, the Department of Justice submitted a draft version of the required reports to the congressional committees. Given the prompt response, the limitation for the obligation and expenditure of fiscal year 2001 funds is removed. The managers have left in place, however, the similar limitation on funds for fiscal years 2002 and 2003, pending the receipt of the recurring annual report required by section 606(b)(2).

TITLE VII—DECLASSIFICATION OF INFORMATION

''THE PUBLIC INTEREST DECLASSIFICATION ACT''

Title VII includes Title VIII of the Senate amendment. This title was based on the bills H.R. 3152 and S. 1801, introduced in the House and Senate in the 106th Congress, respectively. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes, with technical amendments.

Section 701 states that the title may be cited as the ''Public Interest Declassification Act of 2000.'' Section 702 makes findings concerning the importance of public access to information that does not require continued protection to maintain the national security interests of the United States. Section 703 establishes a nine-person board to advise the President and other senior executive branch officials on classification and declassification policies, particularly on policies concerning the systematic, thorough, coordinated, and comprehensive review for declassification of records and materials that are of archival value, including records and materials of extraordinary public interest. The Board is also charged with promoting the fullest possible public access to a thorough, accurate, and reliable documentary record of significant US national security decisions and significant US national security activities.

Section 704 sets forth the requirement that heads of agencies with the authority to classify information must brief the Board on an annual basis, at the request of the Board or the intelligence oversight committees, on such agency's declassification policies and practices. The Board is to provide the agency with its recommendations on how the agency's declassification program could be improved. The Board is also responsible for making recommendations to the President on initiatives to identify, collect, and review for declassification classified records and materials of extraordinary public interest. The section also requires the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to publish a description of the President's declassification program and priorities, together with a listing of funds requested to implement that program, concurrent with the submission to Congress of the President's budget each fiscal year.

Sections 705, 706, and 707 set forth the standards governing access to and protection of national security information and other information covered under this title. Section 708 provides an authorization of appropriations for the Board. Section 709 sets forth definitions of the terms used in Title VII. The effective date of Title VII is 120 days after the date of enactment of the Act. The provisions of the title expire four years after the date of enactment of the Act.

TITLE VIII—DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION ON JAPANESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT

THE ''NAZI WAR CRIMES AND JAPANESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT DISCLOSURE ACT OF 2000''

Title VIII is similar to title VII of the Senate amendment, which was identical to the language of H.R. 3561 and S. 1902. The House had no similar provision. The House recedes, with modifications.

The modifications require that the interagency working group established pursuant to the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act of 1999 (P.L. 105–246) be expanded and assigned the responsibility of also carrying out the requirements of this title. The managers decided this was the most cost-effective approach, rather than establishing a new interagency working group.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2415, BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 2000

Mr. GEKAS (during the Special Order of Mr. SCHAFFER) submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 2415) to enhance security of United States missions and personnel overseas, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 106–970)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2415), an Act to enhance security of United States missions and personnel overseas, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. ENACTMENT OF BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 2000.

The provisions of S. 3186 of the 106th Congress, as introduced on October 11, 2000, are hereby enacted into law.

SEC. 2. PUBLICATION OF ACT.

In publishing this Act in slip form and in the United States Statutes at Large pursuant to section 112 of title 1, United States Code, the Archivist of the United States shall include after the date of approval an appendix setting forth the provisions referred to in section 1.

And the Senate agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2415) an Act to enhance security of United States missions and personnel overseas, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment.

The conference agreement would enact the provision of S. 3186 of the 106th Congress, as introduced on October 11, 2000. The text of that bill follows:

TITLE XIV—GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS

Sec. 1401. Effective date; application of amendments.

TITLE I—NEEDS—BASED BANKRUPTCY

SEC. 101. CONVERSION.

Section 706(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''or consents to'' after ''requests''.

SEC. 102. DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 707 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

''§ 707. Dismissal of a case or conversion to a case under chapter 11 or 13'';*

and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(b)'';

(B) in paragraph (1), as redesignated by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph—

(i) in the first sentence—

(I) by striking ''but not at the request or suggestion of'' and inserting ''trustee, bankruptcy administrator, or'';

(II) by inserting '', or, with the debtor's consent, convert such a case to a case under chapter 11 or 13 of this title,'' after ''consumer debts''; and

(III) by striking ''a substantial abuse'' and inserting ''an abuse''; and

(ii) by striking the next to last sentence; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(2)(A)(i) In considering under paragraph (1) whether the granting of relief would be an abuse of the provisions of this chapter, the court shall presume abuse exists if the debtor's current monthly income reduced by the amounts determined under clauses (ii), (iii), and (iv), and multiplied by 60 is not less than the lesser of—

''(I) 25 percent of the debtor's nonpriority unsecured claims in the case, or $6,000, whichever is greater; or

''(II) $10,000.

''(ii)(I) The debtor's monthly expenses shall be the debtor's applicable monthly expense amounts specified under the National Standards and Local Standards, and the debtor's actual monthly expenses for the categories specified as Other Necessary Expenses issued by the Internal Revenue Service for the area in which the debtor resides, as in effect on the date of the entry of the order for relief, for the debtor, the dependents of the debtor, and the spouse of the debtor in a joint case, if the spouse is not otherwise a dependent. Notwithstanding any other provision of this clause, the monthly expenses of the debtor shall not include any payments for debts. In addition, the debtor's monthly expenses shall include the debtor's reasonably necessary expenses incurred to maintain the safety of the debtor and the family of the debtor from family violence as identified under section 309 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10408), or other applicable Federal law. The expenses included in the debtor's monthly expenses described in the preceding sentence shall be kept confidential by the court. In addition, if it is demonstrated that it is reasonable and necessary, the debtor's monthly expenses may also include an additional allowance for food and clothing of up to 5 percent of the food and clothing categories as specified by the National Standards issued by the Internal Revenue Service.

''(II) In addition, the debtor's monthly expenses may include, if applicable, the continuation of actual expenses paid by the debtor that are reasonable and necessary for care and support of an elderly, chronically ill, or disabled household member or member of the debtor's immediate family (including parents, grandparents, and siblings of the debtor, the dependents of the debtor, and the spouse of the debtor in a joint case) who is not a dependent and who is unable to pay for such reasonable and necessary expenses.

''(III) In addition, for a debtor eligible for chapter 13, the debtor's monthly expenses may include the actual administrative expenses of administering a chapter 13 plan for the district in which the debtor resides, up to an amount of 10 percent of the projected plan payments, as determined under schedules issued by the Executive Office for United States Trustees.

''(IV) In addition, the debtor's monthly expenses may include the actual expenses for each dependent child under the age of 18 years up to $1,500 per year per child to attend a private elementary or secondary school, if the debtor provides documentation of such expenses and a detailed explanation of why such expenses are reasonable and necessary.

''(iii) The debtor's average monthly payments on account of secured debts shall be calculated as—

''(I) the sum of—

''(aa) the total of all amounts scheduled as contractually due to secured creditors in each month of the 60 months following the date of the petition; and

''(bb) any additional payments to secured creditors necessary for the debtor, in filing a plan under chapter 13 of this title, to maintain possession of the debtor's primary residence, motor vehicle, or other property necessary for the support of the debtor and the debtor's dependents, that serves as collateral for secured debts; divided by

''(II) 60.

''(iv) The debtor's expenses for payment of all priority claims (including priority child support and alimony claims) shall be calculated as—

''(I) the total amount of debts entitled to priority; divided by

''(II) 60.

''(B)(i) In any proceeding brought under this subsection, the presumption of abuse may only be rebutted by demonstrating special circumstances that justify additional expenses or adjustments of current monthly income for which there is no reasonable alternative.

''(ii) In order to establish special circumstances, the debtor shall be required to—

''(I) itemize each additional expense or adjustment of income; and

''(II) provide—

''(aa) documentation for such expense or adjustment to income; and

''(bb) a detailed explanation of the special circumstances that make such expenses or adjustment to income necessary and reasonable.

''(iii) The debtor shall attest under oath to the accuracy of any information provided to demonstrate that additional expenses or adjustments to income are required.

''(iv) The presumption of abuse may only be rebutted if the additional expenses or adjustments to income referred to in clause (i) cause the product of the debtor's current monthly income reduced by the amounts determined under clauses (ii), (iii), and (iv) of subparagraph (A) when multiplied by 60 to be less than the lesser of—

''(I) 25 percent of the debtor's nonpriority unsecured claims, or $6,000, whichever is greater; or

''(II) $10,000.

''(C) As part of the schedule of current income and expenditures required under section 521, the debtor shall include a statement of the debtor's current monthly income, and the calculations that determine whether a presumption arises under subparagraph (A)(i), that shows how each such amount is calculated.

''(3) In considering under paragraph (1) whether the granting of relief would be an abuse of the provisions of this chapter in a case in which the presumption in subparagraph (A)(i) of such paragraph does not apply or has been rebutted, the court shall consider—

''(A) whether the debtor filed the petition in bad faith; or

''(B) the totality of the circumstances (including whether the debtor seeks to reject a personal services contract and the financial need for such rejection as sought by the debtor) of the debtor's financial situation demonstrates abuse.

''(4)(A) The court shall order the counsel for the debtor to reimburse the trustee for all reasonable costs in prosecuting a motion brought under section 707(b), including reasonable attorneys' fees, if—

''(i) a trustee appointed under section 586(a)(1) of title 28 or from a panel of private trustees maintained by the bankruptcy administrator brings a motion for dismissal or conversion under this subsection; and

''(ii) the court—

''(I) grants that motion; and

''(II) finds that the action of the counsel for the debtor in filing under this chapter violated rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

''(B) If the court finds that the attorney for the debtor violated rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, at a minimum, the court shall order—

''(i) the assessment of an appropriate civil penalty against the counsel for the debtor; and

''(ii) the payment of the civil penalty to the trustee, the United States trustee, or the bankruptcy administrator.

''(C) In the case of a petition, pleading, or written motion, the signature of an attorney shall constitute a certification that the attorney has—

''(i) performed a reasonable investigation into the circumstances that gave rise to the petition, pleading, or written motion; and

''(ii) determined that the petition, pleading, or written motion—

''(I) is well grounded in fact; and

''(II) is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law and does not constitute an abuse under paragraph (1).

''(D) The signature of an attorney on the petition shall constitute a certification that the attorney has no knowledge after an inquiry that the information in the schedules filed with such petition is incorrect.

''(5)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B) and subject to paragraph (6), the court may award a debtor all reasonable costs (including reasonable attorneys' fees) in contesting a motion brought by a party in interest (other than a trustee, United States trustee, or bankruptcy administrator) under this subsection if—

''(i) the court does not grant the motion; and

''(ii) the court finds that—

''(I) the position of the party that brought the motion violated rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure; or

''(II) the party brought the motion solely for the purpose of coercing a debtor into waiving a right guaranteed to the debtor under this title.

''(B) A small business that has a claim of an aggregate amount less than $1,000 shall not be subject to subparagraph (A)(ii)(I).

''(C) For purposes of this paragraph—

''(i) the term 'small business' means an unincorporated business, partnership, corporation, association, or organization that—

''(I) has less than 25 full-time employees as determined on the date the motion is filed; and

''(II) is engaged in commercial or business activity; and

''(ii) the number of employees of a wholly owned subsidiary of a corporation includes the employees of—

''(I) a parent corporation; and

''(II) any other subsidiary corporation of the parent corporation.

''(6) Only the judge, United States trustee, or bankruptcy administrator may bring a motion under section 707(b), if the current monthly income of the debtor, or in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse, as of the date of the order for relief, when multiplied by 12, is equal to or less than—

''(A) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census;

''(B) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2, 3, or 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(C) in the case of a debtor in a household exceeding 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of 4 or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census, plus $525 per month for each individual in excess of 4.

''(7) No judge, United States trustee, panel trustee, bankruptcy administrator or other party in interest may bring a motion under paragraph (2), if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, as of the date of the order for relief when multiplied by 12, is equal to or less than—

''(A) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census;

''(B) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2, 3, or 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(C) in the case of a debtor in a household exceeding 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of 4 or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census, plus $525 per month for each individual in excess of 4.''.

(b) DEFINITION.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (10) the following:

''(10A) 'current monthly income'—

''(A) means the average monthly income from all sources which the debtor, or in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse, receive without regard to whether the income is taxable income, derived during the 6-month period preceding the date of determination; and

''(B) includes any amount paid by any entity other than the debtor (or, in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse), on a regular basis to the household expenses of the debtor or the debtor's dependents (and, in a joint case, the debtor's spouse if not otherwise a dependent), but excludes benefits received under the Social Security Act and payments to victims of war crimes or crimes against humanity on account of their status as victims of such crimes;''.

(c) UNITED STATES TRUSTEE AND BANKRUPTCY ADMINISTRATOR DUTIES.—Section 704 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''The trustee shall—''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b)(1) With respect to an individual debtor under this chapter—

''(A) the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall review all materials filed by the debtor and, not later than 10 days after the date of the first meeting of creditors, file with the court a statement as to whether the debtor's case would be presumed to be an abuse under section 707(b); and

''(B) not later than 5 days after receiving a statement under subparagraph (A), the court shall provide a copy of the statement to all creditors.

''(2) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall, not later than 30 days after the date of filing a statement under paragraph (1), either file a motion to dismiss or convert under section 707(b) or file a statement setting forth the reasons the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator does not believe that such a motion would be appropriate, if the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator determines that the debtor's case should be presumed to be an abuse under section 707(b) and the product of the debtor's current monthly income, multiplied by 12 is not less than—

''(A) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(B) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2 or more individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census.

''(3) In any case in which a motion to dismiss or convert, or a statement is required to be filed by this subsection, the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator may decline to file a motion to dismiss or convert pursuant to section 704(b)(2) if the product of the debtor's current monthly income multiplied by 12 exceeds 100 percent, but does not exceed 150 percent of—

''(A)(i) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(ii) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2 or more individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; and

''(B) the product of the debtor's current monthly income, reduced by the amounts determined under section 707(b)(2)(A)(ii) (except for the amount calculated under the other necessary expenses standard issued by the Internal Revenue Service) and clauses (iii) and (iv) of section 707(b)(2)(A), multiplied by 60 is less than the lesser of—

''(i) 25 percent of the debtor's nonpriority unsecured claims in the case or $6,000, whichever is greater; or

''(ii) $10,000.''.

(d) NOTICE.—Section 342 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(d) In an individual case under chapter 7 in which the presumption of abuse is triggered under section 707(b), the clerk shall give written notice to all creditors not later than 10 days after the date of the filing of the petition that the presumption of abuse has been triggered.''.

(e) NONLIMITATION OF INFORMATION.—Nothing in this title shall limit the ability of a creditor to provide information to a judge (except for information communicated ex parte, unless otherwise permitted by applicable law), United States trustee, bankruptcy administrator or trustee.

(f) DISMISSAL FOR CERTAIN CRIMES.—Section 707 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this section, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(c)(1) In this subsection—

''(A) the term 'crime of violence' has the meaning given that term in section 16 of title 18; and

''(B) the term 'drug trafficking crime' has the meaning given that term in section 924(c)(2) of title 18.

''(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), after notice and a hearing, the court, on a motion by the victim of a crime of violence or a drug trafficking crime, may when it is in the best interest of the victims dismiss a voluntary case filed by an individual debtor under this chapter if that individual was convicted of that crime.

''(3) The court may not dismiss a case under paragraph (2) if the debtor establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that the filing of a case under this chapter is necessary to satisfy a claim for a domestic support obligation.''.

(g) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN.—Section 1325(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (5), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (6), by striking the period and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(7) the action of the debtor in filing the petition was in good faith;''.

(h) APPLICABILITY OF MEANS TEST TO CHAPTER 13.—Section 1325(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(B), by inserting ''to unsecured creditors'' after ''to make payments''; and

(2) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

''(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'disposable income' means current monthly income received by the debtor (other than child support payments, foster care payments, or disability payments for a dependent child made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law to the extent reasonably necessary to be expended for such child) less amounts reasonably necessary to be expended—

''(A) for the maintenance or support of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor or for a domestic support obligation that first becomes payable after the date the petition is filed and for charitable contributions (that meet the definition of 'charitable contribution' under section 548(d)(3) to a qualified religious or charitable entity or organization (as that term is defined in section 548(d)(4)) in an amount not to exceed 15 percent of gross income of the debtor for the year in which the contributions are made; and

''(B) if the debtor is engaged in business, for the payment of expenditures necessary for the continuation, preservation, and operation of such business.

''(3) Amounts reasonably necessary to be expended under paragraph (2) shall be determined in accordance with subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 707(b)(2), if the debtor has current monthly income, when multiplied by 12, greater than—

''(A) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census;

''(B) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2, 3, or 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(C) in the case of a debtor in a household exceeding 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of 4 or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census, plus $525 per month for each individual in excess of 4.''.

(i) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 7 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 707 and inserting the following:

''707. Dismissal of a case or conversion to a case under chapter 11 or 13.''.

SEC. 103. SENSE OF CONGRESS AND STUDY.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of the Treasury has the authority to alter the Internal Revenue Service standards established to set guidelines for repayment plans as needed to accommodate their use under section 707(b) of title 11, United States Code.

(b) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees shall submit a report to the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives containing the findings of the Director regarding the utilization of Internal Revenue Service standards for determining—

(A) the current monthly expenses of a debtor under section 707(b) of title 11, United States Code; and

(B) the impact that the application of such standards has had on debtors and on the bankruptcy courts.

(2) RECOMMENDATION.—The report under paragraph (1) may include recommendations for amendments to title 11, United States Code, that are consistent with the findings of the Director under paragraph (1).

SEC. 104. NOTICE OF ALTERNATIVES.

Section 342(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(b) Before the commencement of a case under this title by an individual whose debts are primarily consumer debts, the clerk shall give to such individual written notice containing—

''(1) a brief description of—

''(A) chapters 7, 11, 12, and 13 and the general purpose, benefits, and costs of proceeding under each of those chapters; and

''(B) the types of services available from credit counseling agencies; and

''(2) statements specifying that—

''(A) a person who knowingly and fraudulently conceals assets or makes a false oath or statement under penalty of perjury in connection with a bankruptcy case shall be subject to fine, imprisonment, or both; and

''(B) all information supplied by a debtor in connection with a bankruptcy case is subject to examination by the Attorney General.''.

SEC. 105. DEBTOR FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT TRAINING TEST PROGRAM.

(a) DEVELOPMENT OF FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT AND TRAINING CURRICULUM AND MATERIALS.—The Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees (in this section referred to as the ''Director'') shall consult with a wide range of individuals who are experts in the field of debtor education, including trustees who are appointed under chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, and who operate financial management education programs for debtors, and shall develop a financial management training curriculum and materials that can be used to educate individual debtors on how to better manage their finances.

(b) TEST.—

(1) SELECTION OF DISTRICTS.—The Director shall select 6 judicial districts of the United States in which to test the effectiveness of the financial management training curriculum and materials developed under subsection (a).

(2) USE.—For an 18-month period beginning not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, such curriculum and materials shall be, for the 6 judicial districts selected under paragraph (1), used as the instructional course concerning personal financial management for purposes of section 111 of title 11, United States Code.

(c) EVALUATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—During the 18-month period referred to in subsection (b), the Director shall evaluate the effectiveness of—

(A) the financial management training curriculum and materials developed under subsection (a); and

(B) a sample of existing consumer education programs such as those described in the Report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission (October 20, 1997) that are representative of consumer education programs carried out by the credit industry, by trustees serving under chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, and by consumer counseling groups.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 3 months after concluding such evaluation, the Director shall submit a report to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate, for referral to the appropriate committees of the Congress, containing the findings of the Director regarding the effectiveness of such curriculum, such materials, and such programs and their costs.

SEC. 106. CREDIT COUNSELING.

(a) WHO MAY BE A DEBTOR.—Section 109 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h)(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), and notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an individual may not be a debtor under this title unless that individual has, during the 180-day period preceding the date of filing of the petition of that individual, received from an approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency described in section 111(a) an individual or group briefing (including a briefing conducted by telephone or on the Internet) that outlined the opportunities for available credit counseling and assisted that individual in performing a related budget analysis.

''(2)(A) Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who resides in a district for which the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator of the bankruptcy court of that district determines that the approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agencies for that district are not reasonably able to provide adequate services to the additional individuals who would otherwise seek credit counseling from that agency by reason of the requirements of paragraph (1).

''(B) Each United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator that makes a determination described in subparagraph (A) shall review that determination not later than 1 year after the date of that determination, and not less frequently than every year thereafter. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, a nonprofit budget and credit counseling service may be disapproved by the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator at any time.

''(3)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), the requirements of paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who submits to the court a certification that—''(i) describes exigent circumstances that merit a waiver of the requirements of paragraph (1);

''(ii) states that the debtor requested credit counseling services from an approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency, but was unable to obtain the services referred to in paragraph (1) during the 5-day period beginning on the date on which the debtor made that request; and

''(iii) is satisfactory to the court.

''(B) With respect to a debtor, an exemption under subparagraph (A) shall cease to apply to that debtor on the date on which the debtor meets the requirements of paragraph (1), but in no case may the exemption apply to that debtor after the date that is 30 days after the debtor files a petition, except that the court, for cause, may order an additional 15 days.''.

(b) CHAPTER 7 DISCHARGE.—Section 727(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (9), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (10), by striking the period and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(11) after the filing of the petition, the debtor failed to complete an instructional course concerning personal financial management described in section 111.

''(12)(A) Paragraph (11) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who resides in a district for which the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator of that district determines that the approved instructional courses are not adequate to service the additional individuals required to complete such instructional courses under this section.

''(B) Each United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator that makes a determination described in subparagraph (A) shall review that determination not later than 1 year after the date of that determination, and not less frequently than every year thereafter.''.

(c) CHAPTER 13 DISCHARGE.—Section 1328 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(g) The court shall not grant a discharge under this section to a debtor, unless after filing a petition the debtor has completed an instructional course concerning personal financial management described in section 111.

''(h) Subsection (g) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who resides in a district for which the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator of the bankruptcy court of that district determines that the approved instructional courses are not adequate to service the additional individuals who would be required to complete the instructional course by reason of the requirements of this section.

''(i) Each United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator that makes a determination described in subsection (h) shall review that determination not later than 1 year after the date of that determination, and not less frequently than every year thereafter.''.

(d) DEBTOR'S DUTIES.—Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''The debtor shall—''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b) In addition to the requirements under subsection (a), an individual debtor shall file with the court—

''(1) a certificate from the approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency that provided the debtor services under section 109(h) describing the services provided to the debtor; and

''(2) a copy of the debt repayment plan, if any, developed under section 109(h) through the approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency referred to in paragraph (1).''.

(e) GENERAL PROVISIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 1 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 111. Credit counseling services; financial management instructional courses

''(a) The clerk of each district shall maintain a publicly available list of—

''(1) credit counseling agencies that provide 1 or more programs described in section 109(h) currently approved by the United States trustee or the bankruptcy administrator for the district, as applicable; and

''(2) instructional courses concerning personal financial management currently approved by the United States trustee or the bankruptcy administrator for the district, as applicable.

''(b) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall only approve a credit counseling agency or instructional course concerning personal financial management as follows:

''(1) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall have thoroughly reviewed the qualifications of the credit counseling agency or of the provider of the instructional course under the standards set forth in this section, and the programs or instructional courses which will be offered by such agency or provider, and may require an agency or provider of an instructional course which has sought approval to provide information with respect to such review.

''(2) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall have determined that the credit counseling agency or course of instruction fully satisfies the applicable standards set forth in this section.

''(3) When an agency or course of instruction is initially approved, such approval shall be for a probationary period not to exceed 6 months. An agency or course of instruction is initially approved if it did not appear on the approved list for the district under subsection (a) immediately prior to approval.

''(4) At the conclusion of the probationary period under paragraph (3), the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator may only approve for an additional 1-year period, and for successive 1-year periods thereafter, any agency or course of instruction which has demonstrated during the probationary or subsequent period that such agency or course of instruction—

''(A) has met the standards set forth under this section during such period; and

''(B) can satisfy such standards in the future.

''(5) Not later than 30 days after any final decision under paragraph (4), that occurs either after the expiration of the initial probationary period, or after any 2-year period thereafter, an interested person may seek judicial review of such decision in the appropriate United States District Court.

''(c)(1) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall only approve a credit counseling agency that demonstrates that it will provide qualified counselors, maintain adequate provision for safekeeping and payment of client funds, provide adequate counseling with respect to client credit problems, and deal responsibly and effectively with other matters as relate to the quality, effectiveness, and financial security of such programs.

''(2) To be approved by the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator, a credit counseling agency shall, at a minimum—

''(A) be a nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency, the majority of the board of directors of which—

''(i) are not employed by the agency; and

''(ii) will not directly or indirectly benefit financially from the outcome of a credit counseling session;

''(B) if a fee is charged for counseling services, charge a reasonable fee, and provide services without regard to ability to pay the fee;

''(C) provide for safekeeping and payment of client funds, including an annual audit of the trust accounts and appropriate employee bonding;

''(D) provide full disclosures to clients, including funding sources, counselor qualifications, possible impact on credit reports, and any costs of such program that will be paid by the debtor and how such costs will be paid;

''(E) provide adequate counseling with respect to client credit problems that includes an analysis of their current situation, what brought them to that financial status, and how they can develop a plan to handle the problem without incurring negative amortization of their debts;

''(F) provide trained counselors who receive no commissions or bonuses based on the counseling session outcome, and who have adequate experience, and have been adequately trained to provide counseling services to individuals in financial difficulty, including the matters described in subparagraph (E);

''(G) demonstrate adequate experience and background in providing credit counseling; and

''(H) have adequate financial resources to provide continuing support services for budgeting plans over the life of any repayment plan.

''(d) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall only approve an instructional course concerning personal financial management—

''(1) for an initial probationary period under subsection (b)(3) if the course will provide at a minimum—

''(A) trained personnel with adequate experience and training in providing effective instruction and services;

''(B) learning materials and teaching methodologies designed to assist debtors in understanding personal financial management and that are consistent with stated objectives directly related to the goals of such course of instruction;

''(C) adequate facilities situated in reasonably convenient locations at which such course of instruction is offered, except that such facilities may include the provision of such course of instruction or program by telephone or through the Internet, if the course of instruction or program is effective; and

''(D) the preparation and retention of reasonable records (which shall include the debtor's bankruptcy case number) to permit evaluation of the effectiveness of such course of instruction or program, including any evaluation of satisfaction of course of instruction or program requirements for each debtor attending such course of instruction or program, which shall be available for inspection and evaluation by the Executive Office for United States Trustees, the United States trustee, bankruptcy administrator, or chief bankruptcy judge for the district in which such course of instruction or program is offered; and

''(2) for any 1-year period if the provider thereof has demonstrated that the course meets the standards of paragraph (1) and, in addition—

''(A) has been effective in assisting a substantial number of debtors to understand personal financial management; and

''(B) is otherwise likely to increase substantially debtor understanding of personal financial management.

''(e) The District Court may, at any time, investigate the qualifications of a credit counseling agency referred to in subsection (a), and request production of documents to ensure the integrity and effectiveness of such credit counseling agencies. The District Court may, at any time, remove from the approved list under subsection (a) a credit counseling agency upon finding such agency does not meet the qualifications of subsection (b).

''(f) The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator shall notify the clerk that a credit counseling agency or an instructional course is no longer approved, in which case the clerk shall remove it from the list maintained under subsection (a).

''(g)(1) No credit counseling service may provide to a credit reporting agency information concerning whether an individual debtor has received or sought instruction concerning personal financial management from the credit counseling service.

''(2) A credit counseling service that willfully or negligently fails to comply with any requirement under this title with respect to a debtor shall be liable for damages in an amount equal to the sum of—

''(A) any actual damages sustained by the debtor as a result of the violation; and

''(B) any court costs or reasonable attorneys' fees (as determined by the court) incurred in an action to recover those damages.''.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 1 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''111. Credit counseling services; financial management instructional courses.''.

(f) LIMITATION.—Section 362 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) If a case commenced under chapter 7, 11, or 13 is dismissed due to the creation of a debt repayment plan, for purposes of subsection (c)(3), any subsequent case commenced by the debtor under any such chapter shall not be presumed to be filed not in good faith.

''(j) On request of a party in interest, the court shall issue an order under subsection (c) confirming that the automatic stay has been terminated.''.

SEC. 107. SCHEDULES OF REASONABLE AND NECESSARY EXPENSES.

For purposes of section 707(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees shall, not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, issue schedules of reasonable and necessary administrative expenses of administering a chapter 13 plan for each judicial district of the United States.

TITLE II—ENHANCED CONSUMER PROTECTION

Subtitle A—Penalties for Abusive Creditor Practices

SEC. 201. PROMOTION OF ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION.

(a) REDUCTION OF CLAIM.—Section 502 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(k)(1) The court, on the motion of the debtor and after a hearing, may reduce a claim filed under this section based in whole on unsecured consumer debts by not more than 20 percent of the claim, if—

''(A) the claim was filed by a creditor who unreasonably refused to negotiate a reasonable alternative repayment schedule proposed by an approved credit counseling agency described in section 111 acting on behalf of the debtor;

''(B) the offer of the debtor under subparagraph (A)—

''(i) was made at least 60 days before the filing of the petition; and

''(ii) provided for payment of at least 60 percent of the amount of the debt over a period not to exceed the repayment period of the loan, or a reasonable extension thereof; and

''(C) no part of the debt under the alternative repayment schedule is nondischargeable.

''(2) The debtor shall have the burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence, that—

''(A) the creditor unreasonably refused to consider the debtor's proposal; and

''(B) the proposed alternative repayment schedule was made prior to expiration of the 60-day period specified in paragraph (1)(B)(i).''.

(b) LIMITATION ON AVOIDABILITY.—Section 547 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) The trustee may not avoid a transfer if such transfer was made as a part of an alternative repayment plan between the debtor and any creditor of the debtor created by an approved credit counseling agency.''.

SEC. 202. EFFECT OF DISCHARGE.

Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) The willful failure of a creditor to credit payments received under a plan confirmed under this title (including a plan of reorganization confirmed under chapter 11 of this title), unless the plan is dismissed, in default, or the creditor has not received payments required to be made under the plan in the manner required by the plan (including crediting the amounts required under the plan), shall constitute a violation of an injunction under subsection (a)(2) if the act of the creditor to collect and failure to credit payments in the manner required by the plan caused material injury to the debtor.

''(j) Subsection (a)(2) does not operate as an injunction against an act by a creditor that is the holder of a secured claim, if—

''(1) such creditor retains a security interest in real property that is the principal residence of the debtor;

''(2) such act is in the ordinary course of business between the creditor and the debtor; and

''(3) such act is limited to seeking or obtaining periodic payments associated with a valid security interest in lieu of pursuit of in rem relief to enforce the lien.''.

SEC. 203. DISCOURAGING ABUSE OF REAFFIRMATION PRACTICES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) in subsection (c), by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

''(2) the debtor received the disclosures described in subsection (k) at or before the time at which the debtor signed the agreement;'';

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(k)(1) The disclosures required under subsection (c)(2) shall consist of the disclosure statement described in paragraph (3), completed as required in that paragraph, together with the agreement, statement, declaration, motion and order described, respectively, in paragraphs (4) through (8), and shall be the only disclosures required in connection with the reaffirmation.

''(2) Disclosures made under paragraph (1) shall be made clearly and conspicuously and in writing. The terms 'Amount Reaffirmed' and 'Annual Percentage Rate' shall be disclosed more conspicuously than other terms, data or information provided in connection with this disclosure, except that the phrases 'Before agreeing to reaffirm a debt, review these important disclosures' and 'Summary of Reaffirmation Agreement' may be equally conspicuous. Disclosures may be made in a different order and may use terminology different from that set forth in paragraphs (2) through (8), except that the terms 'Amount Reaffirmed' and 'Annual Percentage Rate' must be used where indicated.

''(3) The disclosure statement required under this paragraph shall consist of the following:

''(A) The statement: 'Part A: Before agreeing to reaffirm a debt, review these important disclosures:';

''(B) Under the heading 'Summary of Reaffirmation Agreement', the statement: 'This Summary is made pursuant to the requirements of the Bankruptcy Code';

''(C) The 'Amount Reaffirmed', using that term, which shall be—

''(i) the total amount which the debtor agrees to reaffirm, and

''(ii) the total of any other fees or cost accrued as of the date of the disclosure statement.

''(D) In conjunction with the disclosure of the 'Amount Reaffirmed', the statements—

''(i) 'The amount of debt you have agreed to reaffirm'; and

''(ii) 'Your credit agreement may obligate you to pay additional amounts which may come due after the date of this disclosure. Consult your credit agreement.'.

''(E) The 'Annual Percentage Rate', using that term, which shall be disclosed as—

''(i) if, at the time the petition is filed, the debt is open end credit as defined under the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), then—

''(I) the annual percentage rate determined under paragraphs (5) and (6) of section 127(b) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(b)(5) and (6)), as applicable, as disclosed to the debtor in the most recent periodic statement prior to the agreement or, if no such periodic statement has been provided the debtor during the prior 6 months, the annual percentage rate as it would have been so disclosed at the time the disclosure statement is given the debtor, or to the extent this annual percentage rate is not readily available or not applicable, then

''(II) the simple interest rate applicable to the amount reaffirmed as of the date the disclosure statement is given to the debtor, or if different simple interest rates apply to different balances, the simple interest rate applicable to each such balance, identifying the amount of each such balance included in the amount reaffirmed, or

''(III) if the entity making the disclosure elects, to disclose the annual percentage rate under subclause (I) and the simple interest rate under subclause (II);

''(ii) if, at the time the petition is filed, the debt is closed end credit as defined under the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), then—

''(I) the annual percentage rate under section 128(a)(4) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1638(a)(4)), as disclosed to the debtor in the most recent disclosure statement given the debtor prior to the reaffirmation agreement with respect to the debt, or, if no such disclosure statement was provided the debtor, the annual percentage rate as it would have been so disclosed at the time the disclosure statement is given the debtor, or to the extent this annual percentage rate is not readily available or not applicable, then

''(II) the simple interest rate applicable to the amount reaffirmed as of the date the disclosure statement is given the debtor, or if different simple interest rates apply to different balances, the simple interest rate applicable to each such balance, identifying the amount of such balance included in the amount reaffirmed, or

''(III) if the entity making the disclosure elects, to disclose the annual percentage rate under (I) and the simple interest rate under (II).

''(F) If the underlying debt transaction was disclosed as a variable rate transaction on the most recent disclosure given under the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), by stating 'The interest rate on your loan may be a variable interest rate which changes from time to time, so that the annual percentage rate disclosed here may be higher or lower.'.

''(G) If the debt is secured by a security interest which has not been waived in whole or in part or determined to be void by a final order of the court at the time of the disclosure, by disclosing that a security interest or lien in goods or property is asserted over some or all of the obligations you are reaffirming and listing the items and their original purchase price that are subject to the asserted security interest, or if not a purchase-money security interest then listing by items or types and the original amount of the loan.

''(H) At the election of the creditor, a statement of the repayment schedule using 1 or a combination of the following—

''(i) by making the statement: 'Your first payment in the amount of $_____ is due on _____ but the future payment amount may be different. Consult your reaffirmation or credit agreement, as applicable.', and stating the amount of the first payment and the due date of that payment in the places provided;

''(ii) by making the statement: 'Your payment schedule will be:', and describing the repayment schedule with the number, amount and due dates or period of payments scheduled to repay the obligations reaffirmed to the extent then known by the disclosing party; or

''(iii) by describing the debtor's repayment obligations with reasonable specificity to the extent then known by the disclosing party.

''(I) The following statement: 'Note: When this disclosure refers to what a creditor 'may' do, it does not use the word 'may' to give the creditor specific permission. The word 'may' is used to tell you what might occur if the law permits the creditor to take the action. If you have questions about your reaffirmation or what the law requires, talk to the attorney who helped you negotiate this agreement. If you don't have an attorney helping you, the judge will explain the effect of your reaffirmation when the reaffirmation hearing is held.'.

''(J)(i) The following additional statements:

'''Reaffirming a debt is a serious financial decision. The law requires you to take certain steps to make sure the decision is in your best interest. If these steps are not completed, the reaffirmation agreement is not effective, even though you have signed it.

'''1. Read the disclosures in this Part A carefully. Consider the decision to reaffirm carefully. Then, if you want to reaffirm, sign the reaffirmation agreement in Part B (or you may use a separate agreement you and your creditor agree on).

'''2. Complete and sign Part D and be sure you can afford to make the payments you are agreeing to make and have received a copy of the disclosure statement and a completed and signed reaffirmation agreement.

'''3. If you were represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, the attorney must have signed the certification in Part C.

'''4. If you were not represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, you must have completed and signed Part E.

'''5. The original of this disclosure must be filed with the court by you or your creditor. If a separate reaffirmation agreement (other than the one in Part B) has been signed, it must be attached.

'''6. If you were represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, your reaffirmation agreement becomes effective upon filing with the court unless the reaffirmation is presumed to be an undue hardship as explained in Part D.

'''7. If you were not represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, it will not be effective unless the court approves it. The court will notify you of the hearing on your reaffirmation agreement. You must attend this hearing in bankruptcy court where the judge will review your agreement. The bankruptcy court must approve the agreement as consistent with your best interests, except that no court approval is required if the agreement is for a consumer debt secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, security deed or other lien on your real property, like your home.

'''Your right to rescind a reaffirmation. You may rescind (cancel) your reaffirmation at any time before the bankruptcy court enters a discharge order or within 60 days after the agreement is filed with the court, whichever is longer. To rescind or cancel, you must notify the creditor that the agreement is canceled.

'''What are your obligations if you reaffirm the debt? A reaffirmed debt remains your personal legal obligation. It is not discharged in your bankruptcy. That means that if you default on your reaffirmed debt after your bankruptcy is over, your creditor may be able to take your property or your wages. Otherwise, your obligations will be determined by the reaffirmation agreement which may have changed the terms of the original agreement. For example, if you are reaffirming an open end credit agreement, the creditor may be permitted by that agreement or applicable law to change the terms of the agreement in the future under certain conditions.

'''Are you required to enter into a reaffirmation agreement by any law? No, you are not required to reaffirm a debt by any law. Only agree to reaffirm a debt if it is in your best interest. Be sure you can afford the payments you agree to make.

'''What if your creditor has a security interest or lien? Your bankruptcy discharge does not eliminate any lien on your property. A ''lien'' is often referred to as a security interest, deed of trust, mortgage or security deed. Even if you do not reaffirm and your personal liability on the debt is discharged, because of the lien your creditor may still have the right to take the security property if you do not pay the debt or default on it. If the lien is on an item of personal property that is exempt under your State's law or that the trustee has abandoned, you may be able to redeem the item rather than reaffirm the debt. To redeem, you make a single payment to the creditor equal to the current value of the security property, as agreed by the parties or determined by the court.'.

''(ii) In the case of a reaffirmation under subsection (m)(2), numbered paragraph 6 in the disclosures required by clause (i) of this subparagraph shall read as follows:

'''6. If you were represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, your reaffirmation agreement becomes effective upon filing with the court.'.

''(4) The form of reaffirmation agreement required under this paragraph shall consist of the following:

'''Part B: Reaffirmation Agreement. I/we agree to reaffirm the obligations arising under the credit agreement described below.

'''Brief description of credit agreement:

'''Description of any changes to the credit agreement made as part of this reaffirmation agreement:

'''Signature: Date:

'''Borrower:

'''Co-borrower, if also reaffirming:

'''Accepted by creditor:

'''Date of creditor acceptance:'.

''(5)(A) The declaration shall consist of the following:

'''Part C: Certification by Debtor's Attorney (If Any).

'''I hereby certify that (1) this agreement represents a fully informed and voluntary agreement by the debtor(s); (2) this agreement does not impose an undue hardship on the debtor or any dependent of the debtor; and (3) I have fully advised the debtor of the legal effect and consequences of this agreement and any default under this agreement.

'''Signature of Debtor's Attorney: Date:'.

''(B) In the case of reaffirmations in which a presumption of undue hardship has been established, the certification shall state that in the opinion of the attorney, the debtor is able to make the payment.

''(C) In the case of a reaffirmation agreement under subsection (m)(2), subparagraph (B) is not applicable.

''(6)(A) The statement in support of reaffirmation agreement, which the debtor shall sign and date prior to filing with the court, shall consist of the following:

'''Part D: Debtor's Statement in Support of Reaffirmation Agreement.

'''1. I believe this agreement will not impose an undue hardship on my dependents or me. I can afford to make the payments on the reaffirmed debt because my monthly income (take home pay plus any other income received) is $_____, and my actual current monthly expenses including monthly payments on post-bankruptcy debt and other reaffirmation agreements total $_____, leaving $_____ to make the required payments on this reaffirmed debt. I understand that if my income less my monthly expenses does not leave enough to make the payments, this reaffirmation agreement is presumed to be an undue hardship on me and must be reviewed by the court. However, this presumption may be overcome if I explain to the satisfaction of the court how I can afford to make the payments here: _____.

'''2. I received a copy of the Reaffirmation Disclosure Statement in Part A and a completed and signed reaffirmation agreement.'.

''(B) Where the debtor is represented by counsel and is reaffirming a debt owed to a creditor defined in section 19(b)(1)(A)(iv) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 461(b)(1)(A)(iv)), the statement of support of the reaffirmation agreement, which the debtor shall sign and date prior to filing with the court, shall consist of the following:

'''I believe this agreement is in my financial interest. I can afford to make the payments on the reaffirmed debt. I received a copy of the Reaffirmation Disclosure Statement in Part A and a completed and signed reaffirmation agreement.'

''(7) The motion, which may be used if approval of the agreement by the court is required in order for it to be effective and shall be signed and dated by the moving party, shall consist of the following:

'''Part E: Motion for Court Approval (To be completed only where debtor is not represented by an attorney.). I (we), the debtor, affirm the following to be true and correct:

'''I am not represented by an attorney in connection with this reaffirmation agreement.

'''I believe this agreement is in my best interest based on the income and expenses I have disclosed in my Statement in Support of this reaffirmation agreement above, and because (provide any additional relevant reasons the court should consider):

'''Therefore, I ask the court for an order approving this reaffirmation agreement.'.

''(8) The court order, which may be used to approve a reaffirmation, shall consist of the following:

'''Court Order: The court grants the debtor's motion and approves the reaffirmation agreement described above.'.

''(9) Subsection (a)(2) does not operate as an injunction against an act by a creditor that is the holder of a secured claim, if—

''(A) such creditor retains a security interest in real property that is the debtor's principal residence;

''(B) such act is in the ordinary course of business between the creditor and the debtor; and

''(C) such act is limited to seeking or obtaining periodic payments associated with a valid security interest in lieu of pursuit of in rem relief to enforce the lien.

''(l) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title:

''(1) A creditor may accept payments from a debtor before and after the filing of a reaffirmation agreement with the court.

''(2) A creditor may accept payments from a debtor under a reaffirmation agreement which the creditor believes in good faith to be effective.

''(3) The requirements of subsections (c)(2) and (k) shall be satisfied if disclosures required under those subsections are given in good faith.

''(m)(1) Until 60 days after a reaffirmation agreement is filed with the court (or such additional period as the court, after notice and hearing and for cause, orders before the expiration of such period), it shall be presumed that the reaffirmation agreement is an undue hardship on the debtor if the debtor's monthly income less the debtor's monthly expenses as shown on the debtor's completed and signed statement in support of the reaffirmation agreement required under subsection (k)(6)(A) is less than the scheduled payments on the reaffirmed debt. This presumption shall be reviewed by the court. The presumption may be rebutted in writing by the debtor if the statement includes an explanation which identifies additional sources of funds to make the payments as agreed upon under the terms of the reaffirmation agreement. If the presumption is not rebutted to the satisfaction of the court, the court may disapprove the agreement. No agreement shall be disapproved without notice and hearing to the debtor and creditor and such hearing shall be concluded before the entry of the debtor's discharge.

''(2) This subsection does not apply to reaffirmation agreements where the creditor is a credit union, as defined in section 19(b)(1)(A)(iv) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 461(b)(1)(A)(iv)).''.

(b) LAW ENFORCEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 9 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 158. Designation of United States attorneys and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to address abusive reaffirmations of debt and materially fraudulent statements in bankruptcy schedules

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General of the United States shall designate the individuals described in subsection (b) to have primary responsibility in carrying out enforcement activities in addressing violations of section 152 or 157 relating to abusive reaffirmations of debt. In addition to addressing the violations referred to in the preceding sentence, the individuals described under subsection (b) shall address violations of section 152 or 157 relating to materially fraudulent statements in bankruptcy schedules that are intentionally false or intentionally misleading.

''(b) UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEYS AND AGENTS OF THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION—The individuals referred to in subsection (a) are—

''(1) a United States attorney for each judicial district of the United States; and

''(2) an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (within the meaning of section 3107) for each field office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

''(c) BANKRUPTCY INVESTIGATIONS.—Each United States attorney designated under this section shall, in addition to any other responsibilities, have primary responsibility for carrying out the duties of a United States attorney under section 3057.

''(d) BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURES.—The bankruptcy courts shall establish procedures for referring any case which may contain a materially fraudulent statement in a bankruptcy schedule to the individuals designated under this section.''.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 9 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''158. Designation of United States attorneys and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to address abusive reaffirmations of debt and materially fraudulent statements in bankruptcy schedules.''.

Subtitle B—Priority Child Support

SEC. 211. DEFINITION OF DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION.

Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (12A); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

''(14A) 'domestic support obligation' means a debt that accrues before or after the entry of an order for relief under this title, including interest that accrues on that debt as provided under applicable nonbankruptcy law notwithstanding any other provision of this title, that is—

''(A) owed to or recoverable by—

''(i) a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or such child's parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative; or

''(ii) a governmental unit;

''(B) in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support (including assistance provided by a governmental unit) of such spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or such child's parent, without regard to whether such debt is expressly so designated;

''(C) established or subject to establishment before or after entry of an order for relief under this title, by reason of applicable provisions of—

''(i) a separation agreement, divorce decree, or property settlement agreement;

''(ii) an order of a court of record; or

''(iii) a determination made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law by a governmental unit; and

''(D) not assigned to a nongovernmental entity, unless that obligation is assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child, or parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative of the child for the purpose of collecting the debt;''.

SEC. 212. PRIORITIES FOR CLAIMS FOR DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS.

Section 507(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (7);

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (6) as paragraphs (2) through (7), respectively;

(3) in paragraph (2), as redesignated, by striking ''First'' and inserting ''Second'';

(4) in paragraph (3), as redesignated, by striking ''Second'' and inserting ''Third'';

(5) in paragraph (4), as redesignated—

(A) by striking ''Third'' and inserting ''Fourth''; and

(B) by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting a period;

(6) in paragraph (5), as redesignated, by striking ''Fourth'' and inserting ''Fifth'';

(7) in paragraph (6), as redesignated, by striking ''Fifth'' and inserting ''Sixth'';

(8) in paragraph (7), as redesignated, by striking ''Sixth'' and inserting ''Seventh''; and

(9) by inserting before paragraph (2), as redesignated, the following:

''(1) First:

''(A) Allowed unsecured claims for domestic support obligations that, as of the date of the filing of the petition, are owed to or recoverable by a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor, or the parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative of such child, without regard to whether the claim is filed by such person or is filed by a governmental unit on behalf of that person, on the condition that funds received under this paragraph by a governmental unit under this title after the date of filing of the petition shall be applied and distributed in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(B) Subject to claims under subparagraph (A), allowed unsecured claims for domestic support obligations that, as of the date the petition was filed are assigned by a spouse, former spouse, child of the debtor, or such child's parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative to a governmental unit (unless such obligation is assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child, parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative of the child for the purpose of collecting the debt) or are owed directly to or recoverable by a government unit under applicable nonbankruptcy law, on the condition that funds received under this paragraph by a governmental unit under this title after the date of filing of the petition be applied and distributed in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law.''.

SEC. 213. REQUIREMENTS TO OBTAIN CONFIRMATION AND DISCHARGE IN CASES INVOLVING DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 1129(a), by adding at the end the following:

''(14) If the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order or statute to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order or statute for such obligation that first become payable after the date on which the petition is filed.'';

(2) in section 1208(c)—

(A) in paragraph (8), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (9), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(10) failure of the debtor to pay any domestic support obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed.'';

(3) in section 1222(a)—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a plan may provide for less than full payment of all amounts owed for a claim entitled to priority under section 507(a)(1)(B) only if the plan provides that all of the debtor's projected disposable income for a 5-year period, beginning on the date that the first payment is due under the plan, will be applied to make payments under the plan.'';

(4) in section 1222(b)—

(A) by redesignating paragraph (11) as paragraph (12); and

(B) by inserting after paragraph (10) the following:

''(11) provide for the payment of interest accruing after the date of the filing of the petition on unsecured claims that are nondischargeable under section 1328(a), except that such interest may be paid only to the extent that the debtor has disposable income available to pay such interest after making provision for full payment of all allowed claims;'';

(5) in section 1225(a)—

(A) in paragraph (5), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (6), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(10) in section 1325(a) (as amended by this Act), by adding at the end the following:

''(8) the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order or statute to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order or statute for such obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed; and'';

(11) in section 1328(a), in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting '', and in the case of a debtor who is required by a judicial or administrative order to pay a domestic support obligation, after such debtor certifies that all amounts payable under such order or statute that are due on or before the date of the certification (including amounts due before the petition was filed, but only to the extent provided for in the plan) have been paid'' after ''completion by the debtor of all payments under the plan''.

SEC. 214. EXCEPTIONS TO AUTOMATIC STAY IN DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION PROCEEDINGS.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

''(2) under subsection (a)—

''(A) of the commencement or continuation of a civil action or proceeding—

''(i) for the establishment of paternity;

''(ii) for the establishment or modification of an order for domestic support obligations;

''(iii) concerning child custody or visitation;

''(iv) for the dissolution of a marriage, except to the extent that such proceeding seeks to determine the division of property that is property of the estate; or

''(v) regarding domestic violence;

''(B) the collection of a domestic support obligation from property that is not property of the estate;

''(C) with respect to the withholding of income that is property of the estate or property of the debtor for payment of a domestic support obligation under a judicial or administrative order;

''(D) the withholding, suspension, or restriction of drivers' licenses, professional and occupational licenses, and recreational licenses under State law, as specified in section 466(a)(16) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(a)(16));

''(E) the reporting of overdue support owed by a parent to any consumer reporting agency as specified in section 466(a)(7) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(a)(7));

''(F) the interception of tax refunds, as specified in sections 464 and 466(a)(3) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 664 and 666(a)(3)) or under an analogous State law; or

''(G) the enforcement of medical obligations as specified under title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.);''.

SEC. 215. NONDISCHARGEABILITY OF CERTAIN DEBTS FOR ALIMONY, MAINTENANCE, AND SUPPORT.

Section 523 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking paragraph (5) and inserting the following:

''(5) for a domestic support obligation;'';

(B) in paragraph (15)—

(i) by inserting ''to a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor and'' before ''not of the kind'';

(ii) by inserting ''or'' after ''court of record,''; and

(1) in subsection (c), by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(1) a debt of a kind specified in paragraph (1) or (5) of section 523(a) (in which case, notwithstanding any provision of applicable nonbankruptcy law to the contrary, such property shall be liable for a debt of a kind specified in section 523(a)(5));'';

(2) in subsection (f)(1)(A), by striking the dash and all that follows through the end of the subparagraph and inserting ''of a kind that is specified in section 523(a)(5); or''; and

(3) in subsection (g)(2), by striking ''subsection (f)(2)'' and inserting ''subsection (f)(1)(B)''.

SEC. 217. PROTECTION OF DOMESTIC SUPPORT CLAIMS AGAINST PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER MOTIONS.

Section 547(c)(7) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(7) to the extent such transfer was a bona fide payment of a debt for a domestic support obligation;''.

SEC. 218. DISPOSABLE INCOME DEFINED.

(a) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN UNDER CHAPTER 12.—Section 1225(b)(2)(A) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''or for a domestic support obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed'' after ''dependent of the debtor''.

(b) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN UNDER CHAPTER 13.—Section 1325(b)(2)(A) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''or for a domestic support obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed'' after ''dependent of the debtor''.

SEC. 219. COLLECTION OF CHILD SUPPORT.

(a) DUTIES OF TRUSTEE UNDER CHAPTER 7.—Section 704 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (8), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (9), by striking the period and inserting a semicolon; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(10) if, with respect to an individual debtor, there is a claim for a domestic support obligation, provide the applicable notification specified in subsection (c); and''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(c)(1) In any case described in subsection (a)(10), the trustee shall—

''(A)(i) notify in writing the holder of the claim of the right of that holder to use the services of a State child support enforcement agency established under sections 464 and 466 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 664, 666) for the State in which the holder resides for assistance in collecting child support during and after the bankruptcy procedures;

''(ii) include in the notice under this paragraph the address and telephone number of the child support enforcement agency; and

''(iii) include in the notice an explanation of the rights of the holder of the claim to payment of the claim under this chapter; and

''(B)(i) notify in writing the State child support agency of the State in which the holder of the claim resides of the claim;

''(ii) include in the notice under this paragraph the name, address, and telephone number of the holder of the claim; and

''(iii) at such time as the debtor is granted a discharge under section 727, notify the holder of that claim and the State child support agency of the State in which that holder resides of—

''(I) the granting of the discharge;

''(II) the last recent known address of the debtor;

''(III) the last recent known name and address of the debtor's employer; and

''(IV) with respect to the debtor's case, the name of each creditor that holds a claim that—

''(aa) is not discharged under paragraph (2), (4), or (14A) of section 523(a); or

(F) by striking ''Such property is—''; and

(G) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) For purposes of paragraph (3)(C) and subsection (d)(12), the following shall apply:

''(A) If the retirement funds are in a retirement fund that has received a favorable determination under section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and that determination is in effect as of the date of the commencement of the case under section 301, 302, or 303 of this title, those funds shall be presumed to be exempt from the estate.

''(B) If the retirement funds are in a retirement fund that has not received a favorable determination under such section 7805, those funds are exempt from the estate if the debtor demonstrates that—

''(i) no prior determination to the contrary has been made by a court or the Internal Revenue Service; and

''(ii)(I) the retirement fund is in substantial compliance with the applicable requirements of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

''(II) the retirement fund fails to be in substantial compliance with the applicable requirements of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and the debtor is not materially responsible for that failure.

''(C) A direct transfer of retirement funds from 1 fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, under section 401(a)(31) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or otherwise, shall not cease to qualify for exemption under paragraph (3)(C) or subsection (d)(12) by reason of that direct transfer.

''(D)(i) Any distribution that qualifies as an eligible rollover distribution within the meaning of section 402(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or that is described in clause (ii) shall not cease to qualify for exemption under paragraph (3)(C) or subsection (d)(12) by reason of that distribution.

''(ii) A distribution described in this clause is an amount that—

''(I) has been distributed from a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

''(II) to the extent allowed by law, is deposited in such a fund or account not later than 60 days after the distribution of that amount.''; and

(2) in subsection (d)—

(A) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking ''subsection (b)(1)'' and inserting ''subsection (b)(2)''; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(12) Retirement funds to the extent that those funds are in a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.''.

(b) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (17), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (18), by striking the period and inserting a semicolon;

(3) by inserting after paragraph (18) the following:

''(19) under subsection (a), of withholding of income from a debtor's wages and collection of amounts withheld, under the debtor's agreement authorizing that withholding and collection for the benefit of a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other plan established under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, that is sponsored by the employer of the debtor, or an affiliate, successor, or predecessor of such employer—

''(A) to the extent that the amounts withheld and collected are used solely for payments relating to a loan from a plan that satisfies the requirements of section 408(b)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 or is subject to section 72(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

''(B) in the case of a loan from a thrift savings plan described in subchapter III of chapter 84 of title 5, that satisfies the requirements of section 8433(g) of such title;''; and

(4) by adding at the end of the flush material at the end of the subsection, the following: ''Nothing in paragraph (19) may be construed to provide that any loan made under a governmental plan under section 414(d), or a contract or account under section 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 constitutes a claim or a debt under this title.''.

(c) EXCEPTIONS TO DISCHARGE.—Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(18) owed to a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other plan established under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, under—

''(A) a loan permitted under section 408(b)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, or subject to section 72(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

''(B) a loan from the thrift savings plan described in subchapter III of chapter 84 of title 5, that satisfies the requirements of section 8433(g) of such title.

Nothing in paragraph (18) may be construed to provide that any loan made under a governmental plan under section 414(d), or a contract or account under section 403(b), of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 constitutes a claim or a debt under this title.''.

(d) PLAN CONTENTS.—Section 1322 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(f) A plan may not materially alter the terms of a loan described in section 362(b)(19) and any amounts required to repay such loan shall not constitute 'disposable income' under section 1325.''.

(e) ASSET LIMITATION.—Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(n) For assets in individual retirement accounts described in section 408 or 408A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, other than a simplified employee pension under section 408(k) of that Code or a simple retirement account under section 408(p) of that Code, the aggregate value of such assets exempted under this section, without regard to amounts attributable to rollover contributions under section 402(c), 402(e)(6), 403(a)(4), 403(a)(5), and 403(b)(8) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and earnings thereon, shall not exceed $1,000,000 (which amount shall be adjusted as provided in section 104 of this title) in a case filed by an individual debtor, except that such amount may be increased if the interests of justice so require.''.

SEC. 225. PROTECTION OF EDUCATION SAVINGS IN BANKRUPTCY.

(a) EXCLUSIONS.—Section 541 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (4), by striking ''or'' at the end;

''(D) a depository institution (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) or any Federal credit union or State credit union (as those terms are defined in section 101 of the Federal Credit Union Act), or any affiliate or subsidiary of such a depository institution or credit union; or

''(E) an author, publisher, distributor, or seller of works subject to copyright protection under title 17, when acting in such capacity.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 104(b)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''101(3),'' after ''sections''.

SEC. 227. RESTRICTIONS ON DEBT RELIEF AGENCIES.

(a) ENFORCEMENT.—Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 526. Restrictions on debt relief agencies

''(a) A debt relief agency shall not—

''(1) fail to perform any service that such agency informed an assisted person or prospective assisted person it would provide in connection with a case or proceeding under this title;

''(2) make any statement, or counsel or advise any assisted person or prospective assisted person to make a statement in a document filed in a case or proceeding under this title, that is untrue and misleading, or that upon the exercise of reasonable care, should have been known by such agency to be untrue or misleading;

''(3) misrepresent to any assisted person or prospective assisted person, directly or indirectly, affirmatively or by material omission, with respect to—

''(i) the services that such agency will provide to such person; or

''(ii) the benefits and risks that may result if such person becomes a debtor in a case under this title; or

''(4) advise an assisted person or prospective assisted person to incur more debt in contemplation of such person filing a case under this title or to pay an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer fee or charge for services performed as part of preparing for or representing a debtor in a case under this title.

''(b) Any waiver by any assisted person of any protection or right provided under this section shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any Federal or State court or any other person, but may be enforced against a debt relief agency.

''(c)(1) Any contract for bankruptcy assistance between a debt relief agency and an assisted person that does not comply with the material requirements of this section, section 527, or section 528 shall be void and may not be enforced by any Federal or State court or by any other person, other than such assisted person.

''(2) Any debt relief agency shall be liable to an assisted person in the amount of any fees or charges in connection with providing bankruptcy assistance to such person that such debt relief agency has received, for actual damages, and for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs if such agency is found, after notice and hearing, to have—

''(A) intentionally or negligently failed to comply with any provision of this section, section 527, or section 528 with respect to a case or proceeding under this title for such assisted person;

''(B) provided bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in a case or proceeding under this title that is dismissed or converted to a case under another chapter of this title because of such agency's intentional or negligent failure to file any required document including those specified in section 521; or

''(C) intentionally or negligently disregarded the material requirements of this title or the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure applicable to such agency.

''(3) In addition to such other remedies as are provided under State law, whenever the chief law enforcement officer of a State, or an official or agency designated by a State, has reason to believe that any person has violated or is violating this section, the State—

''(A) may bring an action to enjoin such violation;

''(B) may bring an action on behalf of its residents to recover the actual damages of assisted persons arising from such violation, including any liability under paragraph (2); and

''(C) in the case of any successful action under subparagraph (A) or (B), shall be awarded the costs of the action and reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court.

''(4) The United States District Court for any district located in the State shall have concurrent jurisdiction of any action under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (3).

''(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law and in addition to any other remedy provided under Federal or State law, if the court, on its own motion or on motion of the United States trustee or the debtor, finds that a person intentionally violated this section, or engaged in a clear and consistent pattern or practice of violating this section, the court may—

''(A) enjoin the violation of such section; or

''(B) impose an appropriate civil penalty against such person.''.

''(d) No provision of this section, section 527, or section 528 shall—

''(1) annul, alter, affect, or exempt any person subject to such sections from complying with any law of any State except to the extent that such law is inconsistent with those sections, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency; or

''(2) be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability—

''(A) of a State or subdivision or instrumentality thereof, to determine and enforce qualifications for the practice of law under the laws of that State; or

''(B) of a Federal court to determine and enforce the qualifications for the practice of law before that court.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the item relating to section 527, the following:

''526. Debt relief enforcement.''.

SEC. 228. DISCLOSURES.

(a) DISCLOSURES.—Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 527. Disclosures

''(a) A debt relief agency providing bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person shall provide—

''(1) the written notice required under section 342(b)(1) of this title; and

''(2) to the extent not covered in the written notice described in paragraph (1), and not later than 3 business days after the first date on which a debt relief agency first offers to provide any bankruptcy assistance services to an assisted person, a clear and conspicuous written notice advising assisted persons that—

''(A) all information that the assisted person is required to provide with a petition and thereafter during a case under this title is required to be complete, accurate, and truthful;

''(B) all assets and all liabilities are required to be completely and accurately disclosed in the documents filed to commence the case, and the replacement value of each asset as defined in section 506 of this title must be stated in those documents where requested after reasonable inquiry to establish such value;

''(C) current monthly income, the amounts specified in section 707(b)(2), and, in a case under chapter 13, disposable income (determined in accordance with section 707(b)(2)), are required to be stated after reasonable inquiry; and

''(D) information that an assisted person provides during their case may be audited pursuant to this title, and that failure to provide such information may result in dismissal of the proceeding under this title or other sanction including, in some instances, criminal sanctions.

''(b) A debt relief agency providing bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person shall provide each assisted person at the same time as the notices required under subsection (a)(1) with the following statement, to the extent applicable, or one substantially similar. The statement shall be clear and conspicuous and shall be in a single document separate from other documents or notices provided to the assisted person:

''''IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT BANKRUPTCY ASSISTANCE SERVICES FROM AN ATTORNEY OR BANKRUPTCY PETITION PREPARER.

''''If you decide to seek bankruptcy relief, you can represent yourself, you can hire an attorney to represent you, or you can get help in some localities from a bankruptcy petition preparer who is not an attorney. THE LAW REQUIRES AN ATTORNEY OR BANKRUPTCY PETITION PREPARER TO GIVE YOU A WRITTEN CONTRACT SPECIFYING WHAT THE ATTORNEY OR BANKRUPTCY PETITION PREPARER WILL DO FOR YOU AND HOW MUCH IT WILL COST. Ask to see the contract before you hire anyone.

''''The following information helps you understand what must be done in a routine bankruptcy case to help you evaluate how much service you need. Although bankruptcy can be complex, many cases are routine.

''''Before filing a bankruptcy case, either you or your attorney should analyze your eligibility for different forms of debt relief made available by the Bankruptcy Code and which form of relief is most likely to be beneficial for you. Be sure you understand the relief you can obtain and its limitations. To file a bankruptcy case, documents called a Petition, Schedules and Statement of Financial Affairs, as well as in some cases a Statement of Intention need to be prepared correctly and filed with the bankruptcy court. You will have to pay a filing fee to the bankruptcy court. Once your case starts, you will have to attend the required first meeting of creditors where you may be questioned by a court official called a 'trustee' and by creditors.

''''If you choose to file a chapter 7 case, you may be asked by a creditor to reaffirm a debt. You may want help deciding whether to do so and a creditor is not permitted to coerce you into reaffirming your debts.

''''If you choose to file a chapter 13 case in which you repay your creditors what you can afford over 3 to 5 years, you may also want help with preparing your chapter 13 plan and with the confirmation hearing on your plan which will be before a bankruptcy judge.

''''If you select another type of relief under the Bankruptcy Code other than chapter 7 or chapter 13, you will want to find out what needs to be done from someone familiar with that type of relief.

''''Your bankruptcy case may also involve litigation. You are generally permitted to represent yourself in litigation in bankruptcy court, but only attorneys, not bankruptcy petition preparers, can give you legal advice.'.

''(c) Except to the extent the debt relief agency provides the required information itself after reasonably diligent inquiry of the assisted person or others so as to obtain such information reasonably accurately for inclusion on the petition, schedules or statement of financial affairs, a debt relief agency providing bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person, to the extent permitted by nonbankruptcy law, shall provide each assisted person at the time required for the notice required under subsection (a)(1) reasonably sufficient information (which shall be provided in a clear and conspicuous writing) to the assisted person on how to provide all the information the assisted person is required to provide under this title pursuant to section 521, including—

''(1) how to value assets at replacement value, determine current monthly income, the amounts specified in section 707(b)(2)) and, in a chapter 13 case, how to determine disposable income in accordance with section 707(b)(2) and related calculations;

''(2) how to complete the list of creditors, including how to determine what amount is owed and what address for the creditor should be shown; and

''(3) how to determine what property is exempt and how to value exempt property at replacement value as defined in section 506 of this title.

''(d) A debt relief agency shall maintain a copy of the notices required under subsection (a) of this section for 2 years after the date on which the notice is given the assisted person.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 526 the following:

''527. Disclosures.''.

SEC. 229. REQUIREMENTS FOR DEBT RELIEF AGENCIES.

(a) ENFORCEMENT.—Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 528. Requirements for debt relief agencies

''(a) A debt relief agency shall—

''(1) not later than 5 business days after the first date such agency provides any bankruptcy assistance services to an assisted person, but prior to such assisted person's petition under this title being filed, execute a written contract with such assisted person that explains clearly and conspicuously—

''(A) the services such agency will provide to such assisted person; and

''(B) the fees or charges for such services for such services, and the terms of payment;

''(2) provide the assisted person with a copy of the fully executed and completed contract;

''(3) clearly and conspicuously disclose in any advertisement of bankruptcy assistance services or of the benefits of bankruptcy directed to the general public (whether in general media, seminars or specific mailings, telephonic or electronic messages, or otherwise) that the services or benefits are with respect to bankruptcy relief under this title; and

''(4) clearly and conspicuously using the following statement: 'We are a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the Bankruptcy Code.' or a substantially similar statement.

''(b)(1) An advertisement of bankruptcy assistance services or of the benefits of bankruptcy directed to the general public includes—

''(A) descriptions of bankruptcy assistance in connection with a chapter 13 plan whether or not chapter 13 is specifically mentioned in such advertisement; and

''(B) statements such as 'federally supervised repayment plan' or 'Federal debt restructuring help' or other similar statements that could lead a reasonable consumer to believe that debt counseling was being offered when in fact the services were directed to providing bankruptcy assistance with a chapter 13 plan or other form of bankruptcy relief under this title.

''(2) An advertisement, directed to the general public, indicating that the debt relief agency provides assistance with respect to credit defaults, mortgage foreclosures, eviction proceedings, excessive debt, debt collection pressure, or inability to pay any consumer debt shall—

''(A) disclose clearly and conspicuously in such advertisement that the assistance may involve bankruptcy relief under this title; and

''(B) include the following statement: 'We are a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the Bankruptcy Code,' or a substantially similar statement.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 527, the following:

''528. Debtor's bill of rights.''.

SEC. 230. GAO STUDY.

(a) STUDY.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of the feasibility, effectiveness, and cost of requiring trustees appointed under title 11, United States Code, or the bankruptcy courts, to provide to the Office of Child Support Enforcement promptly after the commencement of cases by individual debtors under such title, the names and social security numbers of such debtors for the purposes of allowing such Office to determine whether such debtors have outstanding obligations for child support (as determined on the basis of information in the Federal Case Registry or other national database).

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 300 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives a report containing the results of the study required by subsection (a).

TITLE III—DISCOURAGING BANKRUPTCY ABUSE

SEC. 301. REINFORCEMENT OF THE FRESH START.

Section 523(a)(17) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''by a court'' and inserting ''on a prisoner by any court'',

(2) by striking ''section 1915(b) or (f)'' and inserting ''subsection (b) or (f)(2) of section 1915'', and

(3) by inserting ''(or a similar non-Federal law)'' after ''title 28'' each place it appears.

SEC. 302. DISCOURAGING BAD FAITH REPEAT FILINGS.

Section 362(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(3) if a single or joint case is filed by or against an individual debtor under chapter 7, 11, or 13, and if a single or joint case of the debtor was pending within the preceding 1-year period but was dismissed, other than a case refiled under a chapter other than chapter 7 after dismissal under section 707(b)—

''(A) the stay under subsection (a) with respect to any action taken with respect to a debt or property securing such debt or with respect to any lease shall terminate with respect to the debtor on the 30th day after the filing of the later case;

''(B) upon motion by a party in interest for continuation of the automatic stay and upon notice and a hearing, the court may extend the stay in particular cases as to any or all creditors (subject to such conditions or limitations as the court may then impose) after notice and a hearing completed before the expiration of the 30-day period only if the party in interest demonstrates that the filing of the later case is in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed; and

''(C) for purposes of subparagraph (B), a case is presumptively filed not in good faith (but such presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary)—

''(i) as to all creditors, if—

''(I) more than 1 previous case under any of chapter 7, 11, or 13 in which the individual was a debtor was pending within the preceding 1-year period;

''(II) a previous case under any of chapter 7, 11, or 13 in which the individual was a debtor was dismissed within such 1-year period, after the debtor failed to—

''(aa) file or amend the petition or other documents as required by this title or the court without substantial excuse (but mere inadvertence or negligence shall not be a substantial excuse unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney);

''(bb) provide adequate protection as ordered by the court; or

''(cc) perform the terms of a plan confirmed by the court; or

''(III) there has not been a substantial change in the financial or personal affairs of the debtor since the dismissal of the next most previous case under chapter 7, 11, or 13 or any other reason to conclude that the later case will be concluded—

''(aa) if a case under chapter 7, with a discharge; or

''(bb) if a case under chapter 11 or 13, with a confirmed plan which will be fully performed; and

''(ii) as to any creditor that commenced an action under subsection (d) in a previous case in which the individual was a debtor if, as of the date of dismissal of such case, that action was still pending or had been resolved by terminating, conditioning, or limiting the stay as to actions of such creditor; and

''(4)(A)(i) if a single or joint case is filed by or against an individual debtor under this title, and if 2 or more single or joint cases of the debtor were pending within the previous year but were dismissed, other than a case refiled under section 707(b), the stay under subsection (a) shall not go into effect upon the filing of the later case; and

''(ii) on request of a party in interest, the court shall promptly enter an order confirming that no stay is in effect;

''(B) if, within 30 days after the filing of the later case, a party in interest requests the court may order the stay to take effect in the case as to any or all creditors (subject to such conditions or limitations as the court may impose), after notice and hearing, only if the party in interest demonstrates that the filing of the later case is in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed;

''(C) a stay imposed under subparagraph (B) shall be effective on the date of entry of the order allowing the stay to go into effect; and

''(D) for purposes of subparagraph (B), a case is presumptively not filed in good faith (but such presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary)—

''(i) as to all creditors if—

''(I) 2 or more previous cases under this title in which the individual was a debtor were pending within the 1-year period;

''(II) a previous case under this title in which the individual was a debtor was dismissed within the time period stated in this paragraph after the debtor failed to file or amend the petition or other documents as required by this title or the court without substantial excuse (but mere inadvertence or negligence shall not be substantial excuse unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney), failed to pay adequate protection as ordered by the court, or failed to perform the terms of a plan confirmed by the court; or

''(III) there has not been a substantial change in the financial or personal affairs of the debtor since the dismissal of the next most previous case under this title, or any other reason to conclude that the later case will not be concluded, if a case under chapter 7, with a discharge, and if a case under chapter 11 or 13, with a confirmed plan that will be fully performed; or

''(ii) as to any creditor that commenced an action under subsection (d) in a previous case in which the individual was a debtor if, as of the date of dismissal of such case, such action was still pending or had been resolved by terminating, conditioning, or limiting the stay as to action of such creditor.''.

SEC. 303. CURBING ABUSIVE FILINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 362(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) with respect to a stay of an act against real property under subsection (a), by a creditor whose claim is secured by an interest in such real estate, if the court finds that the filing of the bankruptcy petition was part of a scheme to delay, hinder, and defraud creditors that involved either—

''(A) transfer of all or part ownership of, or other interest in, the real property without the consent of the secured creditor or court approval; or

''(B) multiple bankruptcy filings affecting the real property.

If recorded in compliance with applicable State laws governing notices of interests or liens in real property, an order entered under this subsection shall be binding in any other case under this title purporting to affect the real property filed not later than 2 years after the date of entry of such order by the court, except that a debtor in a subsequent case may move for relief from such order based upon changed circumstances or for good cause shown, after notice and a hearing. Any Federal, State, or local governmental unit that accepts notices of interests or liens in real property shall accept any certified copy of an order described in this subsection for indexing and recording.''.

(b) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (19), as added by this Act, the following:

''(20) under subsection (a), of any act to enforce any lien against or security interest in real property following the entry of an order under section 362(d)(4) as to that property in any prior bankruptcy case for a period of 2 years after entry of such an order, except that the debtor, in a subsequent case, may move the court for relief from such order based upon changed circumstances or for other good cause shown, after notice and a hearing;

''(21) under subsection (a), of any act to enforce any lien against or security interest in real property—

''(A) if the debtor is ineligible under section 109(g) to be a debtor in a bankruptcy case; or

''(B) if the bankruptcy case was filed in violation of a bankruptcy court order in a prior bankruptcy case prohibiting the debtor from being a debtor in another bankruptcy case;''.

SEC. 304. DEBTOR RETENTION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY SECURITY.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 521(a) (as so designated by this Act)—

(A) in paragraph (4), by striking '', and'' at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (5), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(6) in an individual case under chapter 7 of this title, not retain possession of personal property as to which a creditor has an allowed claim for the purchase price secured in whole or in part by an interest in that personal property unless, in the case of an individual debtor, the debtor, not later than 45 days after the first meeting of creditors under section 341(a), either—

''(A) enters into an agreement with the creditor pursuant to section 524(c) of this title with respect to the claim secured by such property; or

''(B) redeems such property from the security interest pursuant to section 722 of this title.

If the debtor fails to so act within the 45-day period referred to in paragraph (6), the stay under section 362(a) of this title is terminated with respect to the personal property of the estate or of the debtor which is affected, such property shall no longer be property of the estate, and the creditor may take whatever action as to such property as is permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law, unless the court determines on the motion of the trustee brought before the expiration of such 45-day period, and after notice and a hearing, that such property is of consequential value or benefit to the estate, orders appropriate adequate protection of the creditor's interest, and orders the debtor to deliver any collateral in the debtor's possession to the trustee.''; and

(2) in section 722, by inserting ''in full at the time of redemption'' before the period at the end.

SEC. 305. RELIEF FROM THE AUTOMATIC STAY WHEN THE DEBTOR DOES NOT COMPLETE INTENDED SURRENDER OF CONSUMER DEBT COLLATERAL.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 362—

(A) in subsection (c), by striking ''(e), and (f)'' inserting ''(e), (f), and (h)'';

(B) by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (k); and

(C) by inserting after subsection (g) the following:

''(h)(1) In an individual case under chapter 7, 11, or 13, the stay provided by subsection (a) is terminated with respect to personal property of the estate or of the debtor securing in whole or in part a claim, or subject to an unexpired lease, and such personal property shall no longer be property of the estate if the debtor fails within the applicable time set by section 521(a)(2) of this title—

''(A) to file timely any statement of intention required under section 521(a)(2) of this title with respect to that property or to indicate in that statement that the debtor will either surrender the property or retain it and, if retaining it, either redeem the property pursuant to section 722 of this title, reaffirm the debt it secures pursuant to section 524(c) of this title, or assume the unexpired lease pursuant to section 365(p) of this title if the trustee does not do so, as applicable; and

''(B) to take timely the action specified in that statement of intention, as it may be amended before expiration of the period for taking action, unless the statement of intention specifies reaffirmation and the creditor refuses to reaffirm on the original contract terms.

''(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply if the court determines, on the motion of the trustee filed before the expiration of the applicable time set by section 521(a)(2), after notice and a hearing, that such property is of consequential value or benefit to the estate, and orders appropriate adequate protection of the creditor's interest, and orders the debtor to deliver any collateral in the debtor's possession to the trustee. If the court does not so determine, the stay provided by subsection (a) shall terminate upon the conclusion of the proceeding on the motion.''; and

(2) in section 521—

(A) in subsection (a)(2), as so designated by this Act, by striking ''consumer'';

(B) in subsection (a)(2)(B), as so designated by this Act—

(i) by striking ''forty-five days after the filing of a notice of intent under this section'' and inserting ''30 days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors under section 341(a) of this title''; and

(ii) by striking ''forty-five day'' and inserting ''30-day'';

(C) in subsection (a)(2)(C), as so designated by this Act, by inserting '', except as provided in section 362(h) of this title'' before the semicolon; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

''(d) If the debtor fails timely to take the action specified in subsection (a)(6) of this section, or in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 362(h) of this title, with respect to property which a lessor or bailor owns and has leased, rented, or bailed to the debtor or as to which a creditor holds a security interest not otherwise voidable under section 522(f), 544, 545, 547, 548, or 549 of this title, nothing in this title shall prevent or limit the operation of a provision in the underlying lease or agreement which has the effect of placing the debtor in default under such lease or agreement by reason of the occurrence, pendency, or existence of a proceeding under this title or the insolvency of the debtor. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to justify limiting such a provision in any other circumstance.''.

SEC. 306. GIVING SECURED CREDITORS FAIR TREATMENT IN CHAPTER 13.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(i) the plan provides that—

''(I) the holder of such claim retain the lien securing such claim until the earlier of—

''(aa) the payment of the underlying debt determined under nonbankruptcy law; or

''(bb) discharge under section 1328; and

''(II) if the case under this chapter is dismissed or converted without completion of the plan, such lien shall also be retained by such holder to the extent recognized by applicable nonbankruptcy law; and''.

(b) RESTORING THE FOUNDATION FOR SECURED CREDIT.—Section 1325(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following flush sentence:

''For purposes of paragraph (5), section 506 shall not apply to a claim described in that paragraph if the creditor has a purchase money security interest securing the debt that is the subject of the claim, the debt was incurred within the 5-year period preceding the filing of the petition, and the collateral for that debt consists of a motor vehicle (as defined in section 30102 of title 49) acquired for the personal use of the debtor, or if collateral for that debt consists of any other thing of value, if the debt was incurred during the 1-year period preceding that filing.''.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) by inserting after paragraph (13) the following:

''(13A) 'debtor's principal residence'—

''(A) means a residential structure, including incidental property, without regard to whether that structure is attached to real property; and

''(B) includes an individual condominium or cooperative unit, a mobile or manufactured home, or trailer;''; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (27), the following:

''(27A) 'incidental property' means, with respect to a debtor's principal residence—

''(A) property commonly conveyed with a principal residence in the area where the real estate is located;

''(B) all easements, rights, appurtenances, fixtures, rents, royalties, mineral rights, oil or gas rights or profits, water rights, escrow funds, or insurance proceeds; and

''(C) all replacements or additions;''.

SEC. 307. DOMICILIARY REQUIREMENTS FOR EXEMPTIONS.

Section 522(b)(3)(A) of title 11, United States Code, as so designated by this Act, is amended—

(1) by striking ''180 days'' and inserting ''730 days''; and

(2) by striking '', or for a longer portion of such 180-day period than in any other place'' and inserting ''or if the debtor's domicile has not been located at a single State for such 730-day period, the place in which the debtor's domicile was located for 180 days immediately preceding the 730-day period or for a longer portion of such 180-day period than in any other place''.

SEC. 308. RESIDENCY REQUIREMENT FOR HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(3)(A), as so designated by this Act, by inserting ''subject to subsections (o) and (p),'' before ''any property''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(o) For purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A), and notwithstanding subsection (a), the value of an interest in—

''(1) real or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;

''(2) a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence; or shall be reduced to the extent that such value is attributable to any portion of any property that the debtor disposed of in the 7-year period ending on the date of the filing of the petition with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor and that the debtor could not exempt, or that portion that the debtor could not exempt, under subsection (b), if on such date the debtor had held the property so disposed of.''.

''(3) a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor;

SEC. 309. PROTECTING SECURED CREDITORS IN CHAPTER 13 CASES.

(a) STOPPING ABUSIVE CONVERSIONS FROM CHAPTER 13.—Section 348(f)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) by striking ''in the converted case, with allowed secured claims'' and inserting ''only in a case converted to a case under chapter 11 or 12, but not in a case converted to a case under chapter 7, with allowed secured claims in cases under chapters 11 and 12''; and

(B) by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) with respect to cases converted from chapter 13—

''(i) the claim of any creditor holding security as of the date of the petition shall continue to be secured by that security unless the full amount of such claim determined under applicable nonbankruptcy law has been paid in full as of the date of conversion, notwithstanding any valuation or determination of the amount of an allowed secured claim made for the purposes of the chapter 13 proceeding; and

''(ii) unless a prebankruptcy default has been fully cured under the plan at the time of conversion, in any proceeding under this title or otherwise, the default shall have the effect given under applicable nonbankruptcy law.''.

(b) GIVING DEBTORS THE ABILITY TO KEEP LEASED PERSONAL PROPERTY BY ASSUMPTION.—Section 365 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(p)(1) If a lease of personal property is rejected or not timely assumed by the trustee under subsection (d), the leased property is no longer property of the estate and the stay under section 362(a) is automatically terminated.

''(2)(A) In the case of an individual under chapter 7, the debtor may notify the creditor in writing that the debtor desires to assume the lease. Upon being so notified, the creditor may, at its option, notify the debtor that it is willing to have the lease assumed by the debtor and may condition such assumption on cure of any outstanding default on terms set by the contract.

''(B) If, not later than 30 days after notice is provided under subparagraph (A), the debtor notifies the lessor in writing that the lease is assumed, the liability under the lease will be assumed by the debtor and not by the estate.

''(C) The stay under section 362 and the injunction under section 524(a)(2) shall not be violated by notification of the debtor and negotiation of cure under this subsection.

''(3) In a case under chapter 11 in which the debtor is an individual and in a case under chapter 13, if the debtor is the lessee with respect to personal property and the lease is not assumed in the plan confirmed by the court, the lease is deemed rejected as of the conclusion of the hearing on confirmation. If the lease is rejected, the stay under section 362 and any stay under section 1301 is automatically terminated with respect to the property subject to the lease.''.

(c) ADEQUATE PROTECTION OF LESSORS AND PURCHASE MONEY SECURED CREDITORS.—

(1) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN.—Section 1325(a)(5)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in clause (i), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in clause (ii), by striking ''or'' at the end and inserting ''and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(iii) if—

''(I) property to be distributed pursuant to this subsection is in the form of periodic payments, such payments shall be in equal monthly amounts; and

''(II) the holder of the claim is secured by personal property, the amount of such payments shall not be less than an amount sufficient to provide to the holder of such claim adequate protection during the period of the plan; or''.

(2) PAYMENTS.—Section 1326(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(a)(1) Unless the court orders otherwise, the debtor shall commence making payments not later than 30 days after the date of the filing of the plan or the order for relief, whichever is earlier, in the amount—

''(A) proposed by the plan to the trustee;

''(B) scheduled in a lease of personal property directly to the lessor for that portion of the obligation that becomes due after the order for relief, reducing the payments under subparagraph (A) by the amount so paid and providing the trustee with evidence of such payment, including the amount and date of payment; and

''(C) that provides adequate protection directly to a creditor holding an allowed claim secured by personal property to the extent the claim is attributable to the purchase of such property by the debtor for that portion of the obligation that becomes due after the order for relief, reducing the payments under subparagraph (A) by the amount so paid and providing the trustee with evidence of such payment, including the amount and date of payment.

''(2) A payment made under paragraph (1)(A) shall be retained by the trustee until confirmation or denial of confirmation. If a plan is confirmed, the trustee shall distribute any such payment in accordance with the plan as soon as is practicable. If a plan is not confirmed, the trustee shall return any such payments not previously paid and not yet due and owing to creditors pursuant to paragraph (3) to the debtor, after deducting any unpaid claim allowed under section 503(b).

''(3) Subject to section 363, the court may, upon notice and a hearing, modify, increase, or reduce the payments required under this subsection pending confirmation of a plan.

''(4) Not later than 60 days after the date of filing of a case under this chapter, a debtor retaining possession of personal property subject to a lease or securing a claim attributable in whole or in part to the purchase price of such property shall provide the lessor or secured creditor reasonable evidence of the maintenance of any required insurance coverage with respect to the use or ownership of such property and continue to do so for so long as the debtor retains possession of such property.''.

SEC. 310. LIMITATION ON LUXURY GOODS.

Section 523(a)(2)(C) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(C)(i) for purposes of subparagraph (A)—

''(I) consumer debts owed to a single creditor and aggregating more than $250 for luxury goods or services incurred by an individual debtor on or within 90 days before the order for relief under this title are presumed to be nondischargeable; and

''(II) cash advances aggregating more than $750 that are extensions of consumer credit under an open end credit plan obtained by an individual debtor on or within 70 days before the order for relief under this title, are presumed to be nondischargeable; and

''(ii) for purposes of this subparagraph—

''(I) the term 'extension of credit under an open end credit plan' means an extension of credit under an open end credit plan, within the meaning of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.);

''(II) the term 'open end credit plan' has the meaning given that term under section 103 of Consumer Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1602); and

''(III) the term 'luxury goods or services' does not include goods or services reasonably necessary for the support or maintenance of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor.''.

SEC. 311. AUTOMATIC STAY.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (21), as added by this Act, the following:

''(22) under subsection (a)(3), of the continuation of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against a debtor involving residential real property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a rental agreement;

''(23) under subsection (a)(3), of the commencement of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against a debtor involving residential real property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a rental agreement that has terminated under the lease agreement or applicable State law;

''(24) under subsection (a)(3), of eviction actions based on endangerment to property or person or the use of illegal drugs;

''(25) under subsection (a) of any transfer that is not avoidable under section 544 and that is not avoidable under section 549;''.

SEC. 312. EXTENSION OF PERIOD BETWEEN BANKRUPTCY DISCHARGES.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 727(a)(8), by striking ''six'' and inserting ''8''; and

(2) in section 1328, by inserting after subsection (e) the following:

''(f) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b), the court shall not grant a discharge of all debts provided for by the plan or disallowed under section 502 if the debtor has received a discharge in any case filed under this title within 5 years before the order for relief under this chapter.''.

SEC. 313. DEFINITION OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND ANTIQUES.

(a) DEFINITION.—Section 522(f) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(4)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), for purposes of paragraph (1)(B), the term 'household goods' means—

''(i) clothing;

''(ii) furniture;

''(iii) appliances;

''(iv) 1 radio;

''(v) 1 television;

''(vi) 1 VCR;

''(vii) linens;

''(viii) china;

''(ix) crockery;

''(x) kitchenware;

''(xi) educational materials and educational equipment primarily for the use of minor dependent children of the debtor, but only 1 personal computer only if used primarily for the education or entertainment of such minor children;

''(xii) medical equipment and supplies;

''(xiii) furniture exclusively for the use of minor children, or elderly or disabled dependents of the debtor; and

''(xiv) personal effects (including the toys and hobby equipment of minor dependent children and wedding rings) of the debtor and the dependents of the debtor.

''(B) The term 'household goods' does not include—

''(i) works of art (unless by or of the debtor or the dependents of the debtor);

''(ii) electronic entertainment equipment (except 1 television, 1 radio, and 1 VCR);

''(iii) items acquired as antiques;

''(iv) jewelry (except wedding rings); and

''(v) a computer (except as otherwise provided for in this section), motor vehicle (including a tractor or lawn tractor), boat, or a motorized recreational device, conveyance, vehicle, watercraft, or aircraft.''.

(b) STUDY.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees shall submit a report to the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives containing its findings regarding utilization of the definition of household goods, as defined in section 522(f)(4) of title 11, United States Code, as added by this section, with respect to the avoidance of nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interests in household goods under section 522(f)(1)(B) of title 11, United States Code, and the impact that section 522(f)(4) of that title, as added by this section, has had on debtors and on the bankruptcy courts. Such report may include recommendations for amendments to section 522(f)(4) of title 11, United States Code, consistent with the Director's findings.

SEC. 314. DEBT INCURRED TO PAY NONDISCHARGEABLE DEBTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

''(14A) incurred to pay a tax to a governmental unit, other than the United States, that would be nondischargeable under paragraph (1);''.

(b) DISCHARGE UNDER CHAPTER 13.—Section 1328(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraphs (1) through (3) and inserting the following:

''(1) provided for under section 1322(b)(5);

''(2) of the kind specified in paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), (8), or (9) of section 523(a);

''(3) for restitution, or a criminal fine, included in a sentence on the debtor's conviction of a crime; or

''(4) for restitution, or damages, awarded in a civil action against the debtor as a result of willful or malicious injury by the debtor that caused personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual.''.

SEC. 315. GIVING CREDITORS FAIR NOTICE IN CHAPTERS 7 AND 13 CASES.

(a) NOTICE.—Section 342 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)—

(A) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(c)'';

(B) by striking '', but the failure of such notice to contain such information shall not invalidate the legal effect of such notice''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) If, within the 90 days prior to the date of the filing of a petition in a voluntary case, the creditor supplied the debtor in at least 2 communications sent to the debtor with the current account number of the debtor and the address at which the creditor wishes to receive correspondence, then the debtor shall send any notice required under this title to the address provided by the creditor and such notice shall include the account number. In the event the creditor would be in violation of applicable nonbankruptcy law by sending any such communication within such 90-day period and if the creditor supplied the debtor in the last 2 communications with the current account number of the debtor and the address at which the creditor wishes to receive correspondence, then the debtor shall send any notice required under this title to the address provided by the creditor and such notice shall include the account number.''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(e) At any time, a creditor, in a case of an individual debtor under chapter 7 or 13, may file with the court and serve on the debtor a notice of the address to be used to notify the creditor in that case. Five days after receipt of such notice, if the court or the debtor is required to give the creditor notice, such notice shall be given at that address.

''(f) An entity may file with the court a notice stating its address for notice in cases under chapters 7 and 13. After 30 days following the filing of such notice, any notice in any case filed under chapter 7 or 13 given by the court shall be to that address unless specific notice is given under subsection (e) with respect to a particular case.

''(g)(1) Notice given to a creditor other than as provided in this section shall not be effective notice until that notice has been brought to the attention of the creditor. If the creditor designates a person or department to be responsible for receiving notices concerning bankruptcy cases and establishes reasonable procedures so that bankruptcy notices received by the creditor are to be delivered to such department or person, notice shall not be considered to have been brought to the attention of the creditor until received by such person or department.

''(2) No sanction under section 362(k) or any other sanction that a court may impose on account of violations of the stay under section 362(a) or failure to comply with section 542 or 543 may be imposed on any action of the creditor unless the action takes place after the creditor has received notice of the commencement of the case effective under this section.''.

(b) DEBTOR'S DUTIES.—Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), as so designated by this Act, by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(1) file—

''(A) a list of creditors; and

''(B) unless the court orders otherwise—

''(i) a schedule of assets and liabilities;

''(ii) a schedule of current income and current expenditures;

''(iii) a statement of the debtor's financial affairs and, if applicable, a certificate—

''(I) of an attorney whose name is on the petition as the attorney for the debtor or any bankruptcy petition preparer signing the petition under section 110(b)(1) indicating that such attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer delivered to the debtor any notice required by section 342(b); or

''(II) if no attorney for the debtor is indicated and no bankruptcy petition preparer signed the petition, of the debtor that such notice was obtained and read by the debtor;

''(iv) copies of all payment advices or other evidence of payment, if any, received by the debtor from any employer of the debtor in the period 60 days before the filing of the petition;

''(v) a statement of the amount of monthly net income, itemized to show how the amount is calculated; and

''(vi) a statement disclosing any reasonably anticipated increase in income or expenditures over the 12-month period following the date of filing;''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(e)(1) At any time, a creditor, in the case of an individual under chapter 7 or 13, may file with the court notice that the creditor requests the petition, schedules, and a statement of affairs filed by the debtor in the case, and the court shall make those documents available to the creditor who requests those documents.

''(2)(A) The debtor shall provide either a tax return or transcript at the election of the debtor, for the latest taxable period prior to filing for which a tax return has been or should have been filed, to the trustee, not later than 7 days before the date first set for the first meeting of creditors, or the case shall be dismissed, unless the debtor demonstrates that the failure to file a return as required is due to circumstances beyond the control of the debtor.

''(B) If a creditor has requested a tax return or transcript referred to in subparagraph (A), the debtor shall provide such tax return or transcript to the requesting creditor at the time the debtor provides the tax return or transcript to the trustee, or the case shall be dismissed, unless the debtor demonstrates that the debtor is unable to provide such information due to circumstances beyond the control of the debtor.

''(3)(A) At any time, a creditor in a case under chapter 13 may file with the court notice that the creditor requests the plan filed by the debtor in the case.

''(B) The court shall make such plan available to the creditor who request such plan—

''(i) at a reasonable cost; and

''(ii) not later than 5 days after such request.

''(f) An individual debtor in a case under chapter 7, 11, or 13 shall file with the court at the request of any party in interest—

''(1) at the time filed with the taxing authority, all tax returns required under applicable law, including any schedules or attachments, with respect to the period from the commencement of the case until such time as the case is closed;

''(2) at the time filed with the taxing authority, all tax returns required under applicable law, including any schedules or attachments, that were not filed with the taxing authority when the schedules under subsection (a)(1) were filed with respect to the period that is 3 years before the order of relief;

''(3) any amendments to any of the tax returns, including schedules or attachments, described in paragraph (1) or (2); and

''(4) in a case under chapter 13, a statement subject to the penalties of perjury by the debtor of the debtor's income and expenditures in the preceding tax year and monthly income, that shows how the amounts are calculated—

''(A) beginning on the date that is the later of 90 days after the close of the debtor's tax year or 1 year after the order for relief, unless a plan has been confirmed; and

''(B) thereafter, on or before the date that is 45 days before each anniversary of the confirmation of the plan until the case is closed.

''(g)(1) A statement referred to in subsection (f)(4) shall disclose—

''(A) the amount and sources of income of the debtor;

''(B) the identity of any person responsible with the debtor for the support of any dependent of the debtor; and

''(C) the identity of any person who contributed, and the amount contributed, to the household in which the debtor resides.

''(2) The tax returns, amendments, and statement of income and expenditures described in subsection (e)(2)(A) and subsection (f) shall be available to the United States trustee, any bankruptcy administrator, any trustee, and any party in interest for inspection and copying, subject to the requirements of subsection (h).

''(h)(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall establish procedures for safeguarding the confidentiality of any tax information required to be provided under this section.

''(2) The procedures under paragraph (1) shall include restrictions on creditor access to tax information that is required to be provided under this section.

''(3) Not later than 1 year and 180 days after the date of enactment of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall prepare and submit to Congress a report that—

''(A) assesses the effectiveness of the procedures under paragraph (1); and

''(B) if appropriate, includes proposed legislation to—

''(i) further protect the confidentiality of tax information; and

''(ii) provide penalties for the improper use by any person of the tax information required to be provided under this section.

''(i) If requested by the United States trustee or a trustee serving in the case, the debtor shall provide—

''(1) a document that establishes the identity of the debtor, including a driver's license, passport, or other document that contains a photograph of the debtor; and

''(2) such other personal identifying information relating to the debtor that establishes the identity of the debtor.''.

SEC. 316. DISMISSAL FOR FAILURE TO TIMELY FILE SCHEDULES OR PROVIDE REQUIRED INFORMATION.

Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(j)(1) Notwithstanding section 707(a), and subject to paragraph (2), if an individual debtor in a voluntary case under chapter 7 or 13 fails to file all of the information required under subsection (a)(1) within 45 days after the filing of the petition commencing the case, the case shall be automatically dismissed effective on the 46th day after the filing of the petition.

''(2) With respect to a case described in paragraph (1), any party in interest may request the court to enter an order dismissing the case. If requested, the court shall enter an order of dismissal not later than 5 days after such request.

''(3) Upon request of the debtor made within 45 days after the filing of the petition commencing a case described in paragraph (1), the court may allow the debtor an additional period of not to exceed 45 days to file the information required under subsection (a)(1) if the court finds justification for extending the period for the filing.''.

SEC. 317. ADEQUATE TIME TO PREPARE FOR HEARING ON CONFIRMATION OF THE PLAN.

Section 1324 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''After'' and inserting the following:

''(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) and after''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b) The hearing on confirmation of the plan may be held not earlier than 20 days and not later than 45 days after the date of the meeting of creditors under section 341(a).''.

SEC. 318. CHAPTER 13 PLANS TO HAVE A 5-YEAR DURATION IN CERTAIN CASES.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending section 1322(d) to read as follows:

''(d)(1) If the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is not less than—

''(A) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census;

''(B) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2, 3, or 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(C) in the case of a debtor in a household exceeding 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of 4 or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census, plus $525 per month for each individual in excess of 4, the plan may not provide for payments over a period that is longer than 5 years.

''(2) If the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is less than—

''(A) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census;

''(B) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2, 3, or 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(C) in the case of a debtor in a household exceeding 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of 4 or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census, plus $525 per month for each individual in excess of 4, the plan may not provide for payments over a period that is longer than 3 years, unless the court, for cause, approves a longer period, but the court may not approve a period that is longer than 5 years.'';

(2) in section 1325(b)(1)(B), by striking ''three-year period'' and inserting ''applicable commitment period''; and

(3) in section 1325(b), as amended by this Act, by adding at the end the following:

''(4) For purposes of this subsection, the 'applicable commitment period'—

''(A) subject to subparagraph (B), shall be—

''(i) 3 years; or

''(ii) not less than 5 years, if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is not less than—

''(I) in the case of a debtor in a household of 1 person, the median family income of the applicable State for 1 earner last reported by the Bureau of the Census;

''(II) in the case of a debtor in a household of 2, 3, or 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of the same number or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census; or

''(III) in the case of a debtor in a household exceeding 4 individuals, the highest median family income of the applicable State for a family of 4 or fewer individuals last reported by the Bureau of the Census, plus $525 per month for each individual in excess of 4; and

''(B) may be less than 3 or 5 years, whichever is applicable under subparagraph (A), but only if the plan provides for payment in full of all allowed unsecured claims over a shorter period.''; and

(4) in section 1329(c), by striking ''three years'' and inserting ''the applicable commitment period under section 1325(b)(1)(B)''.

SEC. 319. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING EXPANSION OF RULE 9011 OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURE.

It is the sense of Congress that rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (11 U.S.C. App.) should be modified to include a requirement that all documents (including schedules), signed and unsigned, submitted to the court or to a trustee by debtors who represent themselves and debtors who are represented by an attorney be submitted only after the debtor or the debtor's attorney has made reasonable inquiry to verify that the information contained in such documents is—

(1) well grounded in fact; and

(2) warranted by existing law or a good-faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

SEC. 320. PROMPT RELIEF FROM STAY IN INDIVIDUAL CASES.

Section 362(e) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(e)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), in the case of an individual filing under chapter 7, 11, or 13, the stay under subsection (a) shall terminate on the date that is 60 days after a request is made by a party in interest under subsection (d), unless—

''(A) a final decision is rendered by the court during the 60-day period beginning on the date of the request; or

''(B) that 60-day period is extended—

''(i) by agreement of all parties in interest; or

''(ii) by the court for such specific period of time as the court finds is required for good cause, as described in findings made by the court.''.

SEC. 321. CHAPTER 11 CASES FILED BY INDIVIDUALS.

(a) PROPERTY OF THE ESTATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 1115. Property of the estate

''(a) In a case concerning an individual debtor, property of the estate includes, in addition to the property specified in section 541—

''(1) all property of the kind specified in section 541 that the debtor acquires after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, whichever occurs first; and

''(2) earnings from services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, whichever occurs first.''.

''(b) Except as provided in section 1104 or a confirmed plan or order confirming a plan, the debtor shall remain in possession of all property of the estate.''.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end of the matter relating to subchapter I the following:

''1115. Property of the estate.''.

(b) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—Section 1123(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (6), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (7), by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(8) in a case concerning an individual, provide for the payment to creditors through the plan of all or such portion of earnings from personal services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case or other future income of the debtor as is necessary for the execution of the plan.''.

(c) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN.—

(1) REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO VALUE OF PROPERTY.—Section 1129(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(15) In a case concerning an individual in which the holder of an allowed unsecured claim objects to the confirmation of the plan—

''(A) the value of the property to be distributed under the plan on account of such claim is, as of the effective date of the plan, not less than the amount of such claim; or

''(B) the value of the property to be distributed under the plan is not less than the debtor's projected disposable income (as that term is defined in section 1325(b)(2)) to be received during the 5-year period beginning on the date that the first payment is due under the plan, or during the term of the plan, whichever is longer.''.

(2) REQUIREMENT RELATING TO INTERESTS IN PROPERTY.—Section 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: '', except that in a case concerning an individual, the debtor may retain property included in the estate under section 1115, subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(14)''.

(d) EFFECT OF CONFIRMATION—Section 1141(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking ''The confirmation of a plan does not discharge an individual debtor'' and inserting ''A discharge under this chapter does not discharge a debtor''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(5) In a case concerning an individual—

''(A) except as otherwise ordered for cause shown, the discharge is not effective until completion of all payments under the plan; and

''(B) at any time after the confirmation of the plan and after notice and a hearing, the court may grant a discharge to a debtor that has not completed payments under the plan only if—

''(i) for each allowed unsecured claim, the value, as of the effective date of the plan, of property actually distributed under the plan on account of that claim is not less than the amount that would have been paid on such claim if the estate of the debtor had been liquidated under chapter 7 of this title on such date; and

''(ii) modification of the plan under 1127 of this title is not practicable.''.

(e) MODIFICATION OF PLAN.—Section 1127 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) In a case concerning an individual, the plan may be modified at any time after confirmation of the plan but before the completion of payments under the plan, whether or not the plan has been substantially consummated, upon request of the debtor, the trustee, the United States trustee, or the holder of an allowed unsecured claim, to—

''(1) increase or reduce the amount of payments on claims of a particular class provided for by the plan;

''(2) extend or reduce the time period for such payments; or

''(3) alter the amount of the distribution to a creditor whose claim is provided for by the plan to the extent necessary to take account of any payment of such claim made other than under the plan.

''(f)(1) Sections 1121 through 1128 of this title and the requirements of section 1129 of this title apply to any modification under subsection (a).

''(2) The plan, as modified, shall become the plan only after there has been disclosure under section 1125, as the court may direct, notice and a hearing, and such modification is approved.''.

SEC. 322. LIMITATION.

(a) EXEMPTIONS.—Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(p)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection and sections 544 and 548 of this title, as a result of electing under subsection (b)(3)(A) to exempt property under State or local law, a debtor may not exempt any amount of interest that was acquired by the debtor during the 2-year period preceding the filing of the petition which exceeds in the aggregate $100,000 in value in—

''(A) real or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;

''(B) a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence; or

''(C) a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor.

''(2)(A) The limitation under paragraph (1) shall not apply to an exemption claimed under subsection (b)(3)(A) by a family farmer for the principal residence of that farmer.

''(B) For purposes of paragraph (1), any amount of such interest does not include any interest transferred from a debtor's previous principal residence (which was acquired prior to the beginning of the 2-year period) into the debtor's current principal residence, where the debtor's previous and current residences are located in the same State.''.

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(f)(1) Under the procedures prescribed by the Judicial Conference of the United States, the district court or the bankruptcy court may waive the filing fee in a case under chapter 7 of title 11 for an individual if the court determines that such debtor has income less than 150 percent of the income official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981) applicable to a family of the size involved and is unable to pay that fee in installments. For purposes of this paragraph, the term ''filing fee'' means the filing required by subsection (a), or any other fee prescribed by the Judicial Conference under subsections (b) and (c) that is payable to the clerk upon the commencement of a case under chapter 7.

''(2) The district court or the bankruptcy court may waive for such debtors other fees prescribed under subsections (b) and (c).

''(3) This subsection does not restrict the district court or the bankruptcy court from waiving, in accordance with Judicial Conference policy, fees prescribed under this section for other debtors and creditors.''.

SEC. 419. MORE COMPLETE INFORMATION REGARDING ASSETS OF THE ESTATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) DISCLOSURE.—The Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference of the United States, after consideration of the views of the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees, shall propose for adoption amended Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Official Bankruptcy Forms directing debtors under chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, to disclose the information described in paragraph (2) by filing and serving periodic financial and other reports designed to provide such information.

(2) INFORMATION.—The information referred to in paragraph (1) is the value, operations, and profitability of any closely held corporation, partnership, or of any other entity in which the debtor holds a substantial or controlling interest.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the rules and reports under subsection (a) shall be to assist parties in interest taking steps to ensure that the debtor's interest in any entity referred to in subsection (a)(2) is used for the payment of allowed claims against debtor.

Subtitle B—Small Business Bankruptcy Provisions

SEC. 431. FLEXIBLE RULES FOR DISCLOSURE STATEMENT AND PLAN.

Section 1125 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1), by inserting before the semicolon ''and in determining whether a disclosure statement provides adequate information, the court shall consider the complexity of the case, the benefit of additional information to creditors and other parties in interest, and the cost of providing additional information''; and

(2) by striking subsection (f), and inserting the following:

''(f) Notwithstanding subsection (b), in a small business case—

''(1) the court may determine that the plan itself provides adequate information and that a separate disclosure statement is not necessary;

''(2) the court may approve a disclosure statement submitted on standard forms approved by the court or adopted under section 2075 of title 28; and

''(3)(A) the court may conditionally approve a disclosure statement subject to final approval after notice and a hearing;

''(B) acceptances and rejections of a plan may be solicited based on a conditionally approved disclosure statement if the debtor provides adequate information to each holder of a claim or interest that is solicited, but a conditionally approved disclosure statement shall be mailed not later than 20 days before the date of the hearing on confirmation of the plan; and

''(C) the hearing on the disclosure statement may be combined with the hearing on confirmation of a plan.''.

SEC. 432. DEFINITIONS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by striking paragraph (51C) and inserting the following:

''(51C) 'small business case' means a case filed under chapter 11 of this title in which the debtor is a small business debtor;

''(51D) 'small business debtor'—

''(A) subject to subparagraph (B), means a person engaged in commercial or business activities (including any affiliate of such person that is also a debtor under this title and excluding a person whose primary activity is the business of owning or operating real property or activities incidental thereto) that has aggregate noncontingent, liquidated secured and unsecured debts as of the date of the petition or the order for relief in an amount not more than $3,000,000 (excluding debts owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders) for a case in which the United States trustee has not appointed under section 1102(a)(1) a committee of unsecured creditors or where the court has determined that the committee of unsecured creditors is not sufficiently active and representative to provide effective oversight of the debtor; and

''(B) does not include any member of a group of affiliated debtors that has aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debts in an amount greater than $3,000,000 (excluding debt owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders);''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1102(a)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''debtor'' after ''small business''.

SEC. 433. STANDARD FORM DISCLOSURE STATEMENT AND PLAN.

Within a reasonable period of time after the date of enactment of this Act, the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference of the United States shall propose for adoption standard form disclosure statements and plans of reorganization for small business debtors (as defined in section 101 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act), designed to achieve a practical balance between—

(1) the reasonable needs of the courts, the United States trustee, creditors, and other parties in interest for reasonably complete information; and

(2) economy and simplicity for debtors.

SEC. 434. UNIFORM NATIONAL REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REPORTING REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 307 the following:

''§308. Debtor reporting requirements

''(a) For purposes of this section, the term 'profitability' means, with respect to a debtor, the amount of money that the debtor has earned or lost during current and recent fiscal periods.

''(b) A small business debtor shall file periodic financial and other reports containing information including—

''(1) the debtor's profitability;

''(2) reasonable approximations of the debtor's projected cash receipts and cash disbursements over a reasonable period;

''(3) comparisons of actual cash receipts and disbursements with projections in prior reports;

''(4)(A) whether the debtor is—

''(i) in compliance in all material respects with postpetition requirements imposed by this title and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure; and

''(ii) timely filing tax returns and other required government filings and paying taxes and other administrative claims when due;

''(B) if the debtor is not in compliance with the requirements referred to in subparagraph (A)(i) or filing tax returns and other required government filings and making the payments referred to in subparagraph (A)(ii), what the failures are and how, at what cost, and when the debtor intends to remedy such failures; and

''(C) such other matters as are in the best interests of the debtor and creditors, and in the public interest in fair and efficient procedures under chapter 11 of this title.''.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 307 the following:

''308. Debtor reporting requirements.''.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect 60 days after the date on which rules are prescribed under section 2075 of title 28, United States Code, to establish forms to be used to comply with section 308 of title 11, United States Code, as added by subsection (a).

SEC. 435. UNIFORM REPORTING RULES AND FORMS FOR SMALL BUSINESS CASES.

(a) PROPOSAL OF RULES AND FORMS.—The Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference of the United States shall propose for adoption amended Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Official Bankruptcy Forms to be used by small business debtors to file periodic financial and other reports containing information, including information relating to—

(1) the debtor's profitability;

(2) the debtor's cash receipts and disbursements; and

(3) whether the debtor is timely filing tax returns and paying taxes and other administrative claims when due.

(b) PURPOSE.—The rules and forms proposed under subsection (a) shall be designed to achieve a practical balance among—

(1) the reasonable needs of the bankruptcy court, the United States trustee, creditors, and other parties in interest for reasonably complete information;

(2) the small business debtor's interest that required reports be easy and inexpensive to complete; and

(3) the interest of all parties that the required reports help the small business debtor to understand the small business debtor's financial condition and plan the small business debtor's future.

SEC. 436. DUTIES IN SMALL BUSINESS CASES.

(a) DUTIES IN CHAPTER 11 CASES.—Subchapter I of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 1116. Duties of trustee or debtor in possession in small business cases

''In a small business case, a trustee or the debtor in possession, in addition to the duties provided in this title and as otherwise required by law, shall—

''(1) append to the voluntary petition or, in an involuntary case, file not later than 7 days after the date of the order for relief—

''(A) its most recent balance sheet, statement of operations, cash-flow statement, Federal income tax return; or

''(B) a statement made under penalty of perjury that no balance sheet, statement of operations, or cash-flow statement has been prepared and no Federal tax return has been filed;

''(2) attend, through its senior management personnel and counsel, meetings scheduled by the court or the United States trustee, including initial debtor interviews, scheduling conferences, and meetings of creditors convened under section 341 unless the court waives that requirement after notice and hearing, upon a finding of extraordinary and compelling circumstances;

''(3) timely file all schedules and statements of financial affairs, unless the court, after notice and a hearing, grants an extension, which shall not extend such time period to a date later than 30 days after the date of the order for relief, absent extraordinary and compelling circumstances;

''(4) file all postpetition financial and other reports required by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure or by local rule of the district court;

''(5) subject to section 363(c)(2), maintain insurance customary and appropriate to the industry;

''(6)(A) timely file tax returns and other required government filings; and

''(B) subject to section 363(c)(2), timely pay all administrative expense tax claims, except those being contested by appropriate proceedings being diligently prosecuted; and

''(7) allow the United States trustee, or a designated representative of the United States trustee, to inspect the debtor's business premises, books, and records at reasonable times, after reasonable prior written notice, unless notice is waived by the debtor.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end of the matter relating to subchapter I the following:

''1116. Duties of trustee or debtor in possession in small business cases.''.

SEC. 437. PLAN FILING AND CONFIRMATION DEADLINES.

Section 1121 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (e) and inserting the following:

''(e) In a small business case—

''(1) only the debtor may file a plan until after 180 days after the date of the order for relief, unless that period is—

''(A) extended as provided by this subsection, after notice and hearing; or

''(B) the court, for cause, orders otherwise;

''(2) the plan, and any necessary disclosure statement, shall be filed not later than 300 days after the date of the order for relief; and

''(3) the time periods specified in paragraphs (1) and (2), and the time fixed in section 1129(e), within which the plan shall be confirmed, may be extended only if—

''(A) the debtor, after providing notice to parties in interest (including the United States trustee), demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that it is more likely than not that the court will confirm a plan within a reasonable period of time;

''(B) a new deadline is imposed at the time the extension is granted; and

''(C) the order extending time is signed before the existing deadline has expired.''.

SEC. 438. PLAN CONFIRMATION DEADLINE.

Section 1129 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) In a small business case, the plan shall be confirmed not later than 175 days after the date of the order for relief, unless such 175-day period is extended as provided in section 1121(e)(3).''.

SEC. 439. DUTIES OF THE UNITED STATES TRUSTEE.

Section 586(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3)—

(A) in subparagraph (G), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (H) as subparagraph (I); and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (G) the following:

''(H) in small business cases (as defined in section 101 of title 11), performing the additional duties specified in title 11 pertaining to such cases; and'';

(2) in paragraph (5), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(3) in paragraph (6), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(7) in each of such small business cases—

''(A) conduct an initial debtor interview as soon as practicable after the entry of order for relief but before the first meeting scheduled under section 341(a) of title 11, at which time the United States trustee shall—

''(i) begin to investigate the debtor's viability;

''(ii) inquire about the debtor's business plan;

''(iii) explain the debtor's obligations to file monthly operating reports and other required reports;

''(iv) attempt to develop an agreed scheduling order; and

''(v) inform the debtor of other obligations;

''(B) if determined to be appropriate and advisable, visit the appropriate business premises of the debtor and ascertain the state of the debtor's books and records and verify that the debtor has filed its tax returns; and

''(C) review and monitor diligently the debtor's activities, to identify as promptly as possible whether the debtor will be unable to confirm a plan; and

''(8) in any case in which the United States trustee finds material grounds for any relief under section 1112 of title 11, the United States trustee shall apply promptly after making that finding to the court for relief.''.

SEC. 440. SCHEDULING CONFERENCES.

Section 105(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking '', may''; and

(2) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(1) shall hold such status conferences as are necessary to further the expeditious and economical resolution of the case; and''.

SEC. 441. SERIAL FILER PROVISIONS.

Section 362 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (k), as redesignated by this Act—

(A) by striking ''An'' and inserting ''(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), an''; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) If such violation is based on an action taken by an entity in the good faith belief that subsection (h) applies to the debtor, the recovery under paragraph (1) of this subsection against such entity shall be limited to actual damages.''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(l)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the provisions of subsection (a) do not apply in a case in which the debtor—

''(A) is a debtor in a small business case pending at the time the petition is filed;

''(B) was a debtor in a small business case that was dismissed for any reason by an order that became final in the 2-year period ending on the date of the order for relief entered with respect to the petition;

''(C) was a debtor in a small business case in which a plan was confirmed in the 2-year period ending on the date of the order for relief entered with respect to the petition; or

''(D) is an entity that has succeeded to substantially all of the assets or business of a small business debtor described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

''(2) This subsection does not apply—

''(A) to an involuntary case involving no collusion by the debtor with creditors; or

''(B) to the filing of a petition if—

''(i) the debtor proves by a preponderance of the evidence that the filing of that petition resulted from circumstances beyond the control of the debtor not foreseeable at the time the case then pending was filed; and

''(ii) it is more likely than not that the court will confirm a feasible plan, but not a liquidating plan, within a reasonable period of time.''.

SEC. 442. EXPANDED GROUNDS FOR DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION AND APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE.

(a) EXPANDED GROUNDS FOR DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION.—Section 1112 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

''(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, subsection (c) of this section, and section 1104(a)(3), on request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interest of creditors and the estate, if the movant establishes cause.

''(2) The relief provided in paragraph (1) shall not be granted if the debtor or another party in interest objects and establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that—

''(A) a plan with a reasonable possibility of being confirmed will be filed within a reasonable period of time; and

''(B) the grounds include an act or omission of the debtor—

''(i) for which there exists a reasonable justification for the act or omission; and

''(ii) that will be cured within a reasonable period of time fixed by the court.

''(3) The court shall commence the hearing on any motion under this subsection not later than 30 days after filing of the motion, and shall decide the motion not later than 15 days after commencement of the hearing, unless the movant expressly consents to a continuance for a specific period of time or compelling circumstances prevent the court from meeting the time limits established by this paragraph.

''(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'cause' includes—

''(A) substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate;

''(B) gross mismanagement of the estate;

''(C) failure to maintain appropriate insurance that poses a risk to the estate or to the public;

''(D) unauthorized use of cash collateral harmful to 1 or more creditors;

''(E) failure to comply with an order of the court;

''(F) repeated failure timely to satisfy any filing or reporting requirement established by this title or by any rule applicable to a case under this chapter;

''(G) failure to attend the meeting of creditors convened under section 341(a) or an examination ordered under rule 2004 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure;

''(H) failure timely to provide information or attend meetings reasonably requested by the United States trustee or the bankruptcy administrator;

''(I) failure timely to pay taxes due after the date of the order for relief or to file tax returns due after the order for relief;

''(J) failure to file a disclosure statement, or to file or confirm a plan, within the time fixed by this title or by order of the court;

''(K) failure to pay any fees or charges required under chapter 123 of title 28;

''(L) revocation of an order of confirmation under section 1144;

''(M) inability to effectuate substantial consummation of a confirmed plan;

''(N) material default by the debtor with respect to a confirmed plan;

''(O) termination of a confirmed plan by reason of the occurrence of a condition specified in the plan; and

''(P) failure of the debtor to pay any domestic support obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed.

''(5) The court shall commence the hearing on any motion under this subsection not later than 30 days after filing of the motion, and shall decide the motion not later than 15 days after commencement of the hearing, unless the movant expressly consents to a continuance for a specific period of time or compelling circumstances prevent the court from meeting the time limits established by this paragraph.''.

(b) ADDITIONAL GROUNDS FOR APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE.—Section 1104(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(3) if grounds exist to convert or dismiss the case under section 1112, but the court determines that the appointment of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate.''.

SEC. 443. STUDY OF OPERATION OF TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE, WITH RESPECT TO SMALL BUSINESSES.

Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, in consultation with the Attorney General, the Director of the Administrative Office of United States Trustees, and the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, shall—

(1) conduct a study to determine—

(A) the internal and external factors that cause small businesses, especially sole proprietorships, to become debtors in cases under title 11, United States Code, and that cause certain small businesses to successfully complete cases under chapter 11 of such title; and

(B) how Federal laws relating to bankruptcy may be made more effective and efficient in assisting small businesses to remain viable; and

(2) submit to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives a report summarizing that study.

SEC. 444. PAYMENT OF INTEREST.

Section 362(d)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''or 30 days after the court determines that the debtor is subject to this paragraph, whichever is later'' after ''90-day period)''; and

(2) by striking subparagraph (B) and inserting the following:

''(B) the debtor has commenced monthly payments that—''(i) may, in the debtor's sole discretion, notwithstanding section 363(c)(2), be made from rents or other income generated before or after the commencement of the case by or from the property to each creditor whose claim is secured by such real estate (other than a claim secured by a judgment lien or by an unmatured statutory lien); and

''(ii) are in an amount equal to interest at the then applicable nondefault contract rate of interest on the value of the creditor's interest in the real estate; or''.

SEC. 445. PRIORITY FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Section 503(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (5), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (6), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(7) with respect to a nonresidential real property lease previously assumed under section 365, and subsequently rejected, a sum equal to all monetary obligations due, excluding those arising from or relating to a failure to operate or penalty provisions, for the period of 2 years following the later of the rejection date or the date of actual turnover of the premises, without reduction or setoff for any reason whatsoever except for sums actually received or to be received from a nondebtor, and the claim for remaining sums due for the balance of the term of the lease shall be a claim under section 502(b)(6);''.

TITLE V—MUNICIPAL BANKRUPTCY PROVISIONS

SEC. 501. PETITION AND PROCEEDINGS RELATED TO PETITION.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT RELATING TO MUNICIPALITIES.—Section 921(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''notwithstanding section 301(b)'' before the period at the end.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 301 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''A voluntary''; and

(2) by striking the last sentence and inserting the following:

''(b) The commencement of a voluntary case under a chapter of this title constitutes an order for relief under such chapter.''.

SEC. 502. APPLICABILITY OF OTHER SECTIONS TO CHAPTER 9.

Section 901(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''555, 556,'' after ''553,''; and

(2) by inserting ''559, 560, 561, 562'' after ''557,''.

TITLE VI—BANKRUPTCY DATA

SEC. 601. IMPROVED BANKRUPTCY STATISTICS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 6 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 159. Bankruptcy statistics

''(a) The clerk of each district shall collect statistics regarding individual debtors with primarily consumer debts seeking relief under chapters 7, 11, and 13 of title 11. Those statistics shall be on a standardized form prescribed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts (referred to in this section as the 'Director').

''(b) The Director shall—

''(1) compile the statistics referred to in subsection (a);

''(2) make the statistics available to the public; and

''(3) not later than October 31, 2002, and annually thereafter, prepare, and submit to Congress a report concerning the information collected under subsection (a) that contains an analysis of the information.

''(c) The compilation required under subsection (b) shall—

''(1) be itemized, by chapter, with respect to title 11;

''(2) be presented in the aggregate and for each district; and

''(3) include information concerning—

''(A) the total assets and total liabilities of the debtors described in subsection (a), and in each category of assets and liabilities, as reported in the schedules prescribed pursuant to section 2075 of this title and filed by those debtors;

''(B) the current monthly income, average income, and average expenses of those debtors as reported on the schedules and statements that each such debtor files under sections 521 and 1322 of title 11;

''(C) the aggregate amount of debt discharged in the reporting period, determined as the difference between the total amount of debt and obligations of a debtor reported on the schedules and the amount of such debt reported in categories which are predominantly nondischargeable;

''(D) the average period of time between the filing of the petition and the closing of the case;

''(E) for the reporting period—

''(i) the number of cases in which a reaffirmation was filed; and

''(ii)(I) the total number of reaffirmations filed;

''(II) of those cases in which a reaffirmation was filed, the number of cases in which the debtor was not represented by an attorney; and

''(III) of those cases in which a reaffirmation was filed, the number of cases in which the reaffirmation was approved by the court;

''(F) with respect to cases filed under chapter 13 of title 11, for the reporting period—

''(i)(I) the number of cases in which a final order was entered determining the value of property securing a claim in an amount less than the amount of the claim; and

''(II) the number of final orders determining the value of property securing a claim issued;

''(ii) the number of cases dismissed, the number of cases dismissed for failure to make payments under the plan, the number of cases refiled after dismissal, and the number of cases in which the plan was completed, separately itemized with respect to the number of modifications made before completion of the plan, if any; and

''(iii) the number of cases in which the debtor filed another case during the 6-year period preceding the filing;

''(G) the number of cases in which creditors were fined for misconduct and any amount of punitive damages awarded by the court for creditor misconduct; and

''(H) the number of cases in which sanctions under rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure were imposed against debtor's counsel or damages awarded under such Rule.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 6 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''159. Bankruptcy statistics.''.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 602. UNIFORM RULES FOR THE COLLECTION OF BANKRUPTCY DATA.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Chapter 39 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 589b. Bankruptcy data

''(a) RULES.—The Attorney General shall, within a reasonable time after the effective date of this section, issue rules requiring uniform forms for (and from time to time thereafter to appropriately modify and approve)—

''(1) final reports by trustees in cases under chapters 7, 12, and 13 of title 11; and

''(2) periodic reports by debtors in possession or trustees, as the case may be, in cases under chapter 11 of title 11.

''(b) REPORTS.—Each report referred to in subsection (a) shall be designed (and the requirements as to place and manner of filing shall be established) so as to facilitate compilation of data and maximum possible access of the public, both by physical inspection at one or more central filing locations, and by electronic access through the Internet or other appropriate media.

''(c) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—The information required to be filed in the reports referred to in subsection (b) shall be that which is in the best interests of debtors and creditors, and in the public interest in reasonable and adequate information to evaluate the efficiency and practicality of the Federal bankruptcy system. In issuing rules proposing the forms referred to in subsection (a), the Attorney General shall strike the best achievable practical balance between—

''(1) the reasonable needs of the public for information about the operational results of the Federal bankruptcy system;

''(2) economy, simplicity, and lack of undue burden on persons with a duty to file reports; and

''(3) appropriate privacy concerns and safeguards.

''(d) FINAL REPORTS.—Final reports proposed for adoption by trustees under chapters 7, 12, and 13 of title 11 shall, in addition to such other matters as are required by law or as the Attorney General in the discretion of the Attorney General, shall propose, include with respect to a case under such title—

''(1) information about the length of time the case was pending;

''(2) assets abandoned;

''(3) assets exempted;

''(4) receipts and disbursements of the estate;

''(5) expenses of administration, including for use under section 707(b), actual costs of administering cases under chapter 13 of title 11;

''(6) claims asserted;

''(7) claims allowed; and

''(8) distributions to claimants and claims discharged without payment, in each case by appropriate category and, in cases under chapters 12 and 13 of title 11, date of confirmation of the plan, each modification thereto, and defaults by the debtor in performance under the plan.

''(e) PERIODIC REPORTS.—Periodic reports proposed for adoption by trustees or debtors in possession under chapter 11 of title 11 shall, in addition to such other matters as are required by law or as the Attorney General, in the discretion of the Attorney General, shall propose, include—

''(1) information about the standard industry classification, published by the Department of Commerce, for the businesses conducted by the debtor;

''(2) length of time the case has been pending;

''(3) number of full-time employees as of the date of the order for relief and at the end of each reporting period since the case was filed;

''(4) cash receipts, cash disbursements and profitability of the debtor for the most recent period and cumulatively since the date of the order for relief;

''(5) compliance with title 11, whether or not tax returns and tax payments since the date of the order for relief have been timely filed and made;

''(6) all professional fees approved by the court in the case for the most recent period and cumulatively since the date of the order for relief (separately reported, for the professional fees incurred by or on behalf of the debtor, between those that would have been incurred absent a bankruptcy case and those not); and

''(7) plans of reorganization filed and confirmed and, with respect thereto, by class, the recoveries of the holders, expressed in aggregate dollar values and, in the case of claims, as a percentage of total claims of the class allowed.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 39 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''589b. Bankruptcy data.''.

SEC. 603. AUDIT PROCEDURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROCEDURES.—The Attorney General (in judicial districts served by United States trustees) and the Judicial Conference of the United States (in judicial districts served by bankruptcy administrators) shall establish procedures to determine the accuracy, veracity, and completeness of petitions, schedules, and other information which the debtor is required to provide under sections 521 and 1322 of title 11, and, if applicable, section 111 of title 11, in individual cases filed under chapter 7 or 13 of such title. Such audits shall be in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and performed by independent certified public accountants or independent licensed public accountants, provided that the Attorney General and the Judicial Conference, as appropriate, may develop alternative auditing standards not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) PROCEDURES.—Those procedures required by paragraph (1) shall—

(A) establish a method of selecting appropriate qualified persons to contract to perform those audits;

(B) establish a method of randomly selecting cases to be audited, except that not less than 1 out of every 250 cases in each Federal judicial district shall be selected for audit;

(C) require audits for schedules of income and expenses which reflect greater than average variances from the statistical norm of the district in which the schedules were filed if those variances occur by reason of higher income or higher expenses than the statistical norm of the district in which the schedules were filed; and

(D) establish procedures for providing, not less frequently than annually, public information concerning the aggregate results of such audits including the percentage of cases, by district, in which a material misstatement of income or expenditures is reported.

(b) AMENDMENTS.—Section 586 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking paragraph (6) and inserting the following:

''(6) make such reports as the Attorney General directs, including the results of audits performed under section 603(a) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000; and''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(f)(1) The United States trustee for each district is authorized to contract with auditors to perform audits in cases designated by the United States trustee, in accordance with the procedures established under section 603(a) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000.

''(2)(A) The report of each audit referred to in paragraph (1) shall be filed with the court and transmitted to the United States trustee. Each report shall clearly and conspicuously specify any material misstatement of income or expenditures or of assets identified by the person performing the audit. In any case in which a material misstatement of income or expenditures or of assets has been reported, the clerk of the bankruptcy court shall give notice of the misstatement to the creditors in the case.

''(B) If a material misstatement of income or expenditures or of assets is reported, the United States trustee shall—

''(i) report the material misstatement, if appropriate, to the United States Attorney pursuant to section 3057 of title 18; and

''(ii) if advisable, take appropriate action, including but not limited to commencing an adversary proceeding to revoke the debtor's discharge pursuant to section 727(d) of title 11.''.

(c) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 521 OF TITLE 11, U.S.C.—Section 521(a) of title 11, United States Code, as so designated by this Act, is amended in each of paragraphs (3) and (4) by inserting ''or an auditor appointed under section 586(f) of title 28'' after ''serving in the case''.

(d) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 727 OF TITLE 11, U.S.C.—Section 727(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) the debtor has failed to explain satisfactorily—

''(A) a material misstatement in an audit referred to in section 586(f) of title 28; or

''(B) a failure to make available for inspection all necessary accounts, papers, documents, financial records, files, and all other papers, things, or property belonging to the debtor that are requested for an audit referred to in section 586(f) of title 28.''.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 604. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING AVAILABILITY OF BANKRUPTCY DATA.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the national policy of the United States should be that all data held by bankruptcy clerks in electronic form, to the extent such data reflects only public records (as defined in section 107 of title 11, United States Code), should be released in a usable electronic form in bulk to the public, subject to such appropriate privacy concerns and safeguards as Congress and the Judicial Conference of the United States may determine; and

(2) there should be established a bankruptcy data system in which—

(A) a single set of data definitions and forms are used to collect data nationwide; and

(B) data for any particular bankruptcy case are aggregated in the same electronic record.

TITLE VII—BANKRUPTCY TAX PROVISIONS

SEC. 701. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN LIENS.

(a) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN LIENS.—Section 724 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting ''(other than to the extent that there is a properly perfected unavoidable tax lien arising in connection with an ad valorem tax on real or personal property of the estate)'' after ''under this title'';

(2) in subsection (b)(2), by inserting ''(except that such expenses, other than claims for wages, salaries, or commissions which arise after the filing of a petition, shall be limited to expenses incurred under chapter 7 of this title and shall not include expenses incurred under chapter 11 of this title)'' after ''507(a)(1)''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(e) Before subordinating a tax lien on real or personal property of the estate, the trustee shall—

''(1) exhaust the unencumbered assets of the estate; and

''(2) in a manner consistent with section 506(c), recover from property securing an allowed secured claim the reasonable, necessary costs and expenses of preserving or disposing of that property.

''(f) Notwithstanding the exclusion of ad valorem tax liens under this section and subject to the requirements of subsection (e), the following may be paid from property of the estate which secures a tax lien, or the proceeds of such property:

''(1) Claims for wages, salaries, and commissions that are entitled to priority under section 507(a)(4).

''(2) Claims for contributions to an employee benefit plan entitled to priority under section 507(a)(5).''.

(b) DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY.—Section 505(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) the amount or legality of any amount arising in connection with an ad valorem tax on real or personal property of the estate, if the applicable period for contesting or redetermining that amount under any law (other than a bankruptcy law) has expired.''.

SEC. 702. TREATMENT OF FUEL TAX CLAIMS.

Section 501 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) A claim arising from the liability of a debtor for fuel use tax assessed consistent with the requirements of section 31705 of title 49 may be filed by the base jurisdiction designated pursuant to the International Fuel Tax Agreement and, if so filed, shall be allowed as a single claim.''.

SEC. 703. NOTICE OF REQUEST FOR A DETERMINATION OF TAXES.

Section 505(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by inserting ''at the address and in the manner designated in paragraph (1)'' after ''determination of such tax'';

(2) by striking ''(1) upon payment'' and inserting ''(A) upon payment'';

(3) by striking ''(A) such governmental unit'' and inserting ''(i) such governmental unit'';

(4) by striking ''(B) such governmental unit'' and inserting ''(ii) such governmental unit'';

(5) by striking ''(2) upon payment'' and inserting ''(B) upon payment'';

(6) by striking ''(3) upon payment'' and inserting ''(C) upon payment'';

(7) by striking ''(b)'' and inserting ''(2)''; and

(8) by inserting before paragraph (2), as so designated, the following:

''(b)(1)(A) The clerk of each district shall maintain a listing under which a Federal, State, or local governmental unit responsible for the collection of taxes within the district may—

''(i) designate an address for service of requests under this subsection; and

''(ii) describe where further information concerning additional requirements for filing such requests may be found.

''(B) If a governmental unit referred to in subparagraph (A) does not designate an address and provide that address to the clerk under that subparagraph, any request made under this subsection may be served at the address for the filing of a tax return or protest with the appropriate taxing authority of that governmental unit.''.

SEC. 704. RATE OF INTEREST ON TAX CLAIMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 511. Rate of interest on tax claims

''(a) If any provision of this title requires the payment of interest on a tax claim or on an administrative expense tax, or the payment of interest to enable a creditor to receive the present value of the allowed amount of a tax claim, the rate of interest shall be the rate determined under applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(b) In the case of taxes paid under a confirmed plan under this title, the rate of interest shall be determined as of the calendar month in which the plan is confirmed.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 510 the following:

''511. Rate of interest on tax claims.''.

SEC. 705. PRIORITY OF TAX CLAIMS.

Section 507(a)(8) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) in the matter preceding clause (i), by inserting ''for a taxable year ending on or before the date of filing of the petition'' after ''gross receipts'';

(B) in clause (i), by striking ''for a taxable year ending on or before the date of filing of the petition''; and

(C) by striking clause (ii) and inserting the following:

''(ii) assessed within 240 days before the date of the filing of the petition, exclusive of—

''(I) any time during which an offer in compromise with respect to that tax was pending or in effect during that 240-day period, plus 30 days; and

''(II) any time during which a stay of proceedings against collections was in effect in a prior case under this title during that 240-day period; plus 90 days.''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''An otherwise applicable time period specified in this paragraph shall be suspended for (i) any period during which a governmental unit is prohibited under applicable nonbankruptcy law from collecting a tax as a result of a request by the debtor for a hearing and an appeal of any collection action taken or proposed against the debtor, plus 90 days; plus (ii) any time during which the stay of proceedings was in effect in a prior case under this title or during which collection was precluded by the existence of 1 or more confirmed plans under this title, plus 90 days.''.

SEC. 706. PRIORITY PROPERTY TAXES INCURRED.

Section 507(a)(8)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''assessed'' and inserting ''incurred''.

Section 1328(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 314 of this Act, is amended by striking ''paragraph'' and inserting ''section 507(a)(8)(C) or in paragraph (1)(B), (1)(C),''.

SEC. 708. NO DISCHARGE OF FRAUDULENT TAXES IN CHAPTER 11.

Section 1141(d) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(6) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the confirmation of a plan does not discharge a debtor that is a corporation from any debt described in section 523(a)(2) or for a tax or customs duty with respect to which the debtor—

''(A) made a fraudulent return; or

''(B) willfully attempted in any manner to evade or defeat that tax or duty.''.

SEC. 709. STAY OF TAX PROCEEDINGS LIMITED TO PREPETITION TAXES.

Section 362(a)(8) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''the debtor'' and inserting ''a corporate debtor's tax liability for a taxable period the bankruptcy court may determine or concerning an individual debtor's tax liability for a taxable period ending before the order for relief under this title''.

SEC. 710. PERIODIC PAYMENT OF TAXES IN CHAPTER 11 CASES.

Section 1129(a)(9) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (C), by striking ''deferred cash payments,'' and all that follows through the end of the subparagraph, and inserting ''regular installment payments in cash—

''(i) of a total value, as of the effective date of the plan, equal to the allowed amount of such claim;

''(ii) over a period ending not later than 5 years after the date of the entry of the order for relief under section 301, 302, or 303; and

''(iii) in a manner not less favorable than the most favored nonpriority unsecured claim provided for in the plan (other than cash payments made to a class of creditors under section 1122(b)); and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(D) with respect to a secured claim which would otherwise meet the description of an unsecured claim of a governmental unit under section 507(a)(8), but for the secured status of that claim, the holder of that claim will receive on account of that claim, cash payments, in the same manner and over the same period, as prescribed in subparagraph (C).''.

SEC. 711. AVOIDANCE OF STATUTORY TAX LIENS PROHIBITED.

Section 545(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the semicolon at the end the following: '', except in any case in which a purchaser is a purchaser described in section 6323 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or in any other similar provision of State or local law''.

SEC. 712. PAYMENT OF TAXES IN THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

(a) PAYMENT OF TAXES REQUIRED.—Section 960 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''Any''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b) A tax under subsection (a) shall be paid on or before the due date of the tax under applicable nonbankruptcy law, unless—

''(1) the tax is a property tax secured by a lien against property that is abandoned within a reasonable period of time after the lien attaches by the trustee of a bankruptcy estate under section 554 of title 11; or

''(2) payment of the tax is excused under a specific provision of title 11.

''(c) In a case pending under chapter 7 of title 11, payment of a tax may be deferred until final distribution is made under section 726 of title 11, if—

''(1) the tax was not incurred by a trustee duly appointed under chapter 7 of title 11; or

''(2) before the due date of the tax, an order of the court makes a finding of probable insufficiency of funds of the estate to pay in full the administrative expenses allowed under section 503(b) of title 11 that have the same priority in distribution under section 726(b) of title 11 as the priority of that tax.''.

(b) PAYMENT OF AD VALOREM TAXES REQUIRED.—Section 503(b)(1)(B)(i) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''whether secured or unsecured, including property taxes for which liability is in rem, in personam, or both,'' before ''except''.

(c) REQUEST FOR PAYMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSE TAXES ELIMINATED.—Section 503(b)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (C), by adding ''and'' at the end; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(D) notwithstanding the requirements of subsection (a), a governmental unit shall not be required to file a request for the payment of an expense described in subparagraph (B) or (C), as a condition of its being an allowed administrative expense;''.

(d) PAYMENT OF TAXES AND FEES AS SECURED CLAIMS.—Section 506 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by inserting ''or State statute'' after ''agreement''; and

(2) in subsection (c), by inserting '', including the payment of all ad valorem property taxes with respect to the property'' before the period at the end.

SEC. 713. TARDILY FILED PRIORITY TAX CLAIMS.

Section 726(a)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''before the date on which the trustee commences distribution under this section;'' and inserting the following: ''on or before the earlier of—

''(A) the date that is 10 days after the mailing to creditors of the summary of the trustee's final report; or

''(B) the date on which the trustee commences final distribution under this section;''.

SEC. 714. INCOME TAX RETURNS PREPARED BY TAX AUTHORITIES.

Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(B)—

(A) in the matter preceding clause (i), by inserting ''or equivalent report or notice,'' after ''a return,'';

(B) in clause (i), by inserting ''or given'' after ''filed''; and

(C) in clause (ii)—

(i) by inserting ''or given'' after ''filed''; and

(ii) by inserting '', report, or notice'' after ''return''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''For purposes of this subsection, the term 'return' means a return that satisfies the requirements of applicable nonbankruptcy law (including applicable filing requirements). Such term includes a return prepared pursuant to section 6020(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or similar State or local law, or a written stipulation to a judgment or a final order entered by a nonbankruptcy tribunal, but does not include a return made pursuant to section 6020(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or a similar State or local law.''.

SEC. 715. DISCHARGE OF THE ESTATE'S LIABILITY FOR UNPAID TAXES.

Section 505(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by inserting ''the estate,'' after ''misrepresentation,''.

SEC. 716. REQUIREMENT TO FILE TAX RETURNS TO CONFIRM CHAPTER 13 PLANS.

(a) FILING OF PREPETITION TAX RETURNS REQUIRED FOR PLAN CONFIRMATION.—Section 1325(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(9) the debtor has filed all applicable Federal, State, and local tax returns as required by section 1308.''.

(b) ADDITIONAL TIME PERMITTED FOR FILING TAX RETURNS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 1308. Filing of prepetition tax returns

''(a) Not later than the day before the date on which the meeting of the creditors is first scheduled to be held under section 341(a), if the debtor was required to file a tax return under applicable nonbankruptcy law, the debtor shall file with appropriate tax authorities all tax returns for all taxable periods ending during the 4-year period ending on the date of the filing of the petition.

''(b)(1) Subject to paragraph (2), if the tax returns required by subsection (a) have not been filed by the date on which the meeting of creditors is first scheduled to be held under section 341(a), the trustee may hold open that meeting for a reasonable period of time to allow the debtor an additional period of time to file any unfiled returns, but such additional period of time shall not extend beyond—

''(A) for any return that is past due as of the date of the filing of the petition, the date that is 120 days after the date of that meeting; or

''(B) for any return that is not past due as of the date of the filing of the petition, the later of—

''(i) the date that is 120 days after the date of that meeting; or

''(ii) the date on which the return is due under the last automatic extension of time for filing that return to which the debtor is entitled, and for which request is timely made, in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(2) Upon notice and hearing, and order entered before the tolling of any applicable filing period determined under this subsection, if the debtor demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that the failure to file a return as required under this subsection is attributable to circumstances beyond the control of the debtor, the court may extend the filing period established by the trustee under this subsection for—

''(A) a period of not more than 30 days for returns described in paragraph (1); and

''(B) a period not to extend after the applicable extended due date for a return described in paragraph (2).

''(c) For purposes of this section, the term 'return' includes a return prepared pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of section 6020 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or a similar State or local law, or a written stipulation to a judgment or a final order entered by a nonbankruptcy tribunal.''.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1307 the following:

''1308. Filing of prepetition tax returns.''.

(c) DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION ON FAILURE TO COMPLY.—Section 1307 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (e) and (f) as subsections (f) and (g), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

''(e) Upon the failure of the debtor to file a tax return under section 1308, on request of a party in interest or the United States trustee and after notice and a hearing, the court shall dismiss a case or convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 of this title, whichever is in the best interest of the creditors and the estate.''.

(d) TIMELY FILED CLAIMS.—Section 502(b)(9) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following '', and except that in a case under chapter 13, a claim of a governmental unit for a tax with respect to a return filed under section 1308 shall be timely if the claim is filed on or before the date that is 60 days after the date on which such return was filed as required''.

(e) RULES FOR OBJECTIONS TO CLAIMS AND TO CONFIRMATION.—It is the sense of Congress that the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference of the United States should, as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, propose for adoption amended Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure which provide that—

(1) notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 3015(f), in cases under chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, an objection to the confirmation of a plan filed by a governmental unit on or before the date that is 60 days after the date on which the debtor files all tax returns required under sections 1308 and 1325(a)(7) of title 11, United States Code, shall be treated for all purposes as if such objection had been timely filed before such confirmation; and

(2) in addition to the provisions of Rule 3007, in a case under chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, no objection to a tax with respect to which a return is required to be filed under section 1308 of title 11, United States Code, shall be filed until such return has been filed as required.

SEC. 717. STANDARDS FOR TAX DISCLOSURE.

Section 1125(a)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''including a discussion of the potential material Federal tax consequences of the plan to the debtor, any successor to the debtor, and a hypothetical investor typical of the holders of claims or interests in the case,'' after ''records''; and

(2) by striking ''a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interests'' and inserting ''such a hypothetical investor''.

SEC. 718. SETOFF OF TAX REFUNDS.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (26), as added by this Act, the following:

''(27) under subsection (a), of the setoff under applicable nonbankruptcy law of an income tax refund, by a governmental unit, with respect to a taxable period that ended before the order for relief against an income tax liability for a taxable period that also ended before the order for relief, except that in any case in which the setoff of an income tax refund is not permitted under applicable nonbankruptcy law because of a pending action to determine the amount or legality of a tax liability, the governmental unit may hold the refund pending the resolution of the action, unless the court, upon motion of the trustee and after notice and hearing, grants the taxing authority adequate protection (within the meaning of section 361) for the secured claim of that authority in the setoff under section 506(a);''.

SEC. 719. SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATED TO THE TREATMENT OF STATE AND LOCAL TAXES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 346 of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§ 346. Special provisions related to the treatment of state and local taxes

''(a) Whenever the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provides that a separate taxable estate or entity is created in a case concerning a debtor under this title, and the income, gain, loss, deductions, and credits of such estate shall be taxed to or claimed by the estate, a separate taxable estate is also created for purposes of any State and local law imposing a tax on or measured by income and such income, gain, loss, deductions, and credits shall be taxed to or claimed by the estate and may not be taxed to or claimed by the debtor. The preceding sentence shall not apply if the case is dismissed. The trustee shall make tax returns of income required under any such State or local law.

''(b) Whenever the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provides that no separate taxable estate shall be created in a case concerning a debtor under this title, and the income, gain, loss, deductions, and credits of an estate shall be taxed to or claimed by the debtor, such income, gain, loss, deductions, and credits shall be taxed to or claimed by the debtor under a State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income and may not be taxed to or claimed by the estate. The trustee shall make such tax returns of income of corporations and of partnerships as are required under any State or local law, but with respect to partnerships, shall make said returns only to the extent such returns are also required to be made under such Code. The estate shall be liable for any tax imposed on such corporation or partnership, but not for any tax imposed on partners or members.

''(c) With respect to a partnership or any entity treated as a partnership under a State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income that is a debtor in a case under this title, any gain or loss resulting from a distribution of property from such partnership, or any distributive share of any income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit of a partner or member that is distributed, or considered distributed, from such partnership, after the commencement of the case, is gain, loss, income, deduction, or credit, as the case may be, of the partner or member, and if such partner or member is a debtor in a case under this title, shall be subject to tax in accordance with subsection (a) or (b).

''(d) For purposes of any State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income, the taxable period of a debtor in a case under this title shall terminate only if and to the extent that the taxable period of such debtor terminates under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(e) The estate in any case described in subsection (a) shall use the same accounting method as the debtor used immediately before the commencement of the case, if such method of accounting complies with applicable nonbankruptcy tax law.

''(f) For purposes of any State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income, a transfer of property from the debtor to the estate or from the estate to the debtor shall not be treated as a disposition for purposes of any provision assigning tax consequences to a disposition, except to the extent that such transfer is treated as a disposition under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(g) Whenever a tax is imposed pursuant to a State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income pursuant to subsection (a) or (b), such tax shall be imposed at rates generally applicable to the same types of entities under such State or local law.

''(h) The trustee shall withhold from any payment of claims for wages, salaries, commissions, dividends, interest, or other payments, or collect, any amount required to be withheld or collected under applicable State or local tax law, and shall pay such withheld or collected amount to the appropriate governmental unit at the time and in the manner required by such tax law, and with the same priority as the claim from which such amount was withheld or collected was paid.

''(i)(1) To the extent that any State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income provides for the carryover of any tax attribute from one taxable period to a subsequent taxable period, the estate shall succeed to such tax attribute in any case in which such estate is subject to tax under subsection (a).

''(2) After such a case is closed or dismissed, the debtor shall succeed to any tax attribute to which the estate succeeded under paragraph (1) to the extent consistent with the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(3) The estate may carry back any loss or tax attribute to a taxable period of the debtor that ended before the order for relief under this title to the extent that—

''(A) applicable State or local tax law provides for a carryback in the case of the debtor; and

''(B) the same or a similar tax attribute may be carried back by the estate to such a taxable period of the debtor under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(j)(1) For purposes of any State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income, income is not realized by the estate, the debtor, or a successor to the debtor by reason of discharge of indebtedness in a case under this title, except to the extent, if any, that such income is subject to tax under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(2) Whenever the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provides that the amount excluded from gross income in respect of the discharge of indebtedness in a case under this title shall be applied to reduce the tax attributes of the debtor or the estate, a similar reduction shall be made under any State or local law imposing a tax on or measured by income to the extent such State or local law recognizes such attributes. Such State or local law may also provide for the reduction of other attributes to the extent that the full amount of income from the discharge of indebtedness has not been applied.

''(k)(1) Except as provided in this section and section 505, the time and manner of filing tax returns and the items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit of any taxpayer shall be determined under applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(2) For Federal tax purposes, the provisions of this section are subject to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and other applicable Federal nonbankruptcy law.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 728 of title 11, United States Code, is repealed.

(2) Section 1146 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking subsections (a) and (b); and

(B) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (a) and (b), respectively.

(3) Section 1231 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking subsections (a) and (b); and

(B) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (a) and (b), respectively.

SEC. 720. DISMISSAL FOR FAILURE TO TIMELY FILE TAX RETURNS.

Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(k)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, if the debtor fails to file a tax return that becomes due after the commencement of the case or to properly obtain an extension of the due date for filing such return, the taxing authority may request that the court enter an order converting or dismissing the case.

''(2) If the debtor does not file the required return or obtain the extension referred to in paragraph (1) within 90 days after a request is filed by the taxing authority under that paragraph, the court shall convert or dismiss the case, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate.''.

TITLE VIII—ANCILLARY AND OTHER CROSS-BORDER CASES

SEC. 801. AMENDMENT TO ADD CHAPTER 15 TO TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

''§ 1501. Purpose and scope of application

''(a) The purpose of this chapter is to incorporate the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency so as to provide effective mechanisms for dealing with cases of cross-border insolvency with the objectives of—

''(1) cooperation between—

''(A) United States courts, United States trustees, trustees, examiners, debtors, and debtors in possession; and

''(B) the courts and other competent authorities of foreign countries involved in cross-border insolvency cases;

''(2) greater legal certainty for trade and investment;

''(3) fair and efficient administration of cross-border insolvencies that protects the interests of all creditors, and other interested entities, including the debtor;

''(4) protection and maximization of the value of the debtor's assets; and

''(5) facilitation of the rescue of financially troubled businesses, thereby protecting investment and preserving employment.

''(b) This chapter applies where—

''(1) assistance is sought in the United States by a foreign court or a foreign representative in connection with a foreign proceeding;

''(2) assistance is sought in a foreign country in connection with a case under this title;

''(3) a foreign proceeding and a case under this title with respect to the same debtor are taking place concurrently; or

''(4) creditors or other interested persons in a foreign country have an interest in requesting the commencement of, or participating in, a case or proceeding under this title.

''(c) This chapter does not apply to—

''(1) a proceeding concerning an entity, other than a foreign insurance company, identified by exclusion in section 109(b);

''(2) an individual, or to an individual and such individual's spouse, who have debts within the limits specified in section 109(e) and who are citizens of the United States or aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States; or

''(3) an entity subject to a proceeding under the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970, a stockbroker subject to subchapter III of chapter 7 of this title, or a commodity broker subject to subchapter IV of chapter 7 of this title.

''(d) The court may not grant relief under this chapter with respect to any deposit, escrow, trust fund, or other security required or permitted under any applicable State insurance law or regulation for the benefit of claim holders in the United States.

''SUBCHAPTER I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

''§ 1502. Definitions

''For the purposes of this chapter, the term—

''(1) 'debtor' means an entity that is the subject of a foreign proceeding;

''(2) 'establishment' means any place of operations where the debtor carries out a nontransitory economic activity;

''(3) 'foreign court' means a judicial or other authority competent to control or supervise a foreign proceeding;

''(4) 'foreign main proceeding' means a foreign proceeding taking place in the country where the debtor has the center of its main interests;

''(5) 'foreign nonmain proceeding' means a foreign proceeding, other than a foreign main proceeding, taking place in a country where the debtor has an establishment;

''(6) 'trustee' includes a trustee, a debtor in possession in a case under any chapter of this title, or a debtor under chapter 9 of this title;

''(7) 'recognition' means the entry of an order granting recognition of a foreign main proceeding or foreign nonmain proceeding under this chapter; and

''(8) 'within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States', when used with reference to property of a debtor, refers to tangible property located within the territory of the United States and intangible property deemed under applicable nonbankruptcy law to be located within that territory, including any property subject to attachment or garnishment that may properly be seized or garnished by an action in a Federal or State court in the United States.

''§ 1503. International obligations of the United States

''To the extent that this chapter conflicts with an obligation of the United States arising out of any treaty or other form of agreement to which it is a party with one or more other countries, the requirements of the treaty or agreement prevail.

''§ 1504. Commencement of ancillary case

''A case under this chapter is commenced by the filing of a petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding under section 1515.

''§ 1505. Authorization to act in a foreign country

''A trustee or another entity (including an examiner) may be authorized by the court to act in a foreign country on behalf of an estate created under section 541. An entity authorized to act under this section may act in any way permitted by the applicable foreign law.

''§ 1506. Public policy exception

''Nothing in this chapter prevents the court from refusing to take an action governed by this chapter if the action would be manifestly contrary to the public policy of the United States.

''§ 1507. Additional assistance

''(a) Subject to the specific limitations stated elsewhere in this chapter the court, if recognition is granted, may provide additional assistance to a foreign representative under this title or under other laws of the United States.

''(b) In determining whether to provide additional assistance under this title or under other laws of the United States, the court shall consider whether such additional assistance, consistent with the principles of comity, will reasonably assure—

''(1) just treatment of all holders of claims against or interests in the debtor's property;

''(2) protection of claim holders in the United States against prejudice and inconvenience in the processing of claims in such foreign proceeding;

''(3) prevention of preferential or fraudulent dispositions of property of the debtor;

''(4) distribution of proceeds of the debtor's property substantially in accordance with the order prescribed by this title; and

''(5) if appropriate, the provision of an opportunity for a fresh start for the individual that such foreign proceeding concerns.

''§ 1508. Interpretation

''In interpreting this chapter, the court shall consider its international origin, and the need to promote an application of this chapter that is consistent with the application of similar statutes adopted by foreign jurisdictions.

''SUBCHAPTER II—ACCESS OF FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES AND CREDITORS TO THE COURT

''§ 1509. Right of direct access

''(a) A foreign representative may commence a case under section 1504 by filing directly with the court a petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding under section 1515.

''(b) If the court grants recognition under section 1515, and subject to any limitations that the court may impose consistent with the policy of this chapter—

''(1) the foreign representative has the capacity to sue and be sued in a court in the United States;

''(2) the foreign representative may apply directly to a court in the United States for appropriate relief in that court; and

''(3) a court in the United States shall grant comity or cooperation to the foreign representative.

''(c) A request for comity or cooperation by a foreign representative in a court in the United States other than the court which granted recognition shall be accompanied by a certified copy of an order granting recognition under section 1517.

''(d) If the court denies recognition under this chapter, the court may issue any appropriate order necessary to prevent the foreign representative from obtaining comity or cooperation from courts in the United States.

''(e) Whether or not the court grants recognition, and subject to sections 306 and 1510, a foreign representative is subject to applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the failure of a foreign representative to commence a case or to obtain recognition under this chapter does not affect any right the foreign representative may have to sue in a court in the United States to collect or recover a claim which is the property of the debtor.

''§ 1510. Limited jurisdiction

''The sole fact that a foreign representative files a petition under section 1515 does not subject the foreign representative to the jurisdiction of any court in the United States for any other purpose.

''§ 1511. Commencement of case under section 301 or 303

''(a) Upon recognition, a foreign representative may commence—

''(1) an involuntary case under section 303; or

''(2) a voluntary case under section 301 or 302, if the foreign proceeding is a foreign main proceeding.

''(b) The petition commencing a case under subsection (a) must be accompanied by a certified copy of an order granting recognition. The court where the petition for recognition has been filed must be advised of the foreign representative's intent to commence a case under subsection (a) prior to such commencement.

''§ 1512. Participation of a foreign representative in a case under this title

''Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative in the recognized proceeding is entitled to participate as a party in interest in a case regarding the debtor under this title.

''§ 1513. Access of foreign creditors to a case under this title

''(a) Foreign creditors have the same rights regarding the commencement of, and participation in, a case under this title as domestic creditors.

''(b)(1) Subsection (a) does not change or codify present law as to the priority of claims under section 507 or 726 of this title, except that the claim of a foreign creditor under those sections shall not be given a lower priority than that of general unsecured claims without priority solely because the holder of such claim is a foreign creditor.

''(2)(A) Subsection (a) and paragraph (1) do not change or codify present law as to the allowability of foreign revenue claims or other foreign public law claims in a proceeding under this title.

''(B) Allowance and priority as to a foreign tax claim or other foreign public law claim shall be governed by any applicable tax treaty of the United States, under the conditions and circumstances specified therein.

''§ 1514. Notification to foreign creditors concerning a case under this title

''(a) Whenever in a case under this title notice is to be given to creditors generally or to any class or category of creditors, such notice shall also be given to the known creditors generally, or to creditors in the notified class or category, that do not have addresses in the United States. The court may order that appropriate steps be taken with a view to notifying any creditor whose address is not yet known.

''(b) Such notification to creditors with foreign addresses described in subsection (a) shall be given individually, unless the court considers that, under the circumstances, some other form of notification would be more appropriate. No letter or other formality is required.

''(c) When a notification of commencement of a case is to be given to foreign creditors, the notification shall—

''(1) indicate the time period for filing proofs of claim and specify the place for their filing;

''(2) indicate whether secured creditors need to file their proofs of claim; and

''(3) contain any other information required to be included in such a notification to creditors under this title and the orders of the court.

''(d) Any rule of procedure or order of the court as to notice or the filing of a claim shall provide such additional time to creditors with foreign addresses as is reasonable under the circumstances.

''SUBCHAPTER III—RECOGNITION OF A FOREIGN PROCEEDING AND RELIEF

''§ 1515. Application for recognition

''(a) A foreign representative applies to the court for recognition of the foreign proceeding in which the foreign representative has been appointed by filing a petition for recognition.

''(b) A petition for recognition shall be accompanied by—

''(1) a certified copy of the decision commencing the foreign proceeding and appointing the foreign representative;

''(2) a certificate from the foreign court affirming the existence of the foreign proceeding and of the appointment of the foreign representative; or

''(3) in the absence of evidence referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2), any other evidence acceptable to the court of the existence of the foreign proceeding and of the appointment of the foreign representative.

''(c) A petition for recognition shall also be accompanied by a statement identifying all foreign proceedings with respect to the debtor that are known to the foreign representative.

''(d) The documents referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall be translated into English. The court may require a translation into English of additional documents.

''§ 1516. Presumptions concerning recognition

''(a) If the decision or certificate referred to in section 1515(b) indicates that the foreign proceeding is a foreign proceeding (as defined in section 101) and that the person or body is a foreign representative (as defined in section 101), the court is entitled to so presume.

''(b) The court is entitled to presume that documents submitted in support of the petition for recognition are authentic, whether or not they have been legalized.

''(c) In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the debtor's registered office, or habitual residence in the case of an individual, is presumed to be the center of the debtor's main interests.

''§ 1517. Order granting recognition

''(a) Subject to section 1506, after notice and a hearing, an order recognizing a foreign proceeding shall be entered if—

''(1) the foreign proceeding for which recognition is sought is a foreign main proceeding or foreign nonmain proceeding within the meaning of section 1502;

''(2) the foreign representative applying for recognition is a person or body as defined in section 101; and

''(3) the petition meets the requirements of section 1515.

''(b) The foreign proceeding shall be recognized—

''(1) as a foreign main proceeding if it is taking place in the country where the debtor has the center of its main interests; or

''(2) as a foreign nonmain proceeding if the debtor has an establishment within the meaning of section 1502 in the foreign country where the proceeding is pending.

''(c) A petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding shall be decided upon at the earliest possible time. Entry of an order recognizing a foreign proceeding constitutes recognition under this chapter.

''(d) The provisions of this subchapter do not prevent modification or termination of recognition if it is shown that the grounds for granting it were fully or partially lacking or have ceased to exist, but in considering such action the court shall give due weight to possible prejudice to parties that have relied upon the order granting recognition. The case under this chapter may be closed in the manner prescribed under section 350.

''§ 1518. Subsequent information

''From the time of filing the petition for recognition of the foreign proceeding, the foreign representative shall file with the court promptly a notice of change of status concerning—

''(1) any substantial change in the status of the foreign proceeding or the status of the foreign representative's appointment; and

''(2) any other foreign proceeding regarding the debtor that becomes known to the foreign representative.

''§ 1519. Relief that may be granted upon filing petition for recognition

''(a) From the time of filing a petition for recognition until the court rules on the petition, the court may, at the request of the foreign representative, where relief is urgently needed to protect the assets of the debtor or the interests of the creditors, grant relief of a provisional nature, including—

''(1) staying execution against the debtor's assets;

''(2) entrusting the administration or realization of all or part of the debtor's assets located in the United States to the foreign representative or another person authorized by the court, including an examiner, in order to protect and preserve the value of assets that, by their nature or because of other circumstances, are perishable, susceptible to devaluation or otherwise in jeopardy; and

''(3) any relief referred to in paragraph (3), (4), or (7) of section 1521(a).

''(b) Unless extended under section 1521(a)(6), the relief granted under this section terminates when the petition for recognition is granted.

''(c) It is a ground for denial of relief under this section that such relief would interfere with the administration of a foreign main proceeding.

''(d) The court may not enjoin a police or regulatory act of a governmental unit, including a criminal action or proceeding, under this section.

''(e) The standards, procedures, and limitations applicable to an injunction shall apply to relief under this section.

''(f) The exercise of rights not subject to the stay arising under section 362(a) pursuant to paragraph (6), (7), (17), or (28) of section 362(b) or pursuant to section 362(l) shall not be stayed by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under this chapter.

''§ 1520. Effects of recognition of a foreign main proceeding

''(a) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding that is a foreign main proceeding—

''(1) sections 361 and 362 apply with respect to the debtor and that property of the debtor that is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States;

''(2) sections 363, 549, and 552 of this title apply to a transfer of an interest of the debtor in property that is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States to the same extent that the sections would apply to property of an estate;

''(3) unless the court orders otherwise, the foreign representative may operate the debtor's business and may exercise the rights and powers of a trustee under and to the extent provided by sections 363 and 552; and

''(4) section 552 applies to property of the debtor that is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

''(b) Subsection (a) does not affect the right to commence an individual action or proceeding in a foreign country to the extent necessary to preserve a claim against the debtor.

''(c) Subsection (a) does not affect the right of a foreign representative or an entity to file a petition commencing a case under this title or the right of any party to file claims or take other proper actions in such a case.

''§ 1521. Relief that may be granted upon recognition

''(a) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, whether main or nonmain, where necessary to effectuate the purpose of this chapter and to protect the assets of the debtor or the interests of the creditors, the court may, at the request of the foreign representative, grant any appropriate relief, including—

''(1) staying the commencement or continuation of an individual action or proceeding concerning the debtor's assets, rights, obligations or liabilities to the extent they have not been stayed under section 1520(a);

''(2) staying execution against the debtor's assets to the extent it has not been stayed under section 1520(a);

''(3) suspending the right to transfer, encumber or otherwise dispose of any assets of the debtor to the extent this right has not been suspended under section 1520(a);

''(4) providing for the examination of witnesses, the taking of evidence or the delivery of information concerning the debtor's assets, affairs, rights, obligations or liabilities;

''(5) entrusting the administration or realization of all or part of the debtor's assets within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States to the foreign representative or another person, including an examiner, authorized by the court;

''(6) extending relief granted under section 1519(a); and

''(7) granting any additional relief that may be available to a trustee, except for relief available under sections 522, 544, 545, 547, 548, 550, and 724(a).

''(b) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, whether main or nonmain, the court may, at the request of the foreign representative, entrust the distribution of all or part of the debtor's assets located in the United States to the foreign representative or another person, including an examiner, authorized by the court, provided that the court is satisfied that the interests of creditors in the United States are sufficiently protected.

''(c) In granting relief under this section to a representative of a foreign nonmain proceeding, the court must be satisfied that the relief relates to assets that, under the law of the United States, should be administered in the foreign nonmain proceeding or concerns information required in that proceeding.

''(d) The court may not enjoin a police or regulatory act of a governmental unit, including a criminal action or proceeding, under this section.

''(e) The standards, procedures, and limitations applicable to an injunction shall apply to relief under paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (6) of subsection (a).

''(f) The exercise of rights not subject to the stay arising under section 362(a) pursuant to paragraph (6), (7), (17), or (28) of section 362(b) or pursuant to section 362(l) shall not be stayed by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under this chapter.

''§ 1522. Protection of creditors and other interested persons

''(a) The court may grant relief under section 1519 or 1521, or may modify or terminate relief under subsection (c), only if the interests of the creditors and other interested entities, including the debtor, are sufficiently protected.

''(b) The court may subject relief granted under section 1519 or 1521, or the operation of the debtor's business under section 1520(a)(3) of this title, to conditions it considers appropriate, including the giving of security or the filing of a bond.

''(c) The court may, at the request of the foreign representative or an entity affected by relief granted under section 1519 or 1521, or at its own motion, modify or terminate such relief.

''(d) Section 1104(d) shall apply to the appointment of an examiner under this chapter. Any examiner shall comply with the qualification requirements imposed on a trustee by section 322.

''§ 1523. Actions to avoid acts detrimental to creditors

''(a) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative has standing in a case concerning the debtor pending under another chapter of this title to initiate actions under sections 522, 544, 545, 547, 548, 550, 553, and 724(a).

''(b) When the foreign proceeding is a foreign nonmain proceeding, the court must be satisfied that an action under subsection (a) relates to assets that, under United States law, should be administered in the foreign nonmain proceeding.

''§ 1524. Intervention by a foreign representative

''Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative may intervene in any proceedings in a State or Federal court in the United States in which the debtor is a party.

''SUBCHAPTER IV—COOPERATION WITH FOREIGN COURTS AND FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES

''§ 1525. Cooperation and direct communication between the court and foreign courts or foreign representatives

''(a) Consistent with section 1501, the court shall cooperate to the maximum extent possible with foreign courts or foreign representatives, either directly or through the trustee.

''(b) The court is entitled to communicate directly with, or to request information or assistance directly from, foreign courts or foreign representatives, subject to the rights of parties in interest to notice and participation.

''§ 1526. Cooperation and direct communication between the trustee and foreign courts or foreign representatives

''(a) Consistent with section 1501, the trustee or other person, including an examiner, authorized by the court, shall, subject to the supervision of the court, cooperate to the maximum extent possible with foreign courts or foreign representatives.

''(b) The trustee or other person, including an examiner, authorized by the court is entitled, subject to the supervision of the court, to communicate directly with foreign courts or foreign representatives.

''§ 1527. Forms of cooperation

''Cooperation referred to in sections 1525 and 1526 may be implemented by any appropriate means, including—

''(1) appointment of a person or body, including an examiner, to act at the direction of the court;

''(2) communication of information by any means considered appropriate by the court;

''(3) coordination of the administration and supervision of the debtor's assets and affairs;

''(4) approval or implementation of agreements concerning the coordination of proceedings; and

''(5) coordination of concurrent proceedings regarding the same debtor.

''SUBCHAPTER V—CONCURRENT PROCEEDINGS

''§ 1528. Commencement of a case under this title after recognition of a foreign main proceeding

''After recognition of a foreign main proceeding, a case under another chapter of this title may be commenced only if the debtor has assets in the United States. The effects of such case shall be restricted to the assets of the debtor that are within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States and, to the extent necessary to implement cooperation and coordination under sections 1525, 1526, and 1527, to other assets of the debtor that are within the jurisdiction of the court under sections 541(a) of this title, and 1334(e) of title 28, to the extent that such other assets are not subject to the jurisdiction and control of a foreign proceeding that has been recognized under this chapter.

''§ 1529. Coordination of a case under this title and a foreign proceeding

''If a foreign proceeding and a case under another chapter of this title are taking place concurrently regarding the same debtor, the court shall seek cooperation and coordination under sections 1525, 1526, and 1527, and the following shall apply:

''(1) If the case in the United States is taking place at the time the petition for recognition of the foreign proceeding is filed—

''(A) any relief granted under sections 1519 or 1521 must be consistent with the relief granted in the case in the United States; and

''(B) even if the foreign proceeding is recognized as a foreign main proceeding, section 1520 does not apply.

''(2) If a case in the United States under this title commences after recognition, or after the filing of the petition for recognition, of the foreign proceeding—

''(A) any relief in effect under sections 1519 or 1521 shall be reviewed by the court and shall be modified or terminated if inconsistent with the case in the United States; and

''(B) if the foreign proceeding is a foreign main proceeding, the stay and suspension referred to in section 1520(a) shall be modified or terminated if inconsistent with the relief granted in the case in the United States.

''(3) In granting, extending, or modifying relief granted to a representative of a foreign nonmain proceeding, the court must be satisfied that the relief relates to assets that, under the laws of the United States, should be administered in the foreign nonmain proceeding or concerns information required in that proceeding.

''(4) In achieving cooperation and coordination under sections 1528 and 1529, the court may grant any of the relief authorized under section 305.

''§ 1530. Coordination of more than 1 foreign proceeding

''In matters referred to in section 1501, with respect to more than 1 foreign proceeding regarding the debtor, the court shall seek cooperation and coordination under sections 1525, 1526, and 1527, and the following shall apply:

''(1) Any relief granted under section 1519 or 1521 to a representative of a foreign nonmain proceeding after recognition of a foreign main proceeding must be consistent with the foreign main proceeding.

''(2) If a foreign main proceeding is recognized after recognition, or after the filing of a petition for recognition, of a foreign nonmain proceeding, any relief in effect under section 1519 or 1521 shall be reviewed by the court and shall be modified or terminated if inconsistent with the foreign main proceeding.

''(3) If, after recognition of a foreign nonmain proceeding, another foreign nonmain proceeding is recognized, the court shall grant, modify, or terminate relief for the purpose of facilitating coordination of the proceedings.

''§ 1531. Presumption of insolvency based on recognition of a foreign main proceeding

''In the absence of evidence to the contrary, recognition of a foreign main proceeding is, for the purpose of commencing a proceeding under section 303, proof that the debtor is generally not paying its debts as such debts become due.

''§ 1532. Rule of payment in concurrent proceedings

''Without prejudice to secured claims or rights in rem, a creditor who has received payment with respect to its claim in a foreign proceeding pursuant to a law relating to insolvency may not receive a payment for the same claim in a case under any other chapter of this title regarding the debtor, so long as the payment to other creditors of the same class is proportionately less than the payment the creditor has already received.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 13 the following:

''15. Ancillary and Other Cross-Border Cases ..... 1501''.

SEC. 802. OTHER AMENDMENTS TO TITLES 11 AND 28, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) APPLICABILITY OF CHAPTERS.—Section 103 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting before the period the following: '', and this chapter, sections 307, 362(l), 555 through 557, and 559 through 562 apply in a case under chapter 15''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(j) Chapter 15 applies only in a case under such chapter, except that—

(2) BANKRUPTCY CASES AND PROCEEDINGS.—Section 1334(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking ''Nothing in'' and inserting ''Except with respect to a case under chapter 15 of title 11, nothing in''.

(3) DUTIES OF TRUSTEES.—Section 586(a)(3) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking ''or 13'' and inserting ''13, or 15,''.

(4) VENUE OF CASES ANCILLARY TO FOREIGN PROCEEDINGS.—Section 1410 of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§1410. Venue of cases ancillary to foreign proceedings

''A case under chapter 15 of title 11 may be commenced in the district court for the district—

''(1) in which the debtor has its principal place of business or principal assets in the United States;

''(2) if the debtor does not have a place of business or assets in the United States, in which there is pending against the debtor an action or proceeding in a Federal or State court; or

''(3) in a case other than those specified in paragraph (1) or (2), in which venue will be consistent with the interests of justice and the convenience of the parties, having regard to the relief sought by the foreign representative.''.

(d) OTHER SECTIONS OF TITLE 11.—

(1) Section 109(b)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(3)(A) a foreign insurance company, engaged in such business in the United States; or

''(B) a foreign bank, savings bank, cooperative bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, or credit union, that has a branch or agency (as defined in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101) in the United States.''.

(2) Section 303(k) of title 11, United States Code, is repealed.

(3)(A) Section 304 of title 11, United States Code, is repealed.

(B) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 304.

(C) Section 306 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking '', 304,'' each place it appears.

(4) Section 305(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(2)(A) a petition under section 1515 of this title for recognition of a foreign proceeding has been granted; and

''(B) the purposes of chapter 15 of this title would be best served by such dismissal or suspension.''.

(5) Section 508 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking subsection (a); and

(B) in subsection (b), by striking ''(b)''.

TITLE IX—FINANCIAL CONTRACT PROVISIONS

SEC. 901. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN AGREEMENTS BY CONSERVATORS OR RECEIVERS OF INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.

(a) DEFINITION OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(i)) is amended by inserting '', resolution, or order'' after ''any similar agreement that the Corporation determines by regulation''.

(b) DEFINITION OF SECURITIES CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(ii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(ii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(ii) SECURITIES CONTRACT.—The term 'securities contract'—

''(I) means a contract for the purchase, sale, or loan of a security, a certificate of deposit, a mortgage loan, or any interest in a mortgage loan, a group or index of securities, certificates of deposit, or mortgage loans or interests therein (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof) or any option on any of the foregoing, including any option to purchase or sell any such security, certificate of deposit, loan, interest, group or index, or option;

''(II) does not include any purchase, sale, or repurchase obligation under a participation in a commercial mortgage loan unless the Corporation determines by regulation, resolution, or order to include any such agreement within the meaning of such term;

''(III) means any option entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currencies;

''(IV) means the guarantee by or to any securities clearing agency of any settlement of cash, securities, certificates of deposit, mortgage loans or interests therein, group or index of securities, certificates of deposit, or mortgage loans or interests therein (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof) or option on any of the foregoing, including any option to purchase or sell any such security, certificate of deposit, loan, interest, group or index or option;

''(V) means any margin loan;

''(VI) means any other agreement or transaction that is similar to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(VII) means any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this clause;

''(VIII) means any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(IX) means a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a securities contract under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a securities contract under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII); and

''(X) means any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause.''.

(c) DEFINITION OF COMMODITY CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(iii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(iii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(iii) COMMODITY CONTRACT.—The term 'commodity contract' means—

''(I) with respect to a futures commission merchant, a contract for the purchase or sale of a commodity for future delivery on, or subject to the rules of, a contract market or board of trade;

''(II) with respect to a foreign futures commission merchant, a foreign future;

''(III) with respect to a leverage transaction merchant, a leverage transaction;

''(IV) with respect to a clearing organization, a contract for the purchase or sale of a commodity for future delivery on, or subject to the rules of, a contract market or board of trade that is cleared by such clearing organization, or commodity option traded on, or subject to the rules of, a contract market or board of trade that is cleared by such clearing organization;

''(V) with respect to a commodity options dealer, a commodity option;

''(VI) any other agreement or transaction that is similar to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(VII) any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this clause;

''(VIII) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(IX) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a commodity contract under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a commodity contract under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII); or

''(X) any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause.''.

(d) DEFINITION OF FORWARD CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(iv) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(iv)) is amended to read as follows:

''(iv) FORWARD CONTRACT.—The term 'forward contract' means—

''(I) a contract (other than a commodity contract) for the purchase, sale, or transfer of a commodity or any similar good, article, service, right, or interest which is presently or in the future becomes the subject of dealing in the forward contract trade, or product or byproduct thereof, with a maturity date more than 2 days after the date the contract is entered into, including, a repurchase transaction, reverse repurchase transaction, consignment, lease, swap, hedge transaction, deposit, loan, option, allocated transaction, unallocated transaction, or any other similar agreement;

''(II) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in subclauses (I) and (III);

''(III) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I) or (II);

''(IV) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclauses (I), (II), or (III), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a forward contract under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a forward contract under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (II), or (III); or

''(V) any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV).''.

(e) DEFINITION OF REPURCHASE AGREEMENT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(v) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(v)) is amended to read as follows:

''(v) REPURCHASE AGREEMENT.—The term 'repurchase agreement' (which definition also applies to a reverse repurchase agreement)—

''(I) means an agreement, including related terms, which provides for the transfer of one or more certificates of deposit, mortgage-related securities (as such term is defined in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934), mortgage loans, interests in mortgage-related securities or mortgage loans, eligible bankers' acceptances, qualified foreign government securities or securities that are direct obligations of, or that are fully guaranteed by, the United States or any agency of the United States against the transfer of funds by the transferee of such certificates of deposit, eligible bankers' acceptances, securities, loans, or interests with a simultaneous agreement by such transferee to transfer to the transferor thereof certificates of deposit, eligible bankers' acceptances, securities, loans, or interests as described above, at a date certain not later than 1 year after such transfers or on demand, against the transfer of funds, or any other similar agreement;

''(II) does not include any repurchase obligation under a participation in a commercial mortgage loan unless the Corporation determines by regulation, resolution, or order to include any such participation within the meaning of such term;

''(III) means any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in subclauses (I) and (IV);

''(IV) means any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I) or (III);

''(V) means a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (III), or (IV), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a repurchase agreement under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a repurchase agreement under this subclause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (III), or (IV); and

''(VI) means any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (III), (IV), or (V).

For purposes of this clause, the term 'qualified foreign government security' means a security that is a direct obligation of, or that is fully guaranteed by, the central government of a member of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (as determined by regulation or order adopted by the appropriate Federal banking authority).''.

(f) DEFINITION OF SWAP AGREEMENT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(vi) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(vi)) is amended to read as follows:

''(vi) SWAP AGREEMENT.—The term 'swap agreement' means—

''(I) any agreement, including the terms and conditions incorporated by reference in any such agreement, which is an interest rate swap, option, future, or forward agreement, including a rate floor, rate cap, rate collar, cross-currency rate swap, and basis swap; a spot, same day-tomorrow, tomorrow-next, forward, or other foreign exchange or precious metals agreement; a currency swap, option, future, or forward agreement; an equity index or equity swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a debt index or debt swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a credit spread or credit swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a commodity index or commodity swap, option, future, or forward agreement; or a weather swap, weather derivative, or weather option;

''(II) any agreement or transaction similar to any other agreement or transaction referred to in this clause that is presently, or in the future becomes, regularly entered into in the swap market (including terms and conditions incorporated by reference in such agreement) and that is a forward, swap, future, or option on one or more rates, currencies, commodities, equity securities or other equity instruments, debt securities or other debt instruments, or economic indices or measures of economic risk or value;

''(III) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in this clause;

''(IV) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(V) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement contains an agreement or transaction that is not a swap agreement under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a swap agreement under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV); and

''(VI) any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreements or transactions referred to in subparagraph (I), (II), (III), (IV), or (V).

Such term is applicable for purposes of this title only and shall not be construed or applied so as to challenge or affect the characterization, definition, or treatment of any swap agreement under any other statute, regulation, or rule, including the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, the Investment Company Act of 1940, the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970, the Commodity Exchange Act, and the regulations promulgated by the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.''.

(g) DEFINITION OF TRANSFER.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(viii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(viii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(viii) TRANSFER.—The term 'transfer' means every mode, direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary, of disposing of or parting with property or with an interest in property, including retention of title as a security interest and foreclosure of the depository institutions's equity of redemption.''.

(h) TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.—Section 11(e)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) by striking ''paragraph (10)'' and inserting ''paragraphs (9) and (10)'';

(B) in clause (i), by striking ''to cause the termination or liquidation'' and inserting ''such person has to cause the termination, liquidation, or acceleration''; and

(C) by striking clause (ii) and inserting the following:

''(ii) any right under any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to one or more qualified financial contracts described in clause (i);''; and

(2) in subparagraph (E), by striking clause (ii) and inserting the following:

''(ii) any right under any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to one or more qualified financial contracts described in clause (i);''.

(i) AVOIDANCE OF TRANSFERS.—Section 11(e)(8)(C)(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(C)(i)) is amended by inserting ''section 5242 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (12 U.S.C. 91) or any other Federal or State law relating to the avoidance of preferential or fraudulent transfers,'' before ''the Corporation''.

SEC. 902. AUTHORITY OF THE CORPORATION WITH RESPECT TO FAILED AND FAILING INSTITUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 11(e)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (E), by striking ''other than paragraph (12) of this subsection, subsection (d)(9)'' and inserting ''other than subsections (d)(9) and (e)(10)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

''(F) CLARIFICATION.—No provision of law shall be construed as limiting the right or power of the Corporation, or authorizing any court or agency to limit or delay, in any manner, the right or power of the Corporation to transfer any qualified financial contract in accordance with paragraphs (9) and (10) of this subsection or to disaffirm or repudiate any such contract in accordance with subsection (e)(1) of this section.

''(G) WALKAWAY CLAUSES NOT EFFECTIVE.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (E), and sections 403 and 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, no walkaway clause shall be enforceable in a qualified financial contract of an insured depository institution in default.

''(ii) WALKAWAY CLAUSE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'walkaway clause' means a provision in a qualified financial contract that, after calculation of a value of a party's position or an amount due to or from 1 of the parties in accordance with its terms upon termination, liquidation, or acceleration of the qualified financial contract, either does not create a payment obligation of a party or extinguishes a payment obligation of a party in whole or in part solely because of such party's status as a nondefaulting party.''.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 11(e)(12)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(12)(A)) is amended by inserting ''or the exercise of rights or powers by'' after ''the appointment of''.

(a) TRANSFERS OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS TO FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—Section 11(e)(9) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(9)) is amended to read as follows:

''(9) TRANSFER OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—In making any transfer of assets or liabilities of a depository institution in default which includes any qualified financial contract, the conservator or receiver for such depository institution shall either—

''(i) transfer to one financial institution, other than a financial institution for which a conservator, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, or other legal custodian has been appointed or which is otherwise the subject of a bankruptcy or insolvency proceeding—

''(I) all qualified financial contracts between any person or any affiliate of such person and the depository institution in default;

''(II) all claims of such person or any affiliate of such person against such depository institution under any such contract (other than any claim which, under the terms of any such contract, is subordinated to the claims of general unsecured creditors of such institution);

''(III) all claims of such depository institution against such person or any affiliate of such person under any such contract; and

''(IV) all property securing or any other credit enhancement for any contract described in subclause (I) or any claim described in subclause (II) or (III) under any such contract; or

''(ii) transfer none of the qualified financial contracts, claims, property or other credit enhancement referred to in clause (i) (with respect to such person and any affiliate of such person).

''(B) TRANSFER TO FOREIGN BANK, FOREIGN FINANCIAL INSTITUTION, OR BRANCH OR AGENCY OF A FOREIGN BANK OR FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—In transferring any qualified financial contract and related claims and property under subparagraph (A)(i), the conservator or receiver for the depository institution shall not make such transfer to a foreign bank, financial institution organized under the laws of a foreign country, or a branch or agency of a foreign bank or financial institution unless, under the law applicable to such bank, financial institution, branch or agency, to the qualified financial contracts, and to any netting contract, any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to one or more qualified financial contracts, the contractual rights of the parties to such qualified financial contracts, netting contracts, security agreements or arrangements, or other credit enhancements are enforceable substantially to the same extent as permitted under this section.

''(C) TRANSFER OF CONTRACTS SUBJECT TO THE RULES OF A CLEARING ORGANIZATION.—In the event that a conservator or receiver transfers any qualified financial contract and related claims, property, and credit enhancements pursuant to subparagraph (A)(i) and such contract is subject to the rules of a clearing organization, the clearing organization shall not be required to accept the transferee as a member by virtue of the transfer.

''(D) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'financial institution' means a broker or dealer, a depository institution, a futures commission merchant, or any other institution, as determined by the Corporation by regulation to be a financial institution.''.

(b) NOTICE TO QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACT COUNTERPARTIES.—Section 11(e)(10)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(10)(A)) is amended in the material immediately following clause (ii) by striking ''the conservator'' and all that follows through the period and inserting the following: ''the conservator or receiver shall notify any person who is a party to any such contract of such transfer by 5:00 p.m. (eastern time) on the business day following the date of the appointment of the receiver in the case of a receivership, or the business day following such transfer in the case of a conservatorship.''.

(c) RIGHTS AGAINST RECEIVER AND TREATMENT OF BRIDGE BANKS.—Section 11(e)(10) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(10)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (D); and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraphs:

''(B) CERTAIN RIGHTS NOT ENFORCEABLE.—

''(i) RECEIVERSHIP.—A person who is a party to a qualified financial contract with an insured depository institution may not exercise any right that such person has to terminate, liquidate, or net such contract under paragraph (8)(A) of this subsection or section 403 or 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, solely by reason of or incidental to the appointment of a receiver for the depository institution (or the insolvency or financial condition of the depository institution for which the receiver has been appointed)—

''(I) until 5:00 p.m. (eastern time) on the business day following the date of the appointment of the receiver; or

''(II) after the person has received notice that the contract has been transferred pursuant to paragraph (9)(A).

''(ii) CONSERVATORSHIP.—A person who is a party to a qualified financial contract with an insured depository institution may not exercise any right that such person has to terminate, liquidate, or net such contract under paragraph (8)(E) of this subsection or sections 403 or 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, solely by reason of or incidental to the appointment of a conservator for the depository institution (or the insolvency or financial condition of the depository institution for which the conservator has been appointed).

''(iii) NOTICE.—For purposes of this paragraph, the Corporation as receiver or conservator of an insured depository institution shall be deemed to have notified a person who is a party to a qualified financial contract with such depository institution if the Corporation has taken steps reasonably calculated to provide notice to such person by the time specified in subparagraph (A).

''(C) TREATMENT OF BRIDGE BANKS.—The following institutions shall not be considered to be a financial institution for which a conservator, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, or other legal custodian has been appointed or which is otherwise the subject of a bankruptcy or insolvency proceeding for purposes of paragraph (9):

''(i) A bridge bank.

''(ii) A depository institution organized by the Corporation, for which a conservator is appointed either—

''(I) immediately upon the organization of the institution; or

''(II) at the time of a purchase and assumption transaction between the depository institution and the Corporation as receiver for a depository institution in default.''.

SEC. 904. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO DISAFFIRMANCE OR REPUDIATION OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.

Section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (11) through (15) as paragraphs (12) through (16), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (10) the following new paragraph:

''(11) DISAFFIRMANCE OR REPUDIATION OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.—In exercising the rights of disaffirmance or repudiation of a conservator or receiver with respect to any qualified financial contract to which an insured depository institution is a party, the conservator or receiver for such institution shall either—

''(A) disaffirm or repudiate all qualified financial contracts between—

''(i) any person or any affiliate of such person; and

''(ii) the depository institution in default; or

''(B) disaffirm or repudiate none of the qualified financial contracts referred to in subparagraph (A) (with respect to such person or any affiliate of such person).''.

SEC. 905. CLARIFYING AMENDMENT RELATING TO MASTER AGREEMENTS.

Section 11(e)(8)(D)(vii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(vii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(vii) TREATMENT OF MASTER AGREEMENT AS ONE AGREEMENT.—Any master agreement for any contract or agreement described in any preceding clause of this subparagraph (or any master agreement for such master agreement or agreements), together with all supplements to such master agreement, shall be treated as a single agreement and a single qualified financial contract. If a master agreement contains provisions relating to agreements or transactions that are not themselves qualified financial contracts, the master agreement shall be deemed to be a qualified financial contract only with respect to those transactions that are themselves qualified financial contracts.''.

SEC. 906. FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1991.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 402 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 (12 U.S.C. 4402) is amended—

(3) in section 761(4)—

(A) by striking ''or'' at the end of subparagraph (D); and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(F) any other agreement or transaction that is similar to an agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(G) any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this paragraph;

''(H) any option to enter into an agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(I) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (G), or (H), together with all supplements to such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a commodity contract under this paragraph, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a commodity contract under this paragraph only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (G), or (H); or

''(J) any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph, but not to exceed the actual value of such contract on the date of the filing of the petition;''.

(b) DEFINITIONS OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTION, FINANCIAL PARTICIPANT, AND FORWARD CONTRACT MERCHANT.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (22) and inserting the following:

''(22) 'financial institution' means—

''(A) a Federal reserve bank, or an entity (domestic or foreign) that is a commercial or savings bank, industrial savings bank, savings and loan association, trust company, or receiver or conservator for such entity and, when any such Federal reserve bank, receiver, conservator or entity is acting as agent or custodian for a customer in connection with a securities contract, as defined in section 741, such customer; or

''(B) in connection with a securities contract, as defined in section 741, an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940;'';

(2) by inserting after paragraph (22) the following:

''(22A) 'financial participant' means an entity that, at the time it enters into a securities contract, commodity contract, or forward contract, or at the time of the filing of the petition, has one or more agreements or transactions described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of section 561(a) with the debtor or any other entity (other than an affiliate) of a total gross dollar value of not less than $1,000,000,000 in notional or actual principal amount outstanding on any day during the previous 15-month period, or has gross mark-to-market positions of not less than $100,000,000 (aggregated across counterparties) in one or more such agreements or transactions with the debtor or any other entity (other than an affiliate) on any day during the previous 15-month period;''; and

(3) by striking paragraph (26) and inserting the following:

''(26) 'forward contract merchant' means a Federal reserve bank, or an entity, the business of which consists in whole or in part of entering into forward contracts as or with merchants or in a commodity, as defined or in section 761 or any similar good, article, service, right, or interest which is presently or in the future becomes the subject of dealing in the forward contract trade;''.

(c) DEFINITION OF MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT AND MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT PARTICIPANT.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (38) the following new paragraphs:

''(38A) 'master netting agreement'—

''(A) means an agreement providing for the exercise of rights, including rights of netting, setoff, liquidation, termination, acceleration, or closeout, under or in connection with one or more contracts that are described in any one or more of paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 561(a), or any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to one or more of the foregoing; and

''(B) if the agreement contains provisions relating to agreements or transactions that are not contracts described in paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 561(a), shall be deemed to be a master netting agreement only with respect to those agreements or transactions that are described in any one or more of paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 561(a);

''(38B) 'master netting agreement participant' means an entity that, at any time before the filing of the petition, is a party to an outstanding master netting agreement with the debtor;''.

(d) SWAP AGREEMENTS, SECURITIES CONTRACTS, COMMODITY CONTRACTS, FORWARD CONTRACTS, REPURCHASE AGREEMENTS, AND MASTER NETTING AGREEMENTS UNDER THE AUTOMATIC-STAY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (6), by inserting '', pledged to, and under the control of,'' after ''held by'';

(B) in paragraph (7), by inserting '', pledged to, and under the control of,'' after ''held by'';

(C) by striking paragraph (17) and inserting the following:

''(17) under subsection (a), of the setoff by a swap participant of a mutual debt and claim under or in connection with one or more swap agreements that constitutes the setoff of a claim against the debtor for any payment or other transfer of property due from the debtor under or in connection with any swap agreement against any payment due to the debtor from the swap participant under or in connection with any swap agreement or against cash, securities, or other property held by, pledged to, and under the control of, or due from such swap participant to margin, guarantee, secure, or settle any swap agreement;''; and

(D) by inserting after paragraph (27), as added by this Act, the following new paragraph:

''(28) under subsection (a), of the setoff by a master netting agreement participant of a mutual debt and claim under or in connection with one or more master netting agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements that constitutes the setoff of a claim against the debtor for any payment or other transfer of property due from the debtor under or in connection with such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements against any payment due to the debtor from such master netting agreement participant under or in connection with such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements or against cash, securities, or other property held by, pledged to, and under the control of, or due from such master netting agreement participant to margin, guarantee, secure, or settle such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements, to the extent that such participant is eligible to exercise such offset rights under paragraph (6), (7), or (17) for each individual contract covered by the master netting agreement in issue; or''.

(2) LIMITATION.—Section 362 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(l) LIMITATION.—The exercise of rights not subject to the stay arising under subsection (a) pursuant to paragraph (6), (7), (17), or (28) of subsection (b) shall not be stayed by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under this title.''.

(e) LIMITATION OF AVOIDANCE POWERS UNDER MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT.—Section 546 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended—

(1) in subsection (g) (as added by section 103 of Public Law 101–311)—

(A) by striking ''under a swap agreement''; and

(B) by striking ''in connection with a swap agreement'' and inserting ''under or in connection with any swap agreement''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(k) Notwithstanding sections 544, 545, 547, 548(a)(1)(B), and 548(b) the trustee may not avoid a transfer made by or to a master netting agreement participant under or in connection with any master netting agreement or any individual contract covered thereby that is made before the commencement of the case, except under section 548(a)(1)(A) and except to the extent that the trustee could otherwise avoid such a transfer made under an individual contract covered by such master netting agreement.''.

(f) FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS OF MASTER NETTING AGREEMENTS.—Section 548(d)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (D), by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(E) a master netting agreement participant that receives a transfer in connection with a master netting agreement or any individual contract covered thereby takes for value to the extent of such transfer, except that, with respect to a transfer under any individual contract covered thereby, to the extent that such master netting agreement participant otherwise did not take (or is otherwise not deemed to have taken) such transfer for value.''.

(g) TERMINATION OR ACCELERATION OF SECURITIES CONTRACTS.—Section 555 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

(i) TERMINATION OR ACCELERATION OF REPURCHASE AGREEMENTS.—Section 559 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

''§ 559. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a repurchase agreement'';

and

(2) in the first sentence, by striking ''liquidation'' and inserting ''liquidation, termination, or acceleration''.

(j) LIQUIDATION, TERMINATION, OR ACCELERATION OF SWAP AGREEMENTS.—Section 560 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

''§ 560. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a swap agreement'';

(2) in the first sentence, by striking ''termination of a swap agreement'' and inserting ''liquidation, termination, or acceleration of one or more swap agreements''; and

(3) by striking ''in connection with any swap agreement'' and inserting ''in connection with the termination, liquidation, or acceleration of one or more swap agreements''.

(k) LIQUIDATION, TERMINATION, ACCELERATION, OR OFFSET UNDER A MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT AND ACROSS CONTRACTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 560 the following:

''§ 561. Contractual right to terminate, liquidate, accelerate, or offset under a master netting agreement and across contracts

''(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the exercise of any contractual right, because of a condition of the kind specified in section 365(e)(1), to cause the termination, liquidation, or acceleration of or to offset or net termination values, payment amounts, or other transfer obligations arising under or in connection with one or more (or the termination, liquidation, or acceleration of one or more)—

''(1) securities contracts, as defined in section 741(7);

''(2) commodity contracts, as defined in section 761(4);

''(3) forward contracts;

''(4) repurchase agreements;

''(5) swap agreements; or

''(6) master netting agreements, shall not be stayed, avoided, or otherwise limited by operation of any provision of this title or by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under this title.

''(b) EXCEPTION.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—A party may exercise a contractual right described in subsection (a) to terminate, liquidate, or accelerate only to the extent that such party could exercise such a right under section 555, 556, 559, or 560 for each individual contract covered by the master netting agreement in issue.

''(2) COMMODITY BROKERS.—If a debtor is a commodity broker subject to subchapter IV of chapter 7—

''(A) a party may not net or offset an obligation to the debtor arising under, or in connection with, a commodity contract against any claim arising under, or in connection with, other instruments, contracts, or agreements listed in subsection (a) except to the extent that the party has positive net equity in the commodity accounts at the debtor, as calculated under that subchapter IV; and

''(B) another commodity broker may not net or offset an obligation to the debtor arising under, or in connection with, a commodity contract entered into or held on behalf of a customer of the debtor against any claim arising under, or in connection with, other instruments, contracts, or agreements listed in subsection (a).

''(3) CONSTRUCTION.—No provision of subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (2) shall prohibit the offset of claims and obligations that arise under—

''(A) a cross-margining agreement that has been approved by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission or submitted to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission under section 5(a)(12)(A) of the Commodity Exchange Act and has been approved; or

''(B) any other netting agreement between a clearing organization, as defined in section 761, and another entity that has been approved by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

''(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term 'contractual right' includes a right set forth in a rule or bylaw of a national securities exchange, a national securities association, or a securities clearing agency, a right set forth in a bylaw of a clearing organization or contract market or in a resolution of the governing board thereof, and a right, whether or not evidenced in writing, arising under common law, under law merchant, or by reason of normal business practice.

''(d) CASES ANCILLARY TO FOREIGN PROCEEDINGS.—Any provisions of this title relating to securities contracts, commodity contracts, forward contracts, repurchase agreements, swap agreements, or master netting agreements shall apply in a case under chapter 15 of this title, so that enforcement of contractual provisions of such contracts and agreements in accordance with their terms will not be stayed or otherwise limited by operation of any provision of this title or by order of a court in any case under this title, and to limit avoidance powers to the same extent as in a proceeding under chapter 7 or 11 of this title (such enforcement not to be limited based on the presence or absence of assets of the debtor in the United States).''.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 560 the following:

''561. Contractual right to terminate, liquidate, accelerate, or offset under a master netting agreement and across contracts.

(l) COMMODITY BROKER LIQUIDATIONS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 766 the following:

''§ 767. Commodity broker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, financial participants, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants

''Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the exercise of rights by a forward contract merchant, commodity broker, stockbroker, financial institution, financial participant, securities clearing agency, swap participant, repo participant, or master netting agreement participant under this title shall not affect the priority of any unsecured claim it may have after the exercise of such rights.''.

(m) STOCKBROKER LIQUIDATIONS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 752 the following:

''§ 753. Stockbroker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants

''Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the exercise of rights by a forward contract merchant, commodity broker, stockbroker, financial institution, securities clearing agency, swap participant, repo participant, financial participant, or master netting agreement participant under this title shall not affect the priority of any unsecured claim it may have after the exercise of such rights.''.

(n) SETOFF.—Section 553 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3)(C), by inserting before the period the following: ''(except for a setoff of a kind described in section 362(b)(6), 362(b)(7), 362(b)(17), 362(b)(28), 555, 556, 559, 560, or 561 of this title)''; and

(2) in subsection (b)(1), by striking ''362(b)(14),'' and inserting ''362(b)(17), 362(b)(28), 555, 556, 559, 560, 561''.

(o) SECURITIES CONTRACTS, COMMODITY CONTRACTS, AND FORWARD CONTRACTS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 362(b)(6), by striking ''financial institutions,'' each place such term appears and inserting ''financial institution, financial participant,'';

(2) in section 546(e), by inserting ''financial participant,'' after ''financial institution,'';

(3) in section 548(d)(2)(B), by inserting ''financial participant,'' after ''financial institution,'';

(4) in section 555—

(A) by inserting ''financial participant,'' after ''financial institution,''; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end '', a right set forth in a bylaw of a clearing organization or contract market or in a resolution of the governing board thereof, and a right, whether or not in writing, arising under common law, under law merchant, or by reason of normal business practice''; and

(5) in section 556, by inserting '', financial participant,'' after ''commodity broker''.

(p) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the table of sections for chapter 5—

(A) by amending the items relating to sections 555 and 556 to read as follows:

''555. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract.

''556. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a commodities contract or forward contract.'';

and

(B) by amending the items relating to sections 559 and 560 to read as follows:

''559. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a repurchase agreement.

''560. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a swap agreement.'';

and

(2) in the table of sections for chapter 7—

(A) by inserting after the item relating to section 766 the following:

''767. Commodity broker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants.'';

and

(B) by inserting after the item relating to section 752 the following:

''753. Stockbroker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants.''.

SEC. 908. RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.

Section 11(e)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(H) RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.—The Corporation, in consultation with the appropriate Federal banking agencies, may prescribe regulations requiring more detailed recordkeeping with respect to qualified financial contracts (including market valuations) by insured depository institutions.''.

SEC. 909. EXEMPTIONS FROM CONTEMPORANEOUS EXECUTION REQUIREMENT.

Section 13(e)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(e)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

''(2) EXEMPTIONS FROM CONTEMPORANEOUS EXECUTION REQUIREMENT.—An agreement to provide for the lawful collateralization of—

''(A) deposits of, or other credit extension by, a Federal, State, or local governmental entity, or of any depositor referred to in section 11(a)(2), including an agreement to provide collateral in lieu of a surety bond;

''(B) bankruptcy estate funds pursuant to section 345(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code;

''(C) extensions of credit, including any overdraft, from a Federal reserve bank or Federal home loan bank; or

''(D) one or more qualified financial contracts, as defined in section 11(e)(8)(D), shall not be deemed invalid pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) solely because such agreement was not executed contemporaneously with the acquisition of the collateral or because of pledges, delivery, or substitution of the collateral made in accordance with such agreement.''.

SEC. 910. DAMAGE MEASURE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting after section 561, as added by this Act, the following:

''§ 562. Damage measure in connection with swap agreements, securities contracts, forward contracts, commodity contracts, repurchase agreements, or master netting agreements

''If the trustee rejects a swap agreement, securities contract (as defined in section 741), forward contract, commodity contract (as defined in section 761), repurchase agreement, or master netting agreement pursuant to section 365(a), or if a forward contract merchant, stockbroker, financial institution, securities clearing agency, repo participant, financial participant, master netting agreement participant, or swap participant liquidates, terminates, or accelerates such contract or agreement, damages shall be measured as of the earlier of—

''(1) the date of such rejection; or

''(2) the date of such liquidation, termination, or acceleration.''; and

(2) in the table of sections for chapter 5, by inserting after the item relating to section 561 (as added by this Act) the following:

''562. Damage measure in connection with swap agreements, securities contracts, forward contracts, commodity contracts, repurchase agreements, or master netting agreements.''.

(b) CLAIMS ARISING FROM REJECTION.—Section 502(g) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(g)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) A claim for damages calculated in accordance with section 562 of this title shall be allowed under subsection (a), (b), or (c), or disallowed under subsection (d) or (e), as if such claim had arisen before the date of the filing of the petition.''.

SEC. 911. SIPC STAY.

Section 5(b)(2) of the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 (15 U.S.C. 78eee(b)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(C) EXCEPTION FROM STAY.—

''(i) Notwithstanding section 362 of title 11, United States Code, neither the filing of an application under subsection (a)(3) nor any order or decree obtained by SIPC from the court shall operate as a stay of any contractual rights of a creditor to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract, commodity contract, forward contract, repurchase agreement, swap agreement, or master netting agreement, as those terms are defined in sections 101 and 741 of title 11, United States Code, to offset or net termination values, payment amounts, or other transfer obligations arising under or in connection with one or more of such contracts or agreements, or to foreclose on any cash collateral pledged by the debtor, whether or not with respect to one or more of such contracts or agreements.

''(ii) Notwithstanding clause (i), such application, order, or decree may operate as a stay of the foreclosure on, or disposition of, securities collateral pledged by the debtor, whether or not with respect to one or more of such contracts or agreements, securities sold by the debtor under a repurchase agreement, or securities lent under a securities lending agreement.

''(iii) As used in this subparagraph, the term 'contractual right' includes a right set forth in a rule or bylaw of a national securities exchange, a national securities association, or a securities clearing agency, a right set forth in a bylaw of a clearing organization or contract market or in a resolution of the governing board thereof, and a right, whether or not in writing, arising under common law, under law merchant, or by reason of normal business practice.''.

SEC. 912. ASSET-BACKED SECURITIZATIONS.

Section 541 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by inserting after paragraph (7), as added by this Act, the following:

''(8) any eligible asset (or proceeds thereof), to the extent that such eligible asset was transferred by the debtor, before the date of commencement of the case, to an eligible entity in connection with an asset-backed securitization, except to the extent such asset (or proceeds or value thereof) may be recovered by the trustee under section 550 by virtue of avoidance under section 548(a);''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(f) For purposes of this section—

''(1) the term 'asset-backed securitization' means a transaction in which eligible assets transferred to an eligible entity are used as the source of payment on securities, including, without limitation, all securities issued by governmental units, at least one class or tranche of which was rated investment grade by one or more nationally recognized securities rating organizations, when the securities were initially issued by an issuer;

''(2) the term 'eligible asset' means—

''(A) financial assets (including interests therein and proceeds thereof), either fixed or revolving, whether or not the same are in existence as of the date of the transfer, including residential and commercial mortgage loans, consumer receivables, trade receivables, assets of governmental units, including payment obligations relating to taxes, receipts, fines, tickets, and other sources of revenue, and lease receivables, that, by their terms, convert into cash within a finite time period, plus any residual interest in property subject to receivables included in such financial assets plus any rights or other assets designed to assure the servicing or timely distribution of proceeds to security holders;

''(B) cash; and

''(C) securities, including without limitation, all securities issued by governmental units;

''(3) the term 'eligible entity' means—

''(A) an issuer; or

''(B) a trust, corporation, partnership, governmental unit, limited liability company (including a single member limited liability company), or other entity engaged exclusively in the business of acquiring and transferring eligible assets directly or indirectly to an issuer and taking actions ancillary thereto;

''(4) the term 'issuer' means a trust, corporation, partnership, or other entity engaged exclusively in the business of acquiring and holding eligible assets, issuing securities backed by eligible assets, and taking actions ancillary thereto; and

''(5) the term 'transferred' means the debtor, under a written agreement, represented and warranted that eligible assets were sold, contributed, or otherwise conveyed with the intention of removing them from the estate of the debtor pursuant to subsection (b)(8) (whether or not reference is made to this title or any section hereof), irrespective and without limitation of—

''(A) whether the debtor directly or indirectly obtained or held an interest in the issuer or in any securities issued by the issuer;

''(B) whether the debtor had an obligation to repurchase or to service or supervise the servicing of all or any portion of such eligible assets; or

''(C) the characterization of such sale, contribution, or other conveyance for tax, accounting, regulatory reporting, or other purposes.''.

SEC. 913. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This title shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.—The amendments made by this title shall apply with respect to cases commenced or appointments made under any Federal or State law after the date of enactment of this Act, but shall not apply with respect to cases commenced or appointments made under any Federal or State law before the date of enactment of this Act.

''(4) The dollar amount in section 101(18) shall be adjusted at the same times and in the same manner as the dollar amounts in paragraph (1) of this subsection, beginning with the adjustment to be made on April 1, 2001.''.

SEC. 1003. CERTAIN CLAIMS OWED TO GOVERNMENTAL UNITS.

(a) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—Section 1222(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(2) provide for the full payment, in deferred cash payments, of all claims entitled to priority under section 507, unless—

''(A) the claim is a claim owed to a governmental unit that arises as a result of the sale, transfer, exchange, or other disposition of any farm asset used in the debtor's farming operation, in which case the claim shall be treated as an unsecured claim that is not entitled to priority under section 507, but the debt shall be treated in such manner only if the debtor receives a discharge; or

''(B) the holder of a particular claim agrees to a different treatment of that claim;''.

(b) SPECIAL NOTICE PROVISIONS.—Section 1231(b) of title 11, United States Code, as so designated by this Act, is amended by striking ''a State or local governmental unit'' and inserting ''any governmental unit''.

TITLE XI—HEALTH CARE AND EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

SEC. 1101. DEFINITIONS.

(a) HEALTH CARE BUSINESS DEFINED.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (27A), as added by this Act, as paragraph (27B); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (27) the following:

''(27A) 'health care business'—

''(A) means any public or private entity (without regard to whether that entity is organized for profit or not for profit) that is primarily engaged in offering to the general public facilities and services for—

''(i) the diagnosis or treatment of injury, deformity, or disease; and

''(ii) surgical, drug treatment, psychiatric, or obstetric care; and

''(B) includes—

''(i) any—

''(I) general or specialized hospital;

''(II) ancillary ambulatory, emergency, or surgical treatment facility;

''(III) hospice;

''(IV) home health agency; and

''(V) other health care institution that is similar to an entity referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV); and

''(ii) any long-term care facility, including any—

''(I) skilled nursing facility;

''(II) intermediate care facility;

''(III) assisted living facility;

''(IV) home for the aged;

''(V) domiciliary care facility; and

''(VI) health care institution that is related to a facility referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), (IV), or (V), if that institution is primarily engaged in offering room, board, laundry, or personal assistance with activities of daily living and incidentals to activities of daily living;''.

(b) PATIENT AND PATIENT RECORDS DEFINED.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (40) the following:

''(40A) 'patient' means any person who obtains or receives services from a health care business;

''(40B) 'patient records' means any written document relating to a patient or a record recorded in a magnetic, optical, or other form of electronic medium;''.

(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The amendments made by subsection (a) of this section shall not affect the interpretation of section 109(b) of title 11, United States Code.

SEC. 1102. DISPOSAL OF PATIENT RECORDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter III of chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 351. Disposal of patient records

''If a health care business commences a case under chapter 7, 9, or 11, and the trustee does not have a sufficient amount of funds to pay for the storage of patient records in the manner required under applicable Federal or State law, the following requirements shall apply:

''(1) The trustee shall—

''(A) promptly publish notice, in 1 or more appropriate newspapers, that if patient records are not claimed by the patient or an insurance provider (if applicable law permits the insurance provider to make that claim) by the date that is 365 days after the date of that notification, the trustee will destroy the patient records; and

''(B) during the first 180 days of the 365-day period described in subparagraph (A), promptly attempt to notify directly each patient that is the subject of the patient records and appropriate insurance carrier concerning the patient records by mailing to the last known address of that patient, or a family member or contact person for that patient, and to the appropriate insurance carrier an appropriate notice regarding the claiming or disposing of patient records.

''(2) If, after providing the notification under paragraph (1), patient records are not claimed during the 365-day period described under that paragraph, the trustee shall mail, by certified mail, at the end of such 365-day period a written request to each appropriate Federal agency to request permission from that agency to deposit the patient records with that agency, except that no Federal agency is required to accept patient records under this paragraph.

''(3) If, following the 365-day period described in paragraph (2) and after providing the notification under paragraph (1), patient records are not claimed by a patient or insurance provider, or request is not granted by a Federal agency to deposit such records with that agency, the trustee shall destroy those records by—

''(A) if the records are written, shredding or burning the records; or

''(B) if the records are magnetic, optical, or other electronic records, by otherwise destroying those records so that those records cannot be retrieved.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 350 the following:

''351. Disposal of patient records.''.

SEC. 1103. ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSE CLAIM FOR COSTS OF CLOSING A HEALTH CARE BUSINESS AND OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Section 503(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(8) the actual, necessary costs and expenses of closing a health care business incurred by a trustee or by a Federal agency (as that term is defined in section 551(1) of title 5) or a department or agency of a State or political subdivision thereof, including any cost or expense incurred—

''(A) in disposing of patient records in accordance with section 351; or

''(B) in connection with transferring patients from the health care business that is in the process of being closed to another health care business;

''(9) with respect to a nonresidential real property lease previously assumed under section 365, and subsequently rejected, a sum equal to all monetary obligations due, excluding those arising from or related to a failure to operate or penalty provisions, for the period of 2 years following the later of the rejection date or date of actual turnover of the premises, without reduction or setoff for any reason whatsoever except for sums actually received or to be received from a nondebtor, and the claim for remaining sums due for the balance of the term of the lease shall be a claim under section 502(b)(6); and''.

SEC. 1104. APPOINTMENT OF OMBUDSMAN TO ACT AS PATIENT ADVOCATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) APPOINTMENT OF OMBUDSMAN.—Subchapter II of chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 331 the following:

''§ 332. Appointment of ombudsman

''(a) IN GENERAL.—

''(1) AUTHORITY TO APPOINT.—Not later than 30 days after a case is commenced by a health care business under chapter 7, 9, or 11, the court shall order the appointment of an ombudsman to monitor the quality of patient care to represent the interests of the patients of the health care business, unless the court finds that the appointment of the ombudsman is not necessary for the protection of patients under the specific facts of the case.

''(2) QUALIFICATIONS.—If the court orders the appointment of an ombudsman, the United States trustee shall appoint 1 disinterested person, other than the United States trustee, to serve as an ombudsman, including a person who is serving as a State Long-Term Care Ombudsman appointed under title III or VII of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3021 et seq., 3058 et seq.).

''(b) DUTIES.—An ombudsman appointed under subsection (a) shall—

''(1) monitor the quality of patient care, to the extent necessary under the circumstances, including interviewing patients and physicians;

''(2) not later than 60 days after the date of appointment, and not less frequently than every 60 days thereafter, report to the court, at a hearing or in writing, regarding the quality of patient care at the health care business involved; and

''(3) if the ombudsman determines that the quality of patient care is declining significantly or is otherwise being materially compromised, notify the court by motion or written report, with notice to appropriate parties in interest, immediately upon making that determination.

''(c) CONFIDENTIALITY.—An ombudsman shall maintain any information obtained by the ombudsman under this section that relates to patients (including information relating to patient records) as confidential information. The ombudsman may not review confidential patient records, unless the court provides prior approval, with restrictions on the ombudsman to protect the confidentiality of patient records.''.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 331 the following:

''332. Appointment of ombudsman.''.

(b) COMPENSATION OF OMBUDSMAN.—Section 330(a)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the matter proceeding subparagraph (A), by inserting ''an ombudsman appointed under section 331, or'' before ''a professional person''; and

(2) in subparagraph (A), by inserting ''ombudsman,'' before ''professional person''.

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title—

''(1) compensation referred to in subsection (b)(3) is payable and may be collected by the trustee under that paragraph, even if such amount has been discharged in a prior proceeding under this title; and

''(2) such compensation is payable in a case under this chapter only to the extent permitted by subsection (b)(3).''.

SEC. 1227. AMENDMENT TO SECTION 362 OF TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 362(b)(18) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(18) under subsection (a) of the creation or perfection of a statutory lien for an ad valorem property tax, or a special tax or special assessment on real property whether or not ad valorem, imposed by a governmental unit, if such tax or assessment comes due after the filing of the petition;''.

SEC. 1228. JUDICIAL EDUCATION.

The Director of the Federal Judicial Center, in consultation with the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees, shall develop materials and conduct such training as may be useful to courts in implementing this Act and the amendments made by this Act, including the requirements relating to the means test and reaffirmations under section 707(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act.

SEC. 1229. RECLAMATION.

(a) RIGHTS AND POWERS OF THE TRUSTEE.—Section 546(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(c)(1) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section and subsection (c) of section 507, and subject to the prior rights of holders of security interests in such goods or the proceeds thereof, the rights and powers of the trustee under sections 544(a), 545, 547, and 549 are subject to the right of a seller of goods that has sold goods to the debtor, in the ordinary course of such seller's business, to reclaim such goods if the debtor has received such goods while insolvent, not later than 45 days after the date of the commencement of a case under this title, but such seller may not reclaim such goods unless such seller demands in writing reclamation of such goods—

''(A) not later than 45 days after the date of receipt of such goods by the debtor; or

''(B) not later than 20 days after the date of commencement of the case, if the 45-day period expires after the commencement of the case.

''(2) If a seller of goods fails to provide notice in the manner described in paragraph (1), the seller still may assert the rights contained in section 503(b)(7).''.

(b) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Section 503(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(10) the value of any goods received by the debtor not later than 20 days after the date of commencement of a case under this title in which the goods have been sold to the debtor in the ordinary course of such debtor's business.''.

SEC. 1230. PROVIDING REQUESTED TAX DOCUMENTS TO THE COURT.

(a) CHAPTER 7 CASES.—The court shall not grant a discharge in the case of an individual seeking bankruptcy under chapter 7 of title 11, United States Code, unless requested tax documents have been provided to the court.

(b) CHAPTER 11 AND CHAPTER 13 CASES.—The court shall not confirm a plan of reorganization in the case of an individual under chapter 11 or 13 of title 11, United States Code, unless requested tax documents have been filed with the court.

(c) DOCUMENT RETENTION.—The court shall destroy documents submitted in support of a bankruptcy claim not sooner than 3 years after the date of the conclusion of a bankruptcy case filed by an individual under chapter 7, 11, or 13 of title 11, United States Code. In the event of a pending audit or enforcement action, the court may extend the time for destruction of such requested tax documents.

SEC. 1231. ENCOURAGING CREDITWORTHINESS.

(a) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) certain lenders may sometimes offer credit to consumers indiscriminately, without taking steps to ensure that consumers are capable of repaying the resulting debt, and in a manner which may encourage certain consumers to accumulate additional debt; and

(2) resulting consumer debt may increasingly be a major contributing factor to consumer insolvency.

(b) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (hereafter in this section referred to as the ''Board'') shall conduct a study of—

(1) consumer credit industry practices of soliciting and extending credit—

(A) indiscriminately;

(B) without taking steps to ensure that consumers are capable of repaying the resulting debt; and

(C) in a manner that encourages consumers to accumulate additional debt; and

(2) the effects of such practices on consumer debt and insolvency.

(c) REPORT AND REGULATIONS.—Not later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Board—

(1) shall make public a report on its findings with respect to the indiscriminate solicitation and extension of credit by the credit industry;

(2) may issue regulations that would require additional disclosures to consumers; and

(3) may take any other actions, consistent with its existing statutory authority, that the Board finds necessary to ensure responsible industrywide practices and to prevent resulting consumer debt and insolvency.

SEC. 1232. PROPERTY NO LONGER SUBJECT TO REDEMPTION.

Section 541(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (8), as added by this Act, the following:

''(9) subject to subchapter III of chapter 5, any interest of the debtor in property where the debtor pledged or sold tangible personal property (other than securities or written or printed evidences of indebtedness or title) as collateral for a loan or advance of money given by a person licensed under law to make such loans or advances, where—

''(A) the tangible personal property is in the possession of the pledgee or transferee;

''(B) the debtor has no obligation to repay the money, redeem the collateral, or buy back the property at a stipulated price; and

''(C) neither the debtor nor the trustee have exercised any right to redeem provided under the contract or State law, in a timely manner as provided under State law and section 108(b) of this title; or''.

SEC. 1233. TRUSTEES.

(a) SUSPENSION AND TERMINATION OF PANEL TRUSTEES AND STANDING TRUSTEES.—Section 586(d) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(d)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) A trustee whose appointment under subsection (a)(1) or under subsection (b) is terminated or who ceases to be assigned to cases filed under title 11, United States Code, may obtain judicial review of the final agency decision by commencing an action in the United States district court for the district for which the panel to which the trustee is appointed under subsection (a)(1), or in the United States district court for the district in which the trustee is appointed under subsection (b) resides, after first exhausting all available administrative remedies, which if the trustee so elects, shall also include an administrative hearing on the record. Unless the trustee elects to have an administrative hearing on the record, the trustee shall be deemed to have exhausted all administrative remedies for purposes of this paragraph if the agency fails to make a final agency decision within 90 days after the trustee requests administrative remedies. The Attorney General shall prescribe procedures to implement this paragraph. The decision of the agency shall be affirmed by the district court unless it is unreasonable and without cause based on the administrative record before the agency.''.

(b) EXPENSES OF STANDING TRUSTEES.—Section 586(e) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(3) After first exhausting all available administrative remedies, an individual appointed under subsection (b) may obtain judicial review of final agency action to deny a claim of actual, necessary expenses under this subsection by commencing an action in the United States district court in the district where the individual resides. The decision of the agency shall be affirmed by the district court unless it is unreasonable and without cause based upon the administrative record before the agency.

''(4) The Attorney General shall prescribe procedures to implement this subsection.''.

SEC. 1234. BANKRUPTCY FORMS.

Section 2075 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''The bankruptcy rules promulgated under this section shall prescribe a form for the statement required under section 707(b)(2)(C) of title 11 and may provide general rules on the content of such statement.''.

SEC. 1235. EXPEDITED APPEALS OF BANKRUPTCY CASES TO COURTS OF APPEALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 158 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (d) and inserting the following:

''(d)(1) In a case in which the appeal is heard by the district court, the judgment, decision, order, or decree of the bankruptcy judge shall be deemed a judgment, decision, order, or decree of the district court entered 31 days after such appeal is filed with the district court, unless not later than 30 days after such appeal is filed with the district court—

''(A) the district court—

''(i) files a decision on the appeal from the judgment, decision, order, or decree of the bankruptcy judge; or

''(ii) enters an order extending such 30-day period for cause upon motion of a party or upon the court's own motion; or

''(B) all parties to the appeal file written consent that the district court may retain such appeal until it enters a decision.

''(2) For the purpose of this subsection, an appeal shall be considered filed with the district court on the date on which the notice of appeal is filed, except that in a case in which the appeal is heard by the district court because a party has made an election under subsection (c)(1)(B), the appeal shall be considered filed with the district court on the date on which such election is made.

''(e) The courts of appeals shall have jurisdiction of appeals from—

''(1) all final judgments, decisions, orders, and decrees of district courts entered under subsection (a);

''(2) all final judgments, decisions, orders, and decrees of bankruptcy appellate panels entered under subsection (b); and

''(3) all judgments, decisions, orders, and decrees of district courts entered under subsection (d) to the extent that such judgments, decisions, orders, and decrees would be reviewable by a district court under subsection (a).

''(f) In accordance with rules prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States under sections 2072 through 2077, the court of appeals may, in its discretion, exercise jurisdiction over an appeal from an interlocutory judgment, decision, order, or decree under subsection (e)(3).''.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 305(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''section 158(d)'' and inserting ''subsection (e) or (f) of section 158''.

(2) Section 1334(d) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking ''section 158(d)'' and inserting ''subsection (e) or (f) of section 158''.

(3) Section 1452(b) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking ''section 158(d)'' and inserting ''subsection (e) or (f) of section 158''.

SEC. 1236. EXEMPTIONS.

Section 522(g)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''subsection (f)(2)'' and inserting ''subsection (f)(1)(B)''.

TITLE XIII—CONSUMER CREDIT DISCLOSURE

SEC. 1301. ENHANCED DISCLOSURES UNDER AN OPEN END CREDIT PLAN.

(a) MINIMUM PAYMENT DISCLOSURES.—Section 127(b) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(11)(A) In the case of an open end credit plan that requires a minimum monthly payment of not more than 4 percent of the balance on which finance charges are accruing, the following statement, located on the front of the billing statement, disclosed clearly and conspicuously: 'Minimum Payment Warning: Making only the minimum payment will increase the interest you pay and the time it takes to repay your balance. For example, making only the typical 2% minimum monthly payment on a balance of $1,000 at an interest rate of 17% would take 88 months to repay the balance in full. For an estimate of the time it would take to repay your balance, making only minimum payments, call this toll-free number: _____.' (the blank space to be filled in by the creditor).

''(B) In the case of an open end credit plan that requires a minimum monthly payment of more than 4 percent of the balance on which finance charges are accruing, the following statement, in a prominent location on the front of the billing statement, disclosed clearly and conspicuously: 'Minimum Payment Warning: Making only the required minimum payment will increase the interest you pay and the time it takes to repay your balance. Making a typical 5% minimum monthly payment on a balance of $300 at an interest rate of 17% would take 24 months to repay the balance in full. For an estimate of the time it would take to repay your balance, making only minimum monthly payments, call this toll-free number: _____.' (the blank space to be filled in by the creditor).

''(C) Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (B), in the case of a creditor with respect to which compliance with this title is enforced by the Federal Trade Commission, the following statement, in a prominent location on the front of the billing statement, disclosed clearly and conspicuously: 'Minimum Payment Warning: Making only the required minimum payment will increase the interest you pay and the time it takes to repay your balance. For example, making only the typical 5% minimum monthly payment on a balance of $300 at an interest rate of 17% would take 24 months to repay the balance in full. For an estimate of the time it would take to repay your balance, making only minimum monthly payments, call the Federal Trade Commission at this toll-free number: _____.' (the blank space to be filled in by the creditor). A creditor who is subject to this subparagraph shall not be subject to subparagraph (A) or (B).

''(D) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), in complying with any such subparagraph, a creditor may substitute an example based on an interest rate that is greater than 17 percent. Any creditor that is subject to subparagraph (B) may elect to provide the disclosure required under subparagraph (A) in lieu of the disclosure required under subparagraph (B).

''(E) The Board shall, by rule, periodically recalculate, as necessary, the interest rate and repayment period under subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C).

''(F)(i) The toll-free telephone number disclosed by a creditor or the Federal Trade Commission under subparagraph (A), (B), or (G), as appropriate, may be a toll-free telephone number established and maintained by the creditor or the Federal Trade Commission, as appropriate, or may be a toll-free telephone number established and maintained by a third party for use by the creditor or multiple creditors or the Federal Trade Commission, as appropriate. The toll-free telephone number may connect consumers to an automated device through which consumers may obtain information described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), by inputting information using a touch-tone telephone or similar device, if consumers whose telephones are not equipped to use such automated device are provided the opportunity to be connected to an individual from whom the information described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), as applicable, may be obtained. A person that receives a request for information described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) from an obligor through the toll-free telephone number disclosed under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), as applicable, shall disclose in response to such request only the information set forth in the table promulgated by the Board under subparagraph (H)(i).

''(ii)(I) The Board shall establish and maintain for a period not to exceed 24 months following the effective date of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000, a toll-free telephone number, or provide a toll-free telephone number established and maintained by a third party, for use by creditors that are depository institutions (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act), including a Federal credit union or State credit union (as defined in section 101 of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1752)), with total assets not exceeding $250,000,000. The toll-free telephone number may connect consumers to an automated device through which consumers may obtain information described in subparagraph (A) or (B), as applicable, by inputting information using a touch-tone telephone or similar device, if consumers whose telephones are not equipped to use such automated device are provided the opportunity to be connected to an individual from whom the information described in subparagraph (A) or (B), as applicable, may be obtained. A person that receives a request for information described in subparagraph (A) or (B) from an obligor through the toll-free telephone number disclosed under subparagraph (A) or (B), as applicable, shall disclose in response to such request only the information set forth in the table promulgated by the Board under subparagraph (H)(i). The dollar amount contained in this subclause shall be adjusted according to an indexing mechanism established by the Board.

''(II) Not later than 6 months prior to the expiration of the 24-month period referenced in subclause (I), the Board shall submit to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Banking and Financial Services of the House of Representatives a report on the program described in subclause (I).

''(G) The Federal Trade Commission shall establish and maintain a toll-free number for the purpose of providing to consumers the information required to be disclosed under subparagraph (C).

''(H) The Board shall—

''(i) establish a detailed table illustrating the approximate number of months that it would take to repay an outstanding balance if a consumer pays only the required minimum monthly payments and if no other advances are made, which table shall clearly present standardized information to be used to disclose the information required to be disclosed under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), as applicable;

''(ii) establish the table required under clause (i) by assuming—

''(I) a significant number of different annual percentage rates;

''(II) a significant number of different account balances;

''(III) a significant number of different minimum payment amounts; and

''(IV) that only minimum monthly payments are made and no additional extensions of credit are obtained; and

''(iii) promulgate regulations that provide instructional guidance regarding the manner in which the information contained in the table established under clause (i) should be used in responding to the request of an obligor for any information required to be disclosed under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

''(I) The disclosure requirements of this paragraph do not apply to any charge card account, the primary purpose of which is to require payment of charges in full each month.

''(J) A creditor that maintains a toll-free telephone number for the purpose of providing customers with the actual number of months that it will take to repay the customer's outstanding balance is not subject to the requirements of subparagraph (A) or (B).

''(K) A creditor that maintains a toll-free telephone number for the purpose of providing customers with the actual number of months that it will take to repay an outstanding balance shall include the following statement on each billing statement: 'Making only the minimum payment will increase the interest you pay and the time it takes to repay your balance. For more information, call this toll-free number: _____.' (the blank space to be filled in by the creditor).''.

(b) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (hereafter in this title referred to as the ''Board'') shall promulgate regulations implementing the requirements of section 127(b)(11) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 127(b)(11) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section, and the regulations issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not take effect until the later of—

(A) 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or

(B) 12 months after the publication of such final regulations by the Board.

(c) STUDY OF FINANCIAL DISCLOSURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board may conduct a study to determine the types of information available to potential borrowers from consumer credit lending institutions regarding factors qualifying potential borrowers for credit, repayment requirements, and the consequences of default.

(2) FACTORS FOR CONSIDERATION.—In conducting a study under paragraph (1), the Board should, in consultation with the other Federal banking agencies (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act), the National Credit Union Administration, and the Federal Trade Commission, consider the extent to which—

(A) consumers, in establishing new credit arrangements, are aware of their existing payment obligations, the need to consider those obligations in deciding to take on new credit, and how taking on excessive credit can result in financial difficulty;

(B) minimum periodic payment features offered in connection with open end credit plans impact consumer default rates;

(C) consumers make only the required minimum payment under open end credit plans;

(D) consumers are aware that making only required minimum payments will increase the cost and repayment period of an open end credit obligation; and

(E) the availability of low minimum payment options is a cause of consumers experiencing financial difficulty.

(3) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Findings of the Board in connection with any study conducted under this subsection shall be submitted to Congress. Such report shall also include recommendations for legislative initiatives, if any, of the Board, based on its findings.

SEC. 1302. ENHANCED DISCLOSURE FOR CREDIT EXTENSIONS SECURED BY A DWELLING.

(a) OPEN END CREDIT EXTENSIONS.—

(1) CREDIT APPLICATIONS.—Section 127A(a)(13) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637a(a)(13)) is amended—

''(A) the''; and

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting the following: ''; and

''(B) in any case in which the extension of credit exceeds the fair market value (as defined under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) of the dwelling, the interest on the portion of the credit extension that is greater than the fair market value of the dwelling is not tax deductible for Federal income tax purposes.''.

(2) CREDIT ADVERTISEMENTS.—Section 147(b) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1665b(b)) is amended—

(A) by striking ''If any'' and inserting the following:

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If any''; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) CREDIT IN EXCESS OF FAIR MARKET VALUE.—Each advertisement described in subsection (a) that relates to an extension of credit that may exceed the fair market value of the dwelling, and which advertisement is disseminated in paper form to the public or through the Internet, as opposed to by radio or television, shall include a clear and conspicuous statement that—

''(A) the interest on the portion of the credit extension that is greater than the fair market value of the dwelling is not tax deductible for Federal income tax purposes; and

''(B) the consumer should consult a tax adviser for further information regarding the deductibility of interest and charges.''.

(b) NON-OPEN END CREDIT EXTENSIONS.—

(1) CREDIT APPLICATIONS.—Section 128 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1638) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by adding at the end the following:

''(15) In the case of a consumer credit transaction that is secured by the principal dwelling of the consumer, in which the extension of credit may exceed the fair market value of the dwelling, a clear and conspicuous statement that—

''(A) the interest on the portion of the credit extension that is greater than the fair market value of the dwelling is not tax deductible for Federal income tax purposes; and

''(B) the consumer should consult a tax adviser for further information regarding the deductibility of interest and charges.''; and

(B) in subsection (b), by adding at the end the following:

''(3) In the case of a credit transaction described in paragraph (15) of subsection (a), disclosures required by that paragraph shall be made to the consumer at the time of application for such extension of credit.''.

(2) CREDIT ADVERTISEMENTS.—Section 144 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1664) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) Each advertisement to which this section applies that relates to a consumer credit transaction that is secured by the principal dwelling of a consumer in which the extension of credit may exceed the fair market value of the dwelling, and which advertisement is disseminated in paper form to the public or through the Internet, as opposed to by radio or television, shall clearly and conspicuously state that—

''(1) the interest on the portion of the credit extension that is greater than the fair market value of the dwelling is not tax deductible for Federal income tax purposes; and

''(2) the consumer should consult a tax adviser for further information regarding the deductibility of interest and charges.''.

(c) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall promulgate regulations implementing the amendments made by this section.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Regulations issued under paragraph (1) shall not take effect until the later of—

(A) 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or

(B) 12 months after the date of publication of such final regulations by the Board.

SEC. 1303. DISCLOSURES RELATED TO ''INTRODUCTORY RATES''.

(a) INTRODUCTORY RATE DISCLOSURES.—Section 127(c) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(6) ADDITIONAL NOTICE CONCERNING 'INTRODUCTORY RATES'.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), an application or solicitation to open a credit card account and all promotional materials accompanying such application or solicitation for which a disclosure is required under paragraph (1), and that offers a temporary annual percentage rate of interest, shall—

''(i) use the term 'introductory' in immediate proximity to each listing of the temporary annual percentage rate applicable to such account, which term shall appear clearly and conspicuously;

''(ii) if the annual percentage rate of interest that will apply after the end of the temporary rate period will be a fixed rate, state in a clear and conspicuous manner in a prominent location closely proximate to the first listing of the temporary annual percentage rate (other than a listing of the temporary annual percentage rate in the tabular format described in section 122(c)), the time period in which the introductory period will end and the annual percentage rate that will apply after the end of the introductory period; and

''(iii) if the annual percentage rate that will apply after the end of the temporary rate period will vary in accordance with an index, state in a clear and conspicuous manner in a prominent location closely proximate to the first listing of the temporary annual percentage rate (other than a listing in the tabular format prescribed by section 122(c)), the time period in which the introductory period will end and the rate that will apply after that, based on an annual percentage rate that was in effect within 60 days before the date of mailing the application or solicitation.

''(B) EXCEPTION.—Clauses (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (A) do not apply with respect to any listing of a temporary annual percentage rate on an envelope or other enclosure in which an application or solicitation to open a credit card account is mailed.

''(C) CONDITIONS FOR INTRODUCTORY RATES.—An application or solicitation to open a credit card account for which a disclosure is required under paragraph (1), and that offers a temporary annual percentage rate of interest shall, if that rate of interest is revocable under any circumstance or upon any event, clearly and conspicuously disclose, in a prominent manner on or with such application or solicitation—

''(i) a general description of the circumstances that may result in the revocation of the temporary annual percentage rate; and

''(ii) if the annual percentage rate that will apply upon the revocation of the temporary annual percentage rate—

''(I) will be a fixed rate, the annual percentage rate that will apply upon the revocation of the temporary annual percentage rate; or

''(II) will vary in accordance with an index, the rate that will apply after the temporary rate, based on an annual percentage rate that was in effect within 60 days before the date of mailing the application or solicitation.

''(D) DEFINITIONS.—In this paragraph—

''(i) the terms 'temporary annual percentage rate of interest' and 'temporary annual percentage rate' mean any rate of interest applicable to a credit card account for an introductory period of less than 1 year, if that rate is less than an annual percentage rate that was in effect within 60 days before the date of mailing the application or solicitation; and

''(ii) the term 'introductory period' means the maximum time period for which the temporary annual percentage rate may be applicable.

''(E) RELATION TO OTHER DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS.—Nothing in this paragraph may be construed to supersede subsection (a) of section 122, or any disclosure required by paragraph (1) or any other provision of this subsection.''.

(b) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall promulgate regulations implementing the requirements of section 127(c)(6) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by this section.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 127(c)(6) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by this section, and regulations issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not take effect until the later of—

(A) 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or

(B) 12 months after the date of publication of such final regulations by the Board.

SEC. 1304. INTERNET-BASED CREDIT CARD SOLICITATIONS.

(a) INTERNET-BASED APPLICATIONS AND SOLICITATIONS.—Section 127(c) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(7) INTERNET-BASED APPLICATIONS AND SOLICITATIONS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—In any solicitation to open a credit card account for any person under an open end consumer credit plan using the Internet or other interactive computer service, the person making the solicitation shall clearly and conspicuously disclose—

''(i) the information described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1); and

''(ii) the information described in paragraph (6).

''(B) FORM OF DISCLOSURE.—The disclosures required by subparagraph (A) shall be—

''(i) readily accessible to consumers in close proximity to the solicitation to open a credit card account; and

''(ii) updated regularly to reflect the current policies, terms, and fee amounts applicable to the credit card account.

''(C) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

''(i) the term 'Internet' means the international computer network of both Federal and non-Federal interoperable packet switched data networks; and

''(ii) the term 'interactive computer service' means any information service, system, or access software provider that provides or enables computer access by multiple users to a computer server, including specifically a service or system that provides access to the Internet and such systems operated or services offered by libraries or educational institutions.''.

(b) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall promulgate regulations implementing the requirements of section 127(c)(7) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by this section.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) and the regulations issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not take effect until the later of—

(A) 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or

(B) 12 months after the date of publication of such final regulations by the Board.

SEC. 1305. DISCLOSURES RELATED TO LATE PAYMENT DEADLINES AND PENALTIES.

(a) DISCLOSURES RELATED TO LATE PAYMENT DEADLINES AND PENALTIES.—Section 127(b) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(12) If a late payment fee is to be imposed due to the failure of the obligor to make payment on or before a required payment due date, the following shall be stated clearly and conspicuously on the billing statement:

''(A) The date on which that payment is due or, if different, the earliest date on which a late payment fee may be charged.

''(B) The amount of the late payment fee to be imposed if payment is made after such date.''.

(b) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall promulgate regulations implementing the requirements of section 127(b)(12) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by this section.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) and regulations issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not take effect until the later of—

(A) 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or

(B) 12 months after the date of publication of such final regulations by the Board.

SEC. 1306. PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN ACTIONS FOR FAILURE TO INCUR FINANCE CHARGES.

(a) PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN ACTIONS FOR FAILURE TO INCUR FINANCE CHARGES.—Section 127 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN ACTIONS FOR FAILURE TO INCUR FINANCE CHARGES.—A creditor of an account under an open end consumer credit plan may not terminate an account prior to its expiration date solely because the consumer has not incurred finance charges on the account. Nothing in this subsection shall prohibit a creditor from terminating an account for inactivity in 3 or more consecutive months.''.

(b) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall promulgate regulations implementing the requirements of section 127(h) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by this section.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) and regulations issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not take effect until the later of—

(A) 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or

(B) 12 months after the date of publication of such final regulations by the Board.

SEC. 1307. DUAL USE DEBIT CARD.

(a) REPORT.—The Board may conduct a study of, and present to Congress a report containing its analysis of, consumer protections under existing law to limit the liability of consumers for unauthorized use of a debit card or similar access device. Such report, if submitted, shall include recommendations for legislative initiatives, if any, of the Board, based on its findings.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In preparing a report under subsection (a), the Board may include—

(1) the extent to which section 909 of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act (15 U.S.C. 1693g), as in effect at the time of the report, and the implementing regulations promulgated by the Board to carry out that section provide adequate unauthorized use liability protection for consumers;

(2) the extent to which any voluntary industry rules have enhanced or may enhance the level of protection afforded consumers in connection with such unauthorized use liability; and

(3) whether amendments to the Electronic Fund Transfer Act (15 U.S.C. 1693 et seq.), or revisions to regulations promulgated by the Board to carry out that Act, are necessary to further address adequate protection for consumers concerning unauthorized use liability.

SEC. 1308. STUDY OF BANKRUPTCY IMPACT OF CREDIT EXTENDED TO DEPENDENT STUDENTS.

(a) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall conduct a study regarding the impact that the extension of credit described in paragraph (2) has on the rate of bankruptcy cases filed under title 11, United States Code.

(2) EXTENSION OF CREDIT.—The extension of credit described in this paragraph is the extension of credit to individuals who are—

(A) claimed as dependents for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

(B) enrolled within 1 year of successfully completing all required secondary education requirements and on a full-time basis, in postsecondary educational institutions.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Board shall submit to the Senate and the House of Representatives a report summarizing the results of the study conducted under subsection (a).

SEC. 1309. CLARIFICATION OF CLEAR AND CONSPICUOUS.

(a) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Board, in consultation with the other Federal banking agencies (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act), the National Credit Union Administration Board, and the Federal Trade Commission, shall promulgate regulations to provide guidance regarding the meaning of the term ''clear and conspicuous'', as used in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of section 127(b)(11) and clauses (ii) and (iii) of section 127(c)(6)(A) of the Truth in Lending Act.

(b) EXAMPLES.—Regulations promulgated under subsection (a) shall include examples of clear and conspicuous model disclosures for the purposes of disclosures required by the provisions of the Truth in Lending Act referred to in subsection (a).

(c) STANDARDS.—In promulgating regulations under this section, the Board shall ensure that the clear and conspicuous standard required for disclosures made under the provisions of the Truth in Lending Act referred to in subsection (a) can be implemented in a manner which results in disclosures which are reasonably understandable and designed to call attention to the nature and significance of the information in the notice.

SEC. 1310. ENFORCEMENT OF CERTAIN FOREIGN JUDGMENTS BARRED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law or contract, a court within the United States shall not recognize or enforce any judgment rendered in a foreign court if, by clear and convincing evidence, the court in which recognition or enforcement of the judgment is sought determines that the judgment gives effect to any purported right or interest derived, directly or indirectly, from any fraudulent misrepresentation or fraudulent omission that occurred in the United States during the period beginning on January 1, 1975, and ending on December 31, 1993.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not prevent recognition or enforcement of a judgment rendered in a foreign court if the foreign tribunal rendering judgment giving effect to the right or interest concerned determines that no fraudulent misrepresentation or fraudulent omission described in subsection (a) occurred.

TITLE XIV—GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HONORING JIM ROBB

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 11, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege and an honor to have this opportunity to pay tribute to Jim Robb as he steps down as United States Magistrate for Western Colorado. Jim is a personal friend of mine whom I served with in the Colorado State House of Representatives. Jim has been the embodiment of service, success and sacrifice during his time as Magistrate and he clearly deserves the praise and recognition of this body.

Selected as a Magistrate in 1990, Jim was one of six United States Magistrates for the State of Colorado. The only magistrate outside the City of Denver, his duties included hearing preliminary and detention cases and holding misdemeanor hearings for crimes on federal lands. He was also responsible for hearing pretrial conferences for civil cases that involved the Southern Ute Indian Tribe.

During his time as Magistrate, Jim had the reputation of a fair and approachable judge. He would always take time to hear both sides of the story and had the ability to approach each case with an open mind. Perhaps his fairness is the product of his life as a ''true Renaissance man''. Jim embarked on a 12,000 mile road trip around the United States before he was to attend college. During this trip, he fell in love with the wonderful State of Colorado where he would eventually earn his bachelor's degree and law degree. Some of his other accomplishments include working for the FBI as a special agent, working as an administrative assistant for a United States Senator in Washington DC serving two terms in the Colorado State Legislature, and serving on the Colorado State Parks Board for 10 years.

Jim's future plans include spending time with his family and continuing to practice law in the private sector.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I congratulate Jim for his career as a United States Magistrate and thank him for his dedication and commitment to public service. It is a real pleasure to honor people of Jim's character and integrity. His formidable efforts deserve the praise and admiration of us all.

Good Luck, your honor.

HONORING LUTHER POSEY

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 11, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it makes me very proud to honor a remarkable human being, Luther Posey. Through hard work and determination, Luther recently helped the Glenwood Springs Police Department earn the Silver Buckle Award. This award is presented by the Colorado Department of Transportation for a department's ''outstanding contribution to the safety belt program''. Luther's contribution has been credited with being a fundamental part of the department receiving this high award.

For the past few years, Luther has been the primary individual in charge of gathering safety belt data in the Glenwood Springs area. His data is compiled every few months and then is used to enforce compliance with the state safety belt law. In a recent article by Heather McGregor in the Glenwood Independent, the following was said: ''Police Chief Terry Wilson made it clear that without Posey's help the award wouldn't have been possible: 'he does the sitting and counting of people using or not using belts.' ''

Luther has worked very hard to collect data that has helped ensure that the seat belt laws are enforced and has in turn made the community of Glenwood Springs a safer place for all. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the State of Colorado and the U.S. Congress, I would like to thank Luther for his efforts that helped the Glenwood Springs Police Department earn this prestigious award.

Luther, it makes me proud to know that individuals such as yourself are taking it upon themselves to ensure that our communities are safe and secure. Congratulations and thank you for your service!

HONORING MARY ANN ANDERSEN LEE

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 11, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this moment to honor a very remarkable person, Mary Ann Andersen Lee. Mary Ann has been a part of the nursing community for over four decades and recently retired from San Luis Valley Regional Medical Center. Mary Ann's leadership and expertise in nursing have benefited the San Luis Valley in immeasurable ways. Her retirement will not last long, as she has already planned to move on and donate her superb nursing abilities to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief.

Mary Ann began her illustrious nursing career with a group of friends that answered a want-ad in the American Journal of Nursing. After graduating from Bryan Memorial School of Nursing in Lincoln, Nebraska, they headed west to take a job in western Colorado. The rest, as they say, is history.

The moment she joined the medical center, then called Alamosa Community Hospital, she demonstrated her outstanding leadership by becoming the supervisor of the emergency room. She led in this capacity for nearly fifteen years. She then moved on to become the director of nursing where she served for just over two decades. Her leadership has benefited not only the medical center, but the entire community as well.

Mary Ann has led by example and become a role model of what it takes to succeed in the medical field. Throughout her tenure at San Luis Valley Regional Medical Center, she has helped literally thousands of citizens. Mr. Speaker, Mary Ann has earned respect and admiration of this body. On behalf of the State of Colorado and the U.S. Congress I thank her for her incredible service to the San Luis Valley and wish her the best in her future endeavors.

Good Luck!

IN SUPPORT OF H.R. 3621—A BILL TO PROMOTE WILLIAM CLARK TO THE GRADE OF CAPTAIN

HON. BARON P. HILL OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 11, 2000

Mr. HILL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a cosponsor of H.R. 3621 to urge its passage.

Granting William Clark the grade of captain is well-deserved and long overdue. Clark acted as a co-commander with Meriwether Lewis during their expedition and Lewis felt Clark deserved a rank equal to his. So with this bill, today, we can both recognize Clark's role in the expedition and carry out Meriwether Lewis's wish that Clark be given the rank of captain.

This issue is of more than passing interest to the people of southern Indiana. These historic partners began their expedition at the Falls of the Ohio, near Clarksville, Indiana.

On September 1, 1803, Meriwether Lewis began his journey down the Ohio River toward Clarksville, Indiana, where he eventually met his partner on the expedition, William Clark. By October 14, Lewis had reached the Falls of the Ohio, a set of dangerous rapids created by a drop in the river over a two-mile series of limestone ledges. The following day, Lewis and his crew safely crossed the falls on the north side of the river. They then set out to meet William Clark, who was living in Clarksville with his brother, Revolutionary War hero George Rogers Clark.

The noted historian Stephen Ambrose wrote this about Lewis and Clark's meeting in Clarksville in his best-selling book Undaunted Courage: ''When they shook hands, the Lewis and Clark expedition began.'' During the two weeks following the meeting, Lewis and Clark selected the first official members of the expedition, a group referred to as the ''Corps of Discovery.'' Lewis and Clark chose nine men in Clarksville to join them on the journey, and as Ambrose notes in Undaunted Courage, there ''the Corps of Discovery was born.''

The crew departed on October 26, 1803, thus marking Clarksville, Indiana as the actual point of origin for the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

Mr. Speaker, local officials and interested citizens in the Falls of the Ohio area are now planning an event of national significance to commemorate the bicentennial of the expedition's beginning. In 2003, Clarksville and the surrounding area will play an important role in commemorating the expedition and reminding our nation of its importance.

I encourage all Americans wishing to retrace the steps of the explorers to visit the Falls of the Ohio and its surrounding area. And I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3621 so William Clark will receive the rank he was promised and so richly deserves.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, October 12, 2000 may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

OCTOBER 13

10 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, October 12, 2000

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Ever present Lord God in our midst, You have exhorted us: ''Be hospitable to one another without complaining.'' Make this House a place of hospitality. Be with our guides, our guards, and all who create an environment here.

Throughout our days, Lord, there is a movement within, from hostility to hospitality. You help us determine our relationship to other people.

Life today is very complex. Yet when we reflect on the kindness we have enjoyed from others and we can face the stranger within ourselves, we begin to see in Your creation a free and friendly space that always welcomes the newborn, the estranged, the sick and the immigrant.

Let this place and all the institutions of this Nation, especially our schools and hospitals, be caring places and careful to meet people on their own terms.

For You, our God, hear us and welcome us as we are today and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. SKELTON led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 4259. An act to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the National Museum of the American Indian of the Smithsonian Institution, and for other purposes.

H.R. 5164. An act to amend title 49, United States Code, to require reports concerning defects in motor vehicles or tires or other motor vehicle equipment in foreign countries, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate has passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 3069. An act to authorize the Administrator of General Services to provide for redevelopment of the Southeast Federal Center in the District of Columbia.

H.R. 5239, An act to provide for increased penalties for violations of the Export Administration Act of 1979, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3244) ''An Act to combat trafficking of persons, especially into the sex trade, slavery, and slavery-like conditions, in the United States and countries around the world through prevention, through prosecution and enforcement against traffickers, and through protection and assistance to victims of trafficking.''

The message also announced that the Senate has passed a bill and concurrent resolutions of the following titles in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 2917. An act to settle the land claims of the Pueblo of Santo Domingo.

S. Con. Res. 131. Concurrent resolution commemorating the 20th anniversary of the workers' strikes in Poland that led to the creation of the independent trade union Solidarność, and for other purposes.

S. Con. Res. 148. Concurrent resolution to provide for the disposition and archiving of the records, files, documents, and other materials of joint congressional committees on inaugural ceremonies.

S. Con. Res. 149. Concurrent resolution to correct the enrollment of H.R. 3244.

The message also announced that in accordance with sections 1928a–1928d of title 22, United States Code, as amended, the Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, appoints the following Senators as members of the Senate Delegation to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Parliamentary Assembly during the Second Session of the One Hundred Sixth Congress, to be held in Berlin, Germany, November 17–22, 2000—

the Senator from Iowa (Mr. GRASSLEY);

the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. HUTCHINSON);

the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES); and the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI).

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain 10 one-minutes on each side.

SECURING AMERICA'S FUTURE FOR OUR CHILDREN

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, our economy is good, interest rates are low and we have a record budget surplus. Due to the sound fiscal policies of Republicans, we have been able to pay off $354 billion in public debt and will completely eliminate it by 2012.

That is why Republicans are committed to using 90 percent of the next year's Federal budget surplus to pay off the national debt while protecting the Social Security and Medicare trust funds. That leaves us with 10 percent of the surplus to boost our already substantial $600 billion commitment to our national priorities such as education, defense and health research.

Specifically, we will use half the money to strengthen education with the flexibility, funding and support to give our children the world's best schools. In addition, we will provide a prescription drug benefit to seniors in need now, not 5 or 10 years from now.

Republicans have made education funding a top priority, providing more money than ever before. And most importantly, we have cut the checks with fewer strings being attached. Currently, Washington provides 7 percent of the Nation's education funding but provides 40 percent of the regulations. We have made a real dent in removing some of these onerous, bureaucratic regulations. By eliminating our national debt, we will secure America's future for our children and grandchildren.

TERRORIST ATTACK ON THE U.S.S. ''COLE''

(Mr. SKELTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, earlier today the U.S.S. Cole, an Aegis destroyer, while being refueled in the enemy port of Aden was attacked by suicide terrorists. There were five sailors who lost their lives. One is missing. Approximately 30 have been injured.

This is the latest crime to be added to the list of deadly terrorist attacks against our fellow countrymen. It is terrible that anyone would sink so low.

I have great admiration for the professionalism of the crew of the U.S.S. Cole, tending to the wounded and taking care of their ship.

We deplore the loss of American lives and my deepest sympathies and prayers go to the families and friends of the victims of this cowardly attack. Serving in the military is a dangerous profession. I want to recognize the selfless dedication of the American military personnel who risk personal safety in the service of our country.

I want to be clear. The U.S. Government should seek retribution against those who are responsible for this attack against U.S. military personnel. We should do all that we can to ensure that our service members and citizens are protected in the future.

It is impossible to predict with certainty where or when terrorists will strike. Today's events, however, are a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

THE VICE PRESIDENT'S MISSTATEMENTS

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, our prayers and condolences go out to our military personnel as well.

Mr. Speaker, the Vice President promised us last night that he was going to try to do better at telling the truth from now on. But his performance said otherwise.

He told the moderator that he never called George Bush a bumbler, but he is running commercials right now that say exactly that. He said he was not in favor of big tax hikes on gas and oil but he was Washington's number one supporter of a Btu tax on fuel. He even wrote a book calling for hiking the price of gas to $2.50 a gallon.

But here is the real whopper. He criticized former President Bush for not removing Saddam Hussein from power during the Gulf War. But on January 30, 1991, Senator GORE said he opposed invading Iraq to take out Saddam Hussein. He said the war should stop as soon as Iraq was out of Kuwait.

He said that he wants more effective gun prosecutions, but Justice Department gun prosecutions have dropped 46 percent during the Clinton-Gore administration.

Vice President GORE promised he was going to try to do better. Well, he is going to have to try a lot harder than last night.

INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION

(Mr. LAMPSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, on April 30, 2000, Maya and Omar Murad, ages 3 and 5, were forcibly abducted by their father, Ruwayn Murad, who had resided in the United States for nearly 20 years but retained dual citizenship in Lebanon. The children, who had spent only 2 weeks of their lives on Lebanese soil, were spirited to Lebanon where they have now been held for nearly 6 months. Their exact whereabouts are presently unknown.

Prior to the abduction, the children's mother, Elizabeth Henry Murad, had been informed by a colleague of her husband that Mr. Murad was planning the abduction. After a judge in New York family court failed to take emergency action, a divorce action had been commenced by Mr. Murad, who ultimately abducted the children after having been granted an adjournment in the case. In advance of his flight, Mr. Murad also wired all the family's liquid assets from their accounts in the U.S. to Lebanon.

Elizabeth Henry Murad, the custodial parent of Maya and Omar, is now waging a desperate battle for the return of her children to New York, the only home they have ever known.

Mr. Speaker, it is time now to assist Mrs. Murad and others like her to bring our children home.

FRANKLIN ON EDUCATION

(Mr. KNOLLENBERG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, the key to the American dream is a quality education. As Benjamin Franklin told us, ''Tell me and I forget. Teach me and I remember. Involve me and I learn.''

The hands-on education Franklin was talking about can only be found in our Nation's classrooms. This underscores the necessity of putting decision-making power in the hands of those closest to the children. Those are the local school teachers, the administrators, and, most importantly, the parents. The Republican education vision does just that, returning control to these local jurisdictions which are uniquely equipped to make the decisions on how to best involve our students.

Since 1995 under the steady hand of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING), the Republican majority has repeatedly passed legislation to shift power and resources from the Washington bureaucracy into the hands of those closest to our students.

Mr. Speaker, while education is at the forefront of public debate over the next few weeks, Republicans have a vision and a record that America can be proud of.

NAVY CONCENTRATES ON GENDER NEUTRALITY IN WAKE OF CHINA NUCLEAR THREAT

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. The CIA said China is buying nuclear attack submarines with missiles that experts say can destroy our entire Navy fleet. Knowing this, the Navy has decided to, and I quote, replace all aircraft carrier urinals with gender-neutral water closets, end quote.

Unbelievable. We have a dragon breathing down our necks and the Navy is constipating over urinals. What is next, bidets in powder rooms? How about some ballroom dancing lessons, folks?

Beam me up. I yield back the fact that this gender-neutral business is getting ridiculous.

GILMAN CONDEMNS ONGOING PALESTINIAN VIOLENCE

(Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, the past 2 weeks, tension in the Middle East has spiraled out of control as PLO Chairman Mr. Arafat attempts to dictate Israeli concessions at the negotiating table through the unbridled use of violence and, most appallingly, through the manipulation of young children as ''martyrs in training.''

This massive, fundamental violation of the Oslo Accords is intentional, as underscored when the leader of the Tanzim paramilitary forces in the West Bank said yesterday that his organization would escalate the confrontations with Israel and not try to calm the situation. Marwan Barghuti said, and I quote, ''This blessed Intifada is looking ahead and mass activity is moving forward.''

Mr. Speaker, in today's latest outrage, a Palestinian mob killed two Israeli soldiers and dumped their bloody bodies in the streets after the pair were captured with two other servicemen earlier today in the Palestinian city of Ramallah. That is why I am appalled that the administration abstained during the recent U.N. Security Council condemnation of Israel. The administration must understand, as must the Palestinians, that you cannot have it both ways.

Today, I will be introducing a resolution along with the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. GEJDENSON) of the Committee on International Relations condemning the Palestinian violence. I invite our colleagues to join us in cosponsorship.

OIL PIPELINE SAFETY

(Mr. INSLEE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I would urge the House to see the failure of passage of the oil pipeline safety bill the other night, not to be seen as an end of our efforts on oil pipeline safety this year but, rather, I believe we should look at it as a very strong statement by this House that there is a bipartisan sentiment for a strong pipeline safety bill.

We have the ability this year, particularly with the extension of time, to pass a strong pipeline safety bill from this Chamber this year. We hope that that bill would have two elements: One, a very strong inspection criteria to assure Americans that the pipelines they live hundreds of feet from in fact will be inspected, and, number two, an assurance that the Office of Pipeline Safety can have supervisory authority over the training plans by operators.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is time for us to reach across the aisle and across the Chambers to fashion a consensus bipartisan bill. I believe that is possible. I am open to do so. I urge my colleagues to join me in pursuit of that strong bill.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE TILLIE FOWLER

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a wonderful friend, Tillie Fowler, who has dedicated a lifetime not only to national public service but to her local community as well.

Before beginning her fulfilling tenure as a Member of Congress, Tillie devoted much of her time to helping those in need. She served as the president of the Junior League of Jacksonville, chaired the Florida Humanities Council, and was active with the American Red Cross, among many other charitable endeavors.

In 1992, Tillie was elected to Congress and immediately began to make her mark as a strong advocate of our national defense. She has worked with great success on behalf of our military personnel around the world. She always sought to ensure that our men and women in uniform were well equipped and prepared when placed in harm's way.

While protecting U.S. national security was her first priority, she also played a vital role in the passage of domestic bills, such as the 6-year Federal transportation bill which will alleviate some of the serious transportation challenges that we in Florida face.

□ 1015

TILLIE has served her constituents, her State and our country well and with distinction. Her intellect and domain of critical issues, combined with her personal commitment and Southern grace and charm, made her an efficient Member, a leader and a role model for young women everywhere. TILLIE FOWLER will be sorely missed. I ask my colleagues to join me in this tribute to our retiring Member.

U.S.S. ''COLE'' RAMMED, AT LEAST FOUR KILLED

(Mr. SCOTT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, earlier today in the Arabian Peninsula the U.S.S. Cole was rammed by a small boat in an apparent suicide terrorist attack. Our prayers go out to the families of the sailors, especially the families of those sailors who were killed, injured, or are missing.

Mr. Speaker, at this time we do not know who was responsible, and it is important that we not jump to conclusions; but when we find out, those responsible will be held accountable.

Finally, we should congratulate our courageous sailors who responded to this tragedy. Because of their expertise, the damage and casualties were kept to a minimum.

Again, Mr. Speaker, our prayers go out to the sailors and the families.

TENNESSEANS THE MOST CHARITABLE IN THE NATION

(Mr. DUNCAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, the Christian Science Monitor reported a few days ago that Tennesseans had given more charitable contributions on average than citizens from any other State. This report was based on a generosity index published by the Urban Institute in Washington and came from charitable deductions listed on 1998 tax returns.

Tennesseans gave an average of $4,572. Mississippi gave the most in proportion to income with an average of $4,070. The top five most generous States, according to the Urban Institute, were Mississippi, Arkansas, South Dakota, Louisiana, and Tennessee. Tennessee gave the most per person at over $4,500 each. Rhode Island gave the least per person at $2,059.

The least generous States, according to the Urban Institute, in proportion to income given to charity were Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Minnesota, and Rhode Island. It seems that the highest taxed, most politically liberal States were the least generous in giving to charitable causes, according to this report from the Urban Institute.

I want to commend my fellow Tennesseans for their generosity in giving to charitable organizations.

WE STILL LIVE IN A DANGEROUS WORLD

(Mr. SISISKY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SISISKY. Mr. Speaker, we have already heard about the tragic accident that happened to the USS Cole. I am sorry the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. FOWLER) is leaving, but I would also like to pay tribute to her, and I do it in the vein that both she and I and many members of the Committee on Armed Services spent a good deal of our time trying to tell people what a dangerous world we live in, and sometimes it is pretty hard to explain to them that we still live in a dangerous world.

I was advised early this morning by the Chief of Naval Operations and by the commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, both of them, of what happened as well as they know. The ship is just sitting there. They are trying to repair it as best they can. Four lives were lost. There were 12 missing and 36 were already hospitalized. Certainly our prayers, the prayers of the Members of Congress, go out to the families of the deceased and, of course, the injured.

What is more important is that we always remember that these people are serving us and this Nation and we should always pay tribute to them.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD REVEALS LARGE PROFITS

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, as the appropriation process continues here in Congress, I want to bring attention to Planned Parenthood's 1998/1999 annual report. The report shows the inordinate amount of profits made from their operation. In 13 years, their profits have totaled $356 million and not once, not once in that time, did they report a loss. In fact, their annual report stated they currently have net assets totaling $536 million.

This is an increase of $131 million in just one year. Even dot-com companies would be envious of such profits. These numbers might be wonderful if Planned Parenthood was just a normal business, but the organization claims to be a charity. They are subsidized by the United States Government through grants; and they also want special deals, including reduced rates of advertising in the media.

It is time, Mr. Speaker, that the American public saw Planned Parenthood for what it is, a business intent on making profits at taxpayers' expense.

ATTACK ON THE U.S.S. ''COLE''

(Mr. PICKETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, as has been reported, the Norfolk-based destroyer Cole suffered a terrorist attack earlier today while in the process of refueling at the Port of Aden in Yemen. This cowardly sneak attack has left four brave American sailors dead, 36 injured, and 12 missing. The survivors courageously and successfully sought to save and stabilize their ship.

Once again, we are reminded of the terrible price that some of our military members pay in defense of our country. We extend our profound sympathy and condolences to the families and friends of those honored defenders of our country who suffered in this tragic attack. May God give them the peace, strength, and understanding to sustain their grief and suffering of this terrible loss.

TOP DOLLAR SHOULD NOT BE DEMANDED TO BUILD NEW SCHOOLS

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 4656, which will sell 8.7 acres of land at fair market value for the use as an elementary school in Incline Village, Nevada. This bill which was debated Tuesday night will be voted on today and will give every Member on both sides of the aisle an opportunity to keep their promises to support education and school construction for our children.

The present elementary school there has more than 40 students in each classroom because there is simply nowhere else for them to go. But H.R. 4656 will solve this education problem. The land will be sold, and I say sold, not given away, to the school district for construction of a school to provide over 400 students with a quality education.

Mr. Speaker, this administration is demanding 800 percent, that is more than 8 times, the limited-use value as a school site. This administration's greed is an unconscionable effort to deny these children an education. Obtaining top dollar for the land seems to be more important to them than the education of our children.

I urge everyone to vote for H.R. 4656.

BREAST CANCER

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, in Marin County, California, just north of the Golden Gate Bridge, the district that I represent, 150 women out of every 100,000 were diagnosed with breast cancer between 1991 and 1996. A 1994 Northern California Cancer Center study showed that Marin County has the highest breast cancer rate in the country. An alarming number of women are dying in Marin and across this country. We need to know why, and we need to make sure that all women have the care they need to survive this disease.

The Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act would help protect women and save lives. This bill should not be encumbered by the words that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) will try to add to the debate this morning or this afternoon. This bill has 270 cosponsors. It should be passed as it was presented.

DEBT REDUCTION

(Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, 30 days have passed and there still has been no response or commitment from the Clinton-Gore administration to lock away 100 percent of the Social Security and Medicare surpluses and to dedicate at least 90 percent of next year's surplus to paying off the debt.

We now have a real chance to do just that and President Clinton has failed to embrace it. Worse, almost every day the administration introduces a new last-minute spending request, further complicating debt reduction. The truth of the matter is that President Clinton is not part of the spending problem. He is the spending problem. It is time the President recognized that the surplus is not the Government's money; it is the people's money.

Mr. Speaker, we have paid off approximately $354 billion in debt since taking majority control in Congress. The Republican Congress made tough choices necessary to get our Nation's book on track. The winners are the hard-working American people. Interest rates are low and the economy is booming. With continued discipline, things will only get better.

It is time President Clinton stops playing politics by accusing Republicans of engaging in a spending spree and sign our letter calling on him to dedicate at least 90 percent of next year's surplus to paying off the debt while locking away 100 percent of the Social Security and Medicare surpluses.

HATE CRIMES

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is very important that what we do in this Congress is understandable, and it is important to clarify the information that goes out to the American people. Might I set the record straight on hate crimes, a legislative initiative that is very close to my heart, and one that many of us have worked very hard on. We will leave this Congress without passing a real hate crimes bill because the Republican majority will not allow us to vote on a hate crimes bill; not hate crimes for one ethnic or religious group in America but hate crimes for Americans, so that if one is disabled or if they come from a different background or live in a different way and someone attacks them because of their difference, we have a law that says we abhor hate.

Mr. Speaker, let me set the record straight. It is clear that the hate crimes bill in Texas is not the bill that the family of James Byrd begged for; that bill the governor of Texas did not sign, did not support, even though there was massive support for it. We do not have a real hate crimes bill in Texas. Let us set the record straight.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 111, FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 2001

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 627 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 627

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 111) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2001, and for other purposes. The joint resolution shall be considered as read for amendment. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution to final passage without intervening motion except: (1) one hour of debate equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations; and (2) one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 627 is a closed rule providing for consideration of House Joint Resolution 111, a resolution making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 2001.

H. Res. 627 provides for 1 hour of debate equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. The rule waives all points of order against consideration of the joint resolution. Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit, as is the right of the minority.

Mr. Speaker, the current continuing resolution expires at the end of the day on Saturday, and a further continuing resolution is necessary to keep the government operating while Congress completes its consideration of the remaining appropriations bills.

□ 1030

Mr. Speaker, House Joint Resolution 111 is a clean continuing resolution which simply extends the provisions included in House Joint Resolution 109 through October 20.

Mr. Speaker, as my colleagues know, we have been working hard to pass remaining appropriations bills as soon as possible. Honest disagreements remain on both sides of the aisle.

However, the House has made progress at resolving these differences over the past 2 weeks, passing the interior, agriculture, energy, and transportation conference reports. We are now very close to completing the appropriations process.

I share the disappointment of many of my colleagues that the negotiations have stretched on this long. However, we have a responsibility to stay the course and pass sensible and fiscally responsible appropriations bills. So, because we refuse to bend our principles, we will stay here in Washington for another week, away from our families, our districts, and our homes.

This fair, clean, continuing resolution will give us the time we need to fulfill our obligations to the American people and finish the appropriations process in an even-handed and conscientious manner.

The rule was unanimously approved by the Committee on Rules yesterday. I urge my colleagues to support it so we may proceed with the general debate and consideration of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is the third concurrent resolution we have done this year. It will push back the appropriations deadline once again for my Republican colleagues, and this time it will push it back to October 20.

The 1974 Budget Act requires that the 13 appropriation bills be signed into law by October 1. The beginning of the fiscal year. But despite repeated promises to the contrary by the Republican leadership, very little appropriation work is finished, even as we speak. Today only two out of 13 appropriation bills have been signed into law, Military Construction and Defense. Three more are on the way to the President, Transportation, Interior, and Agriculture. The others are in various stages of incubation.

Part of the reason for the lack of progress, Mr. Speaker, is my Republican colleagues' budget, which did great things for the very rich and failed to set aside enough money for middle-class tax cuts or social security preservation or medical prescription drug benefits, or any of the other issues that are so important to the working American families.

My Republican colleagues should have passed a minimum wage increase. They should have passed a bill to help us repair our schools, or passed a bill to hire new teachers. They should have passed the Patients' Bill of Rights, Medicare prescription drug benefits, gun controls, gun safety legislation.

But Mr. Speaker, my Republican colleagues have had plenty of time to finish these appropriation bills and a lot more, but they did not. Now, in order to keep the Federal government open, we must pass this third continuing resolution.

The administration asked for a shorter continuing resolution in order to get more things done. I believe they were right to do so. But nonetheless, I will support this longer continuing resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on House Joint Resolution 111, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 2001

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 627, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 111) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2001, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The text of House Joint Resolution 111 is as follows:

H.J. RES. 111

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Public Law 106–275, is further amended by striking ''October 13, 2000'' in section 106(c) and inserting in lieu thereof ''October 20, 2000''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 627, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG).

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the continuing resolution before us is the third one for this fiscal year. It would continue the original CR until October 20.

I might say and remind my colleagues that the House has passed all of the appropriations bills earlier this year, but because of conference meetings that needed to be taken care of and meetings with the White House, we have not concluded that business.

However, I am also happy to report that there is considerable movement, I believe, in the other body that we will see today, and hopefully we will be able to conclude this appropriations business next week in the House and in the other body.

So I merely ask the support of the Members to conclude this CR today so we can pass it on to the Senate and then get about our business.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 13½ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, what I say is meant in no way to criticize the gentleman from Florida, because he has been one of the few realistic voices on the other side of the aisle trying to point out what the realities are.

But the fact is, this is, what, the third continuing resolution that we have had. The budget is supposed to be done on October 1. We are now getting much closer to November 1 than we are to October 1. What have we seen? We have seen bill after bill emerge from conference which have wound up spending much more money than is in the President's budget.

Those bills have virtually no relationship whatsoever to the budget resolution which was laid out at the beginning of the year. Yet, we have no real progress in meeting the needs that we feel on this side of the aisle with respect to the most crucial issue remaining in the budget, which is education.

We also have seen, although one of the appropriation bills tries to provide a fig leaf on this issue, we have seen this Congress take no action on prescription drugs. We have seen this Congress take no action on the Patients' Bill of Rights. Both of those issues are still pending in one form or another in various appropriation bills. Yet, none of them have any real prospect of being dealt with by this Congress before we adjourn.

Now we are being asked to support another week's extension of the deadline for finishing our business. Frankly, I have about had it. I think the White House has, too. I do not expect to stand on this floor and support any further continuing resolutions for more than one or two days at a time. I do not believe it makes sense for us to continue to drift along in this fashion.

What I sense is happening is that there is apparently a slow but nonetheless stealthy plan to avoid our ever facing the hard votes on education or on the Patients' Bill of Rights or on meaningful reform of Medicare to include a prescription drug benefit. I do not believe that this Congress should leave this city until we have dealt with all three.

I do not say that because these happen to just be pet issues of mine. I say that because America has always been, to me, defined by two things. We have been defined by our passion for individual liberty, and we have also been defined by our determination to see to it that the experiences that we have in this country are shared experiences, and that whether we are in good times or in troubled times, we are all in it together.

That is why we have had traditionally such strong support for American institutions and for the American democratic process by each and every one of our citizens.

Mr. Speaker, the reason that education is important and the reason prescription drugs are important and the reason the Patients' Bill of Rights are important is because without actions like that, large segments of our population feel that they have been and are being left out of the blessings and benefits of this society.

There is no society in the world more blessed than is the society of the United States. We have been given more riches, more natural beauty, more geographic insulation from the trouble spots of the world than any other Nation in the history of the globe.

Yet, in my view, this Congress is failing to live up to the traditions of some of the great Congresses in the past in seeing to it that we take these benefits and make certain that everyone has a decent share.

The problem that we have, and it is why I voted against the energy bill, for instance, is because that bill spent a lot of money, but it spent it in no context. There are no rules that describe at this point what will be spent or how far we can go in spending. But we wind up, we wind up still refusing to act on the administration's education priorities.

Now, the majority party has decided that in two areas of education, they are going to put a significant amount of money. One is special education, and the other is Pell grants.

I applaud those two actions. I am fully willing to embrace those priorities. I just wish that the other side would be willing to embrace our priorities.

I would call the attention of Mr. Bush to the actions of this Congress. Mr. Bush in debates the past 2 weeks has talked a lot about education, and he has talked about the bipartisan leadership that he would like to extend to this place. I think bipartisan leadership starts by having effective control of one's own party.

It seems to me that right now we could use some help from Mr. Bush, because this Congress, while it is providing large amounts of money across-the-board in many areas, is continuing to resist the necessary actions to really make progress in reducing class size, to really make progress in training our teachers, to really make progress in providing a significant number of additional after-school centers so that our young children, if they are in a family where they have two parents working outside the home, so they have someplace to go after 2:30 or 3 in the afternoon where they can be under adult supervision and be in an atmosphere where they can learn.

All of these things ought to be embraced by both parties, but we are not seeing them embraced by the majority party in this House.

And so I stand here this morning frustrated because we have a lot of rhetoric that tries to place everyone on the side of education, but this Congress, having a record, under the majority party's leadership, having a record the last 6 years of trying to cut billions of dollars out of previous years' expenditures for education. They are now building on that record by trying to block a further expansion of education initiatives that reflect needed national priorities which the administration has taken as its own. To me, that is the major problem with this continuing resolution today.

I do not see any purpose in kicking the can further down the road on these continuing resolutions if we are not going to get the two or three major things that we need to get out of this Congress in order to call this a successful Congress; one being education, another being a real, rather than a fictional, attack on the problems of our seniors who need prescription drugs, and the third being the passage of a real patients' bill of rights rather than the passage of a bill of goods that masquerades as a patients' bill of rights.

So I will support this continuing resolution, but I do not expect to stand here supporting any further long-term continuing resolutions because, at this point, they do not seem to be doing any good in terms of moving this place forward to recognizing our health care, our Medicare and our education priorities that, above all, this Congress ought to be addressing.

Mr. Speaker, how much time is remaining on each side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman from Wisconsin has 19½ minutes remaining.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), the distinguished minority leader.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, here we are again on another continuing resolution some 11, 12, or 13 days into the fiscal year; and we have not begun to finish our work. I am very disappointed that we come to the floor again to debate another continuing resolution simply to keep the government going. We should have had all of the appropriation bills done 12 days ago.

This Republican Congress has been so busy throwing money at things, helping candidates, and our time and our energy have been so taken up by the contrived 90–10 scheme put out by the other side, that we have been unable to do our most basic work. My biggest fear is that in all of this, education, which is the most important challenge and issue facing our country, is being shortchanged. We should not be taking another full week in which we drift aimlessly and squander, as Republicans would have us do, key opportunities on education.

So we are going to vote for this resolution, but we are putting the Republican leadership on notice. Until we have an opportunity to deal with education, this is the end of the line on comfortable stop-gap measures that keep the government open week by week. Democrats believe that education is priority number one, two and three.

I know that many of my colleagues believe that we are talking about the bare minimum on education; much more important an agenda than we have had on any other issue. We need to give every child the time and attention they need from adults and the life opportunities they deserve. The three items that Democrats believe are the keys to education are the following: tax cuts for school construction, hiring new teachers and reducing class size, and funding key programs like after-school and Pell Grants.

This is the bare minimum of what we need to do. And, unfortunately, while Republicans have been on their spending spree, coming up with false budgets to reduce the debt, education has been shoved to the side by this Congress with a set of priorities that are skewed, to say the least. We want a reasonable, bipartisan tax credit for school construction, and we want funding for emergency repairs. But Republicans are starving that priority because, while they talk about their commitment to education, they do very little to back up that commitment with the proper resources and the proper commitment to those resources.

We want in Labor-HHS funding that is dedicated to hiring new qualified teachers and reducing class size. But our friends on the other side have created loopholes in the bill so big that the money could be spent for anything.

Finally, as part of this first step this year, we support funding for afterschool programs so that our children can get the time and attention they need to become productive, functional law-abiding citizens. Listen to this. We have over 2 million people in jail in this country. They do not pay taxes, they do not vote, they do not raise their families, they do not give to charity. They are not functional citizens. They cost us about $40,000 per person per year to hold them.

At the same time, we have 2 million jobs in this country that we cannot fill. We are about to pass an H–1B law that would let more foreign immigrants come into the country to fill these high-tech jobs, and all of us support the legislation because we need to fill the jobs.

The answer to those two stark contradictory facts is that we are not doing a good enough job with educating and raising our children so we prevent them from going to jail, so we get them to take these jobs and give them the education and the mental ability that they need to do it. We have to do better and we cannot wait until next year to do better. The opportunity is in front of us now, by giving our public schools and our families the resources and the incentives that they need to lift up every child.

So let us stop squandering our opportunities and let us work together in a bipartisan fashion in these next few days on the most important priority for the American people. Let us get our work done, but let us do it in a bipartisan way. Let us stop spending our time on naming post offices and passing resolutions that have little import or meaning. Let us stop spending our time buying another week of time so that we can do work that we should have done 3 months ago. Let us get to work in a bipartisan way and serve the needs of the education of our children in this bill.

Democrats will no longer support continuing resolutions to keep the government running for weeks on end. We will support a bipartisan education bill that finally helps the children of this country.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE).

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, let me follow up on what our Democratic leader just said. I have to say, as one Member, that I am tired of coming down here and passing these continuing resolutions, in this case for another week, without getting our work done.

The fiscal year began for 2001 on October 1. We do not have a budget. We have the majority of the appropriation bills out there, somewhere, certainly not on the President's desk, that have not been resolved. This Congress, under the Republican leadership, is simply not doing the job.

There is time left. There is no reason why we have to go home or we have to sit here and dilly dally over naming post offices, for example, as the leader said. There are a number of important issues that need to be addressed and that my constituents and the average American care about: health care needs, a patients' bill of rights.

The Republican leadership keeps talking about how they want to deal with the HMO abuses, but we do not see any legislation coming forward that would solve the problem and get something done so that those people who are being denied care or who are being denied a particular operation or are having problems with access to health care have their problems addressed.

We see the Republican presidential candidate talk about prescription drugs, but there is nothing happening here in this Republican Congress to address the problem of prescription drugs. The Democrats have put forward a Medicare prescription drug proposal that would guarantee that every senior citizen, every disabled person would get their prescription drugs under Medicare; but we do not see any action here. The Republicans are in charge. They do not bring this legislation up. They do not sit down in a conference and try to resolve it so that we can actually accomplish something so that our seniors have access to prescription drugs.

Certainly on the education issue, I think the most important for many Americans who are worried about their children and their children's ability to get a quality education in the public schools, the Democrats have put forward proposals saying that we want to spend some money for school modernization, to reduce class size by hiring more teachers, but the Republicans do not respond. Let us get our work done.

We have proposals out there on education. We know that the public schools need help. We know that our local towns need some extra funding in order to upgrade their schools; or if they are having overcrowded classes, to build new schools. We know that by reducing class size kids get a better education and they are functioning in a more disciplined environment; yet the Republicans refuse to bring this up.

I am telling my colleagues again, as just one Democratic Member, I will not vote for these continuing resolutions for a week any more unless the Republican leadership is willing to come down here, get the work done, and pass these appropriations bills and bring up the health care and education initiatives that the people want. We should simply stand here as Democrats, and any Member, saying that we want action. It is not enough to just talk. We want action, and there is still time to do it and work it out in a bipartisan way.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 6 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, as I said several times before, the problem with these continuing resolutions is not necessarily the time that is being taken. There have been other Congresses that have not finished their work on time either. But the question is will we do the really important things that we need to do with that additional time, important things that we should have done a long time ago.

It is true that over the next week we will pass a few additional appropriation bills. After long delay, we have now reached agreement on some of those bills, so a lot of the controversy has been leached out of them. But in the end, we still face a couple of facts. We face the likelihood that if the House proceeds in accordance with the majority's plans, we will wind up having passed appropriation bills about $45 billion above the level provided in the original budget resolution which the majority party adopted and which has governed virtually all of the turmoil that we have had over the past 9 months on budget issues in this House.

It appears that we will also wind up approaching some $18 billion to $20 billion in spending above that requested by the President, much of it for congressional priorities and congressional projects; and yet, as I said earlier, we will not have responded to the major needs still before us in the area of education, we will not see a real prescription drug benefit passed for the American people, and we will not see a meaningful Patients' Bill of Rights passed.

We do not want to see this Congress take action on those issues just because they are individually important. We want them all to be dealt with seriously and positively because they are all a necessary part of strengthening the fabric of American society and making this a society that we can all be just a little bit more proud of.

We hear talk about the ''end game'' for this session. Reporters ask me every day, what is going to happen with the end game? What is the end game?

I would point out that, for the people we are supposed to be helping, this is no game. It is no game for parents who send their children to falling down schools, overcrowded classrooms, in some cases teachers inadequately prepared for the subjects that they are supposed to be teaching and with no place where the kids can safely go at the end of the school day because the school day does not coincide with parents' workdays.

That is no game. That for those parents is a serious, serious problem that deserves addressing by this Congress.

It is also no game when you run into the senior citizens who I have run into, single women for instance, widows, who may be making about $20,000 a year in retirement on a fixed income but shelling out 12 to 14 thousand dollars of that for prescription drug costs. Those are real cases. And to them this issue also is no game. And they would, I think, like to think that, with this extra time, we would be producing meaningful action on those items. But I do not see the prospect of that happening given the agenda of the majority party, and that is the real futility in continuing to pass these continuing resolutions.

So, as I said, in order to keep the Government open, we will support this, but no more resolutions of more than 1 or 2 days. If I had my way, we would not pass anything more than a 1-day continuing resolution for the rest of the year if the work is not done by the time this resolution expires. And I do not expect it to be.

So I want to put the majority on notice that we are going to have to operate on a very different set of rules around here if we are going to get things done and get the right things done so we can go home with a straight face and say we have done some really important things for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished ranking member for yielding me time. I regret that I was late getting here to speak.

I reiterate my respect, affection and empathy for the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who has tried to get this process going. During debate of the last two CR's, I talked about that and made similar comments. I am not going to spend so much time on the appropriations bills. We are late. We have been late in the past, as I am sure the chairman has observed earlier.

I rise today at the occasion of the passage of this CR to lament the fact that not only have we not completed the appropriations bills, which I know that the ranking member has spoken eloquently about already, but we have some outstanding critical agenda items that have been discussed in the two Presidential debates and the Vice Presidential debate. There has been a lot of talk about how we are going to work together and how we are going to have bipartisanship so that we can have action.

There has been a lot of talk about the fact that we have not accomplished certain objectives over the past few years. I lament the fact that we have not accomplished those objectives, as well. In my opinion, we have not accomplished them because we had leadership and a majority in this House that did not want to accomplish them.

The Patients' Bill of Rights. We passed a bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights. Not only has the appropriations process been languishing, but Patients' Bill of Rights has been languishing, unpassed, unsigned and, as a result, unhelpful to the American public.

Prescription drugs. The debaters say they are for prescription drugs. Some debaters say, well, why have you not gotten it done? Well, for the same reason we have not gotten the appropriations bills done and we need a CR, because the majority party has not moved them forward.

We want prescription drugs under Medicare for every senior guaranteed them. And by the way, no government HMO, as some ads and the statement of the chairman seem to reflect. We have not passed a prescription drug bill, just as we have not passed the overwhelming majority of the appropriations bills. Why? Because the majority has not sent them to the President for signature.

Education, on everybody's radar screen, is the number one issue in America because the public knows that educating our children is critical to the future of our Nation.

The President stood, Mr. Speaker, on the dias in front of us and said, we need to provide more classrooms, we need to provide more teachers, and we need to provide smaller classes, particularly for our young children in kindergarten to third grade. Why? So they can compete in a world-class economy and be world-class citizens.

Both candidates talk about that. But the Labor-Health bill still languishes with those provisions. Why? Because the majority has not come to grips with passing legislation to ensure there is school construction funding for more classrooms, safer classrooms.

We have not provided for the additional teachers that the President asked for in January. Here we are 9 months later. Why? For the same reason the appropriation bills languish and have not been signed by the President of the United States.

Yes, the President has vetoed one appropriation bill. He sent it back to Congress. That bill is now pending passage in the Senate. But most of these bills have never gotten to the President, not because of the chairman, but because the other side has not come to grips with exercising its majority to pass the needed legislation.

So whether it is Patients', whether it is prescription drugs, whether it is more classrooms for our children and more teachers so that to ensure a quality education, those bills have not been passed. Yes, I will vote for this CR. And, like the ranking member, I will implore our majority to make sure that the next CR is for 1 day only so that we get our work done. We must press forward not only with these appropriation bills but with the critical agenda put before us by the President of the United States 9 months ago.

Mr. Speaker, let's hope that the third time is a charm. Let's hope that this third continuing resolution gives us the time we need to finally complete our work on the fiscal year 2001 appropriations bills.

Let's hope the majority leader, Mr. ARMEY, is correct when he says that we are within "an inch or two from closure" of the appropriations process.

Because from where I'm standing—and I think the vast majority of members might agree with me on this—we've still got a mile to go, it's an uphill hike, and we've got legislative riders dragging us back down.

The President has signed only three appropriations bills into law.

He is expected to sign two others—agriculture and transportation. But that leaves eight bills undone, including energy and water, which was vetoed.

Now, I appreciate the Majority Leader's optimism. You might call it irrational exuberance. However, I think most Members of this body tend to agree with my friend from South Carolina, Mr. SANFORD.

He is quoted in Rollcall this morning as saying: "Anarchy reigns at the moment. Nobody is quite sure what comes next."

Over on the other side of Capitol Hill, Senator MCCAIN didn't mince words either. He commented: "It's just what I predicted—the biggest train wreck in history."

Mr. Speaker, as I've said repeatedly, the blame for this budget debacle does not lie at the feet of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, my friend Mr. YOUNG. I empathize with the Chairman. He has done a very good job under trying circumstances.

But his hands have been tied in this process, specifically by the GOP's unrealistic budget resolution that made a mockery of our appropriations process this year.

And today, we're living with the fallout.

As my friend, Mr. SPRATT, the ranking Member of the Budget Committee, noted earlier this week, this Republican Congress—which pretends to be fiscally disciplined—has already appropriated $10.6 billion more in budget authority in five bills sent to the President than the President requested for those bills.

Our sticking point continues to be the substantive riders, which are a staple of GOP budget strategy:

Barring the EPA from issuing stricter limits on arsenic levels in drinking water;

Preventing the EPA from requiring polluters to clean up the contaminated sediments that they have deposited on river bottoms; and Blocking the Interior Department from imposing new environmental controls on the hard-rock mining industry.

I completely agree with Chairman YOUNG, who was quoted on the hill yesterday as saying: "The thing that is holding us up are the non-appropriations issues that should have been taken care of in authorizing committees. If we only dealt with appropriations issues, we would have been finished."

Yes, we would.

But instead we are in a situation where the majority whip, Mr. DELAY, says he doesn't "have a clue" when we will adjourn. This morning, he is quoted as saying that this budget fight could "go to the end of October. It could go up to November 6."

Mr. Speaker, the Republican majority has shown time and again that it would rather block than lead. On a patients' bill of rights. On a Medicare prescription drug benefit. On a minimum wage increase.

The American people have a right to demand more than the bare minimum.

And, with yet another continuing resolution, this Republican majority proves that it can't even give them that.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Speaker, I am really interested in this lengthy debate about all kinds of things other than the CR. I appreciate the support that has been indicated for passage of the CR because we need to do this. It will give us the additional time that we need to complete the work.

But I want to remind my colleagues, who are my friends, Mr. Speaker, the House did its job. Three months ago we completed our work on the appropriations bills. But that is only part of the process. The other part of the process is reconciling the differences between the House and the Senate. That is the constitutional system. And then we have to reconcile the differences between the Congress and the President.

Now, we have seen the President sign some of our appropriations bills and we have seen him veto an appropriations bill, and we worked with the administration closely to try to repair that bill to the point that he would be willing to sign it. And I think in a matter of several days that will happen and we will have the opportunity to pass that legislative package back to the President.

The minority party and the majority party at the Member level and the staff level have worked together. They have been at the table at the staff level and Member level on all of these issues between our body and the other body and including the White House. We had representatives from the Clinton-Gore administration sitting with us to try to work out the differences. And, Mr. Speaker, there have been many differences. But slow but sure, we are resolving those differences.

But I am not going to take the time to respond to all of the political statements that we have heard today because I listened to the very distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), stand there in the well and appeal for a bipartisan, work-together attitude.

Well, I am all for that. And I think that the gentleman who just spoke would admit that my entire effort here as chairman is to work together with both parties to get the best product that we can get. So I want to stick with the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT).

I am not going to become partisan. I am not going to be political. I am just going to say we need to pass this CR today and we need to get serious about resolving these differences that exist between the Congress and the President.

And then I would like to close on this thought, Mr. Speaker: It is not that I do not enjoy a good political debate, because I do. I really like politics. And outside of the House, where we are here to do the people's business, people above politics, back in the campaigns I really enjoy the political debate and the political exchanges. But I am in a different mood today. Because early today, America came under attack from terrorists.

An American naval ship was attacked by a suicide mission that blew a gaping hole in the side of the USS Cole, an Arleigh Burke class destroyer. It flooded the main engine room. At least four American sailors lost their lives. There are 12 additional sailors missing or unaccounted for, and there are more than 30 wounded. Some of them are critically wounded.

America came under attack from terrorists. It is time that we try to put aside as much of the partisan politics as we can and come together recognizing that America, Republicans and Democrats and Independents and whatever the parties might be, America came under attack today and we cannot stand for that. We have got to make it known to the world that we are not going to allow our country, our military, our sailors who are on board those ships to come under attack and not respond.

And so, that is my mood today, Mr. Speaker. I want to get this CR out of here so that we can get to the people's business.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I want to associate myself with the remarks of the chairman, who is one of the real leaders in our House and in this Nation on defense policy.

We lament the loss of those four brave sailors. We pray for the injured, the missing, and for their families. And we reiterate what the chairman's sentiment that there will be no division, there will be no partisanship, there will be no disagreement on standing together in defense of our forces around the world to maintain freedom and peace.

I thank the gentleman for his comments and join with him in that sentiment.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for his comments. And I know what is in his heart. The gentleman and I have been friends for a long time and have had some differences but a lot of agreements. I appreciate the comments that he just made. Because when America comes under attack, it is time for all of us to come together to recognize that attack and do what has to be done.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to House Resolution 627, the joint resolution is considered read for amendment and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 407, nays 2, not voting 23, as follows:

So the joint resolution was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:

Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained during rollcall vote No. 527. Had I been present I would have voted "yea."

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 527, Further Continuing Appropriations for FY 2001, I was on legislative business and was not able to make the rollcall. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 528, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Ms. DANNER. Mr. Speaker, I was absent for rollcall votes 522, 523, and 524. The reason is somewhat obvious, I think. I spent that time in the emergency room.

Had I been present, I would have voted in favor of rollcall votes 522, 523, and 524.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2415, BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 2000

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 624 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 624

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 2415) to enhance security of United States missions and personnel overseas, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution before us provides for the consideration of H.R. 2415, legislation that will reform our Nation's bankruptcy laws. This rule waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration. The rule provides that the conference report may be considered as read.

The underlying legislation is important legislation that fundamentally reforms the existing bankruptcy system into a needs-based system. I am very proud of the tireless efforts of the Members of both the House and the Senate who have worked to reach this bipartisan agreement to ensure that our bankruptcy laws operate fairly, efficiently and free of abuse.

There is a strong support for bankruptcy reform. The House version of this bill passed with more than 300 votes earlier this year. The Senate passed their version with 88 votes. There is a great need for this legislation. A record 1.42 million personal bankruptcy filings were recorded in 1998. This is a stunning increase of 500 percent since 1980. Despite an unprecedented time of economic prosperity, low unemployment and rising disposable income, personal bankruptcies are rising, costing over $40 billion in the past year.

Without serious reform of our bankruptcy law, these trends promise to grow each year costing business and consumers even more in the form of losses and higher costs of credit.

Mr. Speaker, the bankruptcy reform that we will consider is based upon two important tenets: number one, the bankruptcy system should provide the amount of debt relief that an individual needs, no more and no less; and, point two, bankruptcies should be the last resort and financial crisis, not the first resort using it as a financial planning tool.

A record 1.4 million personal bankruptcies were filed in 1998. That is one out of every 75 households in America. The debts that remained unpaid as a result of those bankruptcies cost each American family that did pay their bills over $500 a year in the form of higher costs for credit, goods, and services. Unfortunately, the debt was eventually passed on to consumers last year and the cost to consumers is what bankruptcy filers have added on to the system.

□ 1145

That is why it is so important that we pass real bankruptcy reform.

Opponents of this bill have tried to divert the discussion away from the merits of the bill, and to claim that it would make it more difficult for divorced women to obtain child support and alimony payments. However, nothing could be further from the truth. This bankruptcy reform bill protects the financial security of women and children by giving them a higher priority than under the current law.

The legislation closes loopholes that allowed some debtors to use the current system to delay or evade child support and alimony payments. The bill recognizes that no obligation is more important than that of a parent to his or her children.

Currently, child support payments are the seventh priority, behind such things as attorney's fees. Make no mistake, this bankruptcy bill puts women and children first, well ahead and at the top of that list. We should provide greater protection to families who are owed child support, and this bill will do just that.

One important part of this legislation is known as the homestead provision. Protection of one's home is something that is very important to myself and my constituents in Texas. The homestead provision in this legislation maintains the long-held standard that allows the States to decide if homesteads should be protected, yet stops these purchases or purchase of a home before filing bankruptcy as a means to evade creditors.

The bill also addresses other problems, including needs-based bankruptcy. The heart of this legislation is a needs-based formula that separates filers in Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 based upon their ability to pay.

While many families may face job losses, divorce, or medical bills and therefore legitimately need the protection provided by the bankruptcy code, research has shown that some Chapter 7 filers actually have the capacity to repay some of what they owe.

The formula directs into Chapter 13 those filers who earn more than the national median income, which is roughly $51,000 for a family of four, if they can pay all secured debt and at least 20 percent of the unsecured non-priority debt.

This bill recognizes the need for customer education and protection. It includes education provisions that will ensure that debtors are made aware of their options before they file for bankruptcy, including alternatives to bankruptcy such as credit counseling, and the bill cracks down on bankruptcy mills, which are law firms and other entities that push debtors into bankruptcy without fully explaining the consequences.

The bill also imposes new restrictions and responsibilities upon creditors with the goal of preventing borrowers from getting in over their heads. For example, the bill requires creditors to disclose more about the effect of paying only the minimum payment, and establishes new creditor penalties designed to encourage good-faith pre-bankruptcy settlement with debtors.

I believe Congress has a special responsibility to address this issue and to ensure that our bankruptcy laws operate fairly, efficiently, and free of abuse.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report meets those two tenets I mentioned earlier. It allows those who truly need a fresh start, and compels those who can pay back part of their debt to do so.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule and the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I support passage of bankruptcy reform, and so, in order for it to pass before the adjournment of the 106th Congress, I will vote for this rule and for the conference report.

But the reason the Republican leadership has been forced to resort to this kind of parliamentary game is because the Republican majority in this Congress has left unfinished the agenda that matters most to the people of this country.

It is October 12, Mr. Speaker, and there is not an end in sight to this Congress, and there is little hope left that the real American agenda will be finished. Thus, in order to pass legislation which has overwhelming bipartisan support, the Republican leadership has resorted to using tricks and games, rather than regular order.

Were this situation not so sad, Mr. Speaker, it would be laughable. Mr. Speaker, for 2 years Democrats in this body have asked the Republican leadership for the opportunity to address the issues that matter most to Americans: real Medicare prescription drug coverage, real help for America's schools, a real and meaningful Patients' Bill of Rights, an increase in the minimum wage, campaign finance reform, saving social security and Medicare, paying down the national debt.

These are real issues that matter to real people. But in those 2 years, what have my Republican colleagues done? They have brought forward legislation that does everything but what the American people want. When the Republican leadership's position has been soundly defeated on a bipartisan basis, they have simply shelved the wishes of the bipartisan majority in this House.

For example, in August of 1999, the House passed a real Patients' Bill of Rights, a bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights, passed it by a vote of 275 to 151. It took the Speaker until November 3 of 1999 to appoint conferees. When he did, he failed to appoint a single Republican conferee who supported the bill that passed the House, not a single one.

Today that conference has still not reported back to either the House or Senate. The Patients' Bill of Rights sits on a shelf.

In September of last year, the House passed a bipartisan campaign finance reform bill by a bipartisan vote of 252 to 177. That bill has also disappeared into the legislative dustbin of the 106th Congress.

The Democrats in this body, as well as in the Senate, have repeatedly asked for further consideration of that legislation. But our requests have gone unanswered.

Mr. Speaker, yet another meaningful bill sits on the shelf in the Republican leadership's closet. We asked that the House consider legislation that would give seniors a real Medicare prescription drug benefit, but we were prevented from getting a vote on the Democratic version of the bill.

We have asked that the Congress consider legislation which would provide more well-trained teachers for schools across the country in order to reduce class size. We have been ignored. We have asked for a clean vote on increasing the minimum wage, and our Republican colleagues loaded up the bill with tax cuts that would benefit the wealthiest while begrudgingly offering a $1 an hour over 2 years wage increase for Americans who are at the very low end of the income scale.

We have asked repeatedly for this Congress to consider issues that really matter to real Americans, the people who pay mortgages, who pay rent, who make car payments, who send their children to school, that they want to be safe.

But we have been ignored, Mr. Speaker, so we find ourselves in this situation today. While the House has rules which regulate how and when legislation and amendments can come to the floor, the other body does not. As a consequence, the refusal of the congressional Republican leadership to consider real legislation that would mean something to real Americans, the refusal of the congressional Republican leadership to sit down and work on a bipartisan basis with the Democrats in the House and Senate and with the President of the United States, has resulted in the need to play these kinds of legislative games we are engaged in today.

Mr. Speaker, I have long supported reform of our bankruptcy laws. I support this conference report. It will allow Americans who need a fresh financial start to get one, but it will also prevent those who have indebted themselves and who are able to pay those debts from just walking away from their obligations.

This bill affords new protections for consumers by requiring that credit statements include more detailed disclosures. It protects the homes of individuals who live in States with homestead exemptions, but not those who move there simply to claim the exemption in a bankruptcy.

It gives permanent Chapter 12 relief to farmers.

Mr. Speaker, many Members are concerned about the process. Quite frankly, I share their views. It is not proper that the House should be considering this important legislative reform within a shell of a bill that has already been passed and signed into law.

But given the hour, given the inability of the Republican leadership to manage the business of this House and the Congress any better than it has in the past 6 years, I will reluctantly vote for this rule so we may at least pass some meaningful legislation before the end of this Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to have this House not only consider important pieces of legislation, as we are doing today, but also, as the gentleman from Texas has outlined, that there are a good number of things that we have yet to do that have not been done, just as we have not seen the ability to take social security to a lockbox that is being held up in the Congress of the United States because of the Democrat party.

There are frustrating things that are occurring every day. The fact of the matter is, and I would remind my colleague, we are working together. We are going to continue until we have resolved the differences that we have. This is part of the bipartisan approach, but the fact of the matter is that rather than us sitting here and bickering, we need to get our job done on this important piece of legislation that has been passed numerous times.

Mr. Speaker, I will once again remind my colleagues, this bankruptcy reform passed with more than 300 votes from this body. I am proud of the work that we are doing. We have not gone home, we are working together feverishly, not only among our House colleagues but also with the other body and our colleagues there, as well as the White House, on things that are of great importance not only to America but to families and to Members of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE).

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and for his help in bringing this very important piece of legislation to the floor. I rise in strong support of the legislation and the rule on this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I want to particularly commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law of the Committee on the Judiciary where this legislation originated, because he has been working on this legislation for years now trying to break the gridlock that has kept this very, very important reform of our bankruptcy laws from being signed into law.

I think we are now getting very close to accomplishing that if we can get this conference report passed today, as I am confident we will, with the same kind of overwhelming support, bipartisan support, that we have already had.

Our bankruptcy laws are in grave need of reform. We are at very, very high levels of bankruptcy filings in this country, and part of this problem is that all of the incentives exist for people to file bankruptcy and none of the responsibilities for people to consider the consequences of their actions and to pay something when they indeed have the ability to pay a part of those debts.

The reason for that is that today a debtor has a complete opportunity to choose whether they have a Chapter 7 bankruptcy, where they can file all of their debts and discharge them and walk away, or a Chapter 13 bankruptcy, where they are required to make payments.

This legislation reforms that in a very, very important way by allowing people who are responsible consumers to not have to bear this debt themselves. That is what happens today. Every time a bankruptcy is filed, all of those consumers who are responsible, who pay their payments on a monthly basis, who keep good credit ratings, are picking up, in the increased costs of goods and services, in the increased costs of consumer and other types of loans, the difference in the cost of all of those people who file bankruptcies who could make some payments.

This bill is reasonable in its approach. People who make less than $50,000 a year will not be required to participate in what are called mandatory Chapter 13s, but people with significant income but who do not have a lot of other assets and therefore are not worried about filing a Chapter 7 because they are not worried about those assets being taken by a bankruptcy creditor or the trustee to sell and distribute to the creditors right now have the ability to do that and walk away. They should not be able to do that if they are able to pay a portion of those obligations. This will be a significant reform in the law to do just that.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to make the point that this legislation helps protect people who are receiving child support payments by increasing the priority level of protection for those folks.

This is important legislation. I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his leadership and his perseverance on this issue. I thank the gentleman from Texas for bringing forward this excellent rule, and I hope that people will support both the rule and final passage of this conference report.

□ 1200

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule, and I am going to try to shield as best I can my absolute disappointment, indeed outrage, at the process by which this bill has come to the floor and at the rule under which it is coming to the floor. And if the Members would just kind of put themselves in my position, perhaps they will understand the outrage that I feel about the process.

I am a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary that considered the House bill for bankruptcy. I sat through almost all of the hearings, discussions, the markups in the subcommittee. The bill then went to the full committee, and I sat there and dealt with the bill.

Then the bill came to the floor, and it passed the House. Then all of a sudden, yesterday afternoon conferees were appointed who never met and out of the shadows of the back room, a bill emerges and gets substituted in the place of a State Department authorization, so that a bill where we thought we were going to debate American embassy security and State Department matters ends up being a bankruptcy bill, and then the Committee on Rules then turns around and waives all points of order against the bill.

What are we as members of the committee supposed to think under those circumstances? Notwithstanding the substance of the bill, we cannot even get to the substance of the bill when the House is being operated in such a sinister and backhanded way, when the authorizing committee and the committee that is supposed to consider the substance of the bill gets cut out of the process.

The conferees never get an opportunity to meet to discuss what is going to be brought to the floor. How should we as members of the committee feel other than disappointment and outrage? And I think we ought to send a resounding message to the leadership here that this process is unacceptable.

We ought to vote this rule down, and then we can talk about the substance of the bill, which I have some reservations about, too. But right now, we are talking about the process by which this bill got to the floor, and we should all be outraged.

We should not be here considering a bill that brings itself here as an embassy security matter, as a State Department authorization bill and ends up being a bankruptcy bill which has nothing to do with the title of the bill that we are considering. We should be outraged by this, and we should not conduct this body like this.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to oppose the rule and let us at least send this bill through the regular process and get some regular order in this House.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to forthrightly address the issues that have been talked about, the outrage from my colleagues on the left. The process that we are going through was done in the light of day. It was a bipartisan agreement. It was initiated on behalf of the Senate.

I have the signature of one of the most distinguished Members of the United States Senate who happens to be a Democrat, who fully supported, not only this process, but agreed that this should be a way that we should get this done.

Bankruptcy reform is important for us to do, and I am proud that Members from the other body forthrightly approached the issue.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SESSIONS. I yield to the gentlewoman from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his explanation. I think the one difference or the one response to the gentleman's point is that yesterday, I believe, the House voted enthusiastically for there to be an open conference with full opportunity for presentation or viewing by the public and media present. I do not believe in the last 18 hours, I do not even think it has been 24 hours, that we have had that to occur, that a conference opportunity has happened. Now the bill is on the floor, for a vote.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I have great respect for what the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) talks about. It would be untruthful to suggest this was not a bipartisan agreement. It is a bipartisan agreement on a very important piece of legislation, and I believe that the truth should not be held hostage on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Mr. Speaker, I was intrigued by the opening statement of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), who with my gratitude, asserts that he is going to support the rule and the bill to bring to fruition our efforts on bankruptcy reform.

But then he went on to, in a sense, modify his own position by saying that, implying that it is not important to the American people like the matters which the minority have obstructed, like patients' bill of rights, like they have obstructed versions of Medicare reform, like they have obstructed other things. Those things are more important to him, implying that this is not important to the American people.

Let me tell my colleagues this, everyone should recognize that the consumers of our country, the private citizens, the families of our country are affected by bankruptcy. When someone files bankruptcy, the price paid for goods at the supermarket, for the cereals and the oranges and the beefsteak, all of those are subject to price rises because someone has failed to pay a debt, and that has to be made up by the general consuming public.

Mr. Speaker, not only that, but when someone goes bankrupt and a consumer, an average citizen, wants to buy an automobile and contracts to pay over a period of time, the interest rate that he pays, or she, for that automobile is impacted by a bankruptcy, which potentially makes that interest rate rise in cost.

So the consumers are hurt in just two ways that I mentioned: one, prices at the supermarket; and, two, interest rates for goods that the family requires, like an automobile or a refrigerator.

Are not those bankruptcies harmful to the consumer, to the people of our country? That is why we were able to get 313 votes in the House, because the people who represent the consumers back home voted in favor of bankruptcy reform, to make it possible for some of this debt to be recovered, where it can be recovered.

Furthermore, what about the consumer who is also a taxpayer, the taxpayer-consumer, and they are inextricably intertwined in most cases in our country, suffers when someone files bankruptcy, because the taxing authorities, like the State or a school board or a township or some municipality in their inability to recover monies from someone who is declared bankrupt, that means that that uncollected tax from an individual has to be spread among everybody else?

All of a sudden, we have the consumer-taxpayer having to pay additional taxes. We have the consumer paying extra for the cereal, extra for interest rates to purchase an automobile, and extra monies to make up for losses by a taxing authority from someone who has gone bankrupt and has put into that pot, under today's law, the taxes that he owes to a particular entity.

What happens if there is a shortfall of the school district's taxes by $10,000, shall we say, that someone has failed to pay and gone bankrupt to try to avoid? Where do they make up that $10,000? That is correct, from the pockets of the consumer taxpayer.

So I say to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) that he is correct in voting for the rule. He is correct in voting for the conference report, and he will have to understand and perhaps acknowledge that the people of our Nation will also be benefited from the bankruptcy reform at our hands here this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, I ask every Member to keep in mind the two themes of bankruptcy reform, each one of which is supremely important: the first is that every single soul who files bankruptcy who needs a fresh start so overwhelmed by debt, so burdened by the obligations that there is no way out but bankruptcy, that person is guaranteed a fresh start under this bankruptcy reform bill. That is extremely important.

Then the other balancing feature is that those individuals who file bankruptcy who have an ability to repay some of the debt over a period of time will be compelled to do so with the mechanism that we place in the bankruptcy reform bill.

With those two balancing features, there is no reason why we cannot match the 313 votes by which this legislation passed the last time it was presented to the Members of the House.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, might I take the opportunity to correct the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), my good friend and colleague, the chairman of the Subcommittee of Commercial and Administrative Law, and offer to say to him that this is a travesty. It is hypocrisy. Let us call it what it is.

We hope that those of us who disagree will have the opportunity to represent our constituents, represent Americans in this debate. Yesterday we were on the floor of the House, and we asked simply to have a conference committee that would be open and that would have a meeting and that would have the opportunity for the public to be present, so we can see whether this is really reform or a sham.

We did this at 6:22; the House voted almost unanimously. At 8:20 p.m., this conference report was sealed, signed, and delivered. I might say it might not have been signed. I have lived with this issue for almost 4 years, and I am gratified to say that because of the economy, bankruptcies have gone down. There is not the crisis that we thought there was some years ago.

In addition, the bankruptcy judges and trustees oppose this legislation. It is not reform. Interestingly enough, as we look at what this legislation says, even the bankruptcy commission did not agree for means testing. What does that mean? That means before you can file bankruptcy, good hard-working citizens, senior citizens who have catastrophic illnesses, divorced individuals who have fallen upon hard times, you must submit data to be determined whether you can even go into court. It is called a means test, and those hard-working Americans who may have missed the standardized formula, by the way, designed by the IRS, will be kicked out and cannot even go to reconstruct their lives.

Mr. Speaker, $40 million was utilized to lobby for this law; but yet in States like Texas, where our home is our life and our land, they did not even allow language that states who had their own provisions on homestead could opt out States rights. That is not even in the legislation. So if your parents have lived in a home that has increased in value, but they have fallen upon hard times because of bad health, they cannot even utilize the homestead exemption if, in fact, it is more than $100,000 under this bankruptcy bill.

In this economy we know that has occurred if families have lived in homes for over 40 years. Our divorcees that need child support, in Chapter 13, the child support payments are put in along with credit cards. Can you imagine that? Who is going to be able to be the winner, the child needing child support, the parent who cannot get a lawyer, or the credit card company that says you better pay my credit card debt before you pay child support or alimony?

In Chapter 7, for example, there are no assets, and mostly you pay administrative costs. How will someone pay alimony or child support unless it is isolated?

Let me share with my colleagues what the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, said, ''to say that substituting a reasonably necessary standard, providing some flexibility in determining what a debtor can live on, because what this bill does, it tells you while you are in bankruptcy, you have to be governed by the Internal Revenue Service expenses.'' Can you imagine that?

□ 1215

The chairman says, why are we using the IRS standards? This is the only place in town, this bankruptcy bill, where the IRS is popular.

When he got to the floor of the House and he was arguing about this bill, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on May 5, 1999, the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman HYDE) said, ''Lastly, let me pay my respects to the creditor lobby. They are awesome.''

I only ask that we respect the American people. We know that the American people believe in responsibility. That is what this Nation was founded on. We work every day. We pay our bills. We pay our mortgages.

But I tell my colleagues if one had a catastrophic illness, a tragic accident, which some of my constituents have had, devastating car accident, one cannot work and one falls upon hard times, does one need the IRS telling one what one can live on? Does one need one's house being taken away from one. Does one need the credit card people telling one they are more important than one?

I am voting against this rule, against the bill, and I ask my colleagues to stand up for the American people.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time is remaining on both sides, please.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) has 10 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has 17½ minutes remaining.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the dialogue from the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE). I would like to, once again, ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) to respond.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, it is peculiar to hear the argument against our provisions on homestead exemption and the modification we made to it. If we do nothing, if we pass no bankruptcy reform at all, the opponents of the current bankruptcy reform say we like the present system, well, the present system is the one against which the President has railed as being one where the rich can go to these homestead exemption States and escape their obligations. He is opposed to that kind of an exemption for the rich.

So now we offer a compromise which preserves the homestead exemption status of the States that employ it and then put into place a reform measure that discourages the rich from shopping to go to a homestead just for the purpose of avoiding bankruptcy.

But now we hear the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) criticizing the homestead exemption. Does she want us to stay where we are, to benefit the rich, as the President of the United States has said? That is a salient question.

On the homestead exemption, I think I am going to engage in a colloquy later with people who are interested in the specifics of that, and I will be glad to engage in that. But the other point that the gentlewoman from Texas attempted to make about the stand up for the American people, that is what we did; 313 of us stood up for the American consumer, the people who suffer at the hands of people who go bankrupt and have to pay higher costs at the supermarket and interest rates and the taxes and all of that.

The priorities that we set for women and children are very important and high priorities. The gentlewoman from Texas would say that she is not satisfied with those priorities. She wants what is the current law to prevail here. If that is the case, then she should recognize and we should be truthful about the fact that the current law gives no priorities to that.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS).

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding time to me, and I yield to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Mr. Speaker, I will not take all of the gentleman's time. I thank the ranking member very much, and I thank him for working on this issue.

Let me just say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) I appreciate his work on this bill. But he is inaccurate.

What happens in the discharge of alimony and child support? They are lumped in with credit card debt. It is a big lump of prioritization. What those of us who oppose this bill are asking for is to put credit card debt below that of alimony and child support, which represents real life or death issues in the lives of children and families.

All this bill does is give the single parent, man or woman, with limited resources an opportunity to fight to get child support and alimony. We know who is going to be the victor in that fight against the big credit card companies.

The other thing is, just on the homestead issue, let me be very clear, the language in the conference report does not have the opt-out language that protects State rights to allow them to opt out if they have other homestead exemptions. That is hurting senior citizens who have lived in their home for 50 years and the value of their homes are assessed at more than $100,000 because the value has increased. That is what I am crying out against. This is not reform. This bill is punitive to many Americans.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, as more and more Members begin to examine this, I think the awesome power of the credit lobby is becoming very, very clear. We are making a bill that makes bankruptcy worse. So for the chairman of the subcommittee to be telling us that, because we oppose this bill, we want to go back to the existing circumstance is inaccurate at least for my part. What we want is a better set of provisions than the ones that exist now, and this bill does not contain them.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), my colleague on the Committee on Rules, indicates he does not have further speakers. I have indicated back that I do have two additional speakers. I am well aware there is an imbalance on time on both sides. I will proceed with that understanding. I will proceed with two additional speakers, then I will offer the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) the opportunity to close, and then I will do the same.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Del Mar, California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I was not even going to speak on this issue until I heard the Democrat leadership's partisan attacks which has flowed through these Chambers over the last year.

When one takes a look at the Democrat leadership and their interest to recapture the majority and gridlock this House and fight against every single thing that we try and do, campaign finance reform was mentioned. The other night when the Presidential debate went forward and Vice President GORE looked at Governor Bush and said, ''would you sign the McCain-Feingold,'' I wanted to jump in the television and ask Governor Bush to ask Vice-President GORE would he sign the Paycheck Protection Act to control the unions. GORE would say no of course.

I went in 18 different congressional districts over the last few weeks. The minimum amount that the union goons had spent against our vulnerable candidates was a million dollars each. But yet my colleagues on the other side, because their campaign coffers are filled by the union bosses, will they do that? Absolutely not.

So when my colleagues talk about campaign finance reform and their extreme rhetoric, no, we will not support those kinds of things.

The Patients' Bill of Rights was mentioned that the Democrats push. It would be so easy for this House to come together. Instead, in an election year, they choose to try to make it a partisan issue. The Patients' Bill of Rights not only has unlimited lawsuits, but unlimited amounts with the intention of killing HMOs. If one kills an HMO, what is left, only a Hillary Clinton government type of health care plan. If one demonizes insurance companies, what is left for prescription drugs? A government-controlled health care system. They say, well, it is under Medicare, but yet the cost would be driven up instead of having insurance.

I had pneumonia last year. My wife is a teacher. I used her insurance. I went down and needed augmentin, and I went to the prescription place, and I got augmentin for a much reduced price. That is an insurance company, but which my colleagues tend to demonize and talk about their patients' bill of rights.

The second aspect of that, they then, the liberal trial lawyers who also fill their campaign coffers, then go down and sue the small businesses with unlimited lawsuits, the people that hire in good faith those HMOs or those organizations to provide health care for their workers. Absolutely not, we are not going to go along with the liberal Democrat leadership agenda.

One takes a look in NFIB and the Chamber of Commerce who produce the jobs in this country they fight it.

Talk about education. Talk about school construction. Why do my colleagues think they want school construction to come out of the Federal Government instead of local, because all Federal monies go down and have to go at the prevailing Davis-Bacon union wage. Again, quote the union boss wage which costs 35 percent more money to build our schools.

Does one think that my colleagues, if we had a bill that said, hey, we will support your construction bill, waive Davis Bacon and the Union wage, and let us put 35 percent more in building schools, but does one think they would do that, no, because it upsets the unions and the money going to their campaign coffers.

It makes me sick on this house floor. Like I said, I had not planned on even speaking on this. In 1993, did you have a minimum wage increase? You had the White House, House and the Senate. Absolutely not.

What did you do? You tried to government control health care, you increased the tax on Social Security, you stole every dime, your leadership took every dime out of the Social Security Trust Fund. AL GORE was the deciding vote on that.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from California taking time to discuss this with us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Addison, Michigan (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I think this legislation is very important and it is so important that we move ahead and send it to the President. I became interested and concerned with bankruptcy laws when I became chairman of the Michigan Senate Agricultural Committee back in the early 1980s.

Farmers came to me with their frustrations and I note those were tough times for farmers. Farmers came to me with their frustration that they were not allowed to reorganize. They were forced to sell their equipment and then told, well, if you can find a way to pay your way out of this, fine. With out their equipment it didn't work.

I met with my congressman, wrote many others and it was in 1986 that we first came up with chapter 12 to allow special considerations for farmers. In 1992 and 1993, when my son Brad Smith became a law clerk with Judge Edith Jones in Houston, Texas with the Fifth Circuit Federal Court of Appeals. I become more aware of problems with the federal law, talking to my son Brad and Judge Jones. If bankruptcy is to easy lenders raise interest rates for everybody else. Because thru bankruptcy it was too easy for many to get out of paying what they owed somebody else other borrowers are charged more to cover the unpaid bills.

So there must be a balance. One wants to be fair, but on the other hand, one does not want to punish everybody to make it too easy so a few people can declare bankruptcy and not pay what they owe.

I have two bills that I introduced that are now incorporated in this bankruptcy law. One is the child support payments that are owed to local units of government. They have been dischargeable. Now, under my amendment and this legislation they are not.

The other, of course, is making section 12 of the bankruptcy law permanent. In tailoring chapter 12 to meet the economic realities of family farming, this bill has eliminated many of the barriers that family farmers have faced when seeking to reorganize successfully under either chapter 11 or chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code.

For example, chapter 12 is more streamlined. It is less complicated. It is directed towards family farmers, not the giants, not the corporation, but family farmers. It provides that they can reorganize in such a way that they do not have to sell their tractors, their plows and their corn planter. It gives them a chance to get back on their feet. Chapter 12 provisions no longer exist in current law. Farmers are not allowed to use these provisions, because they have expired.

This bill, this legislation makes chapter 12 permanent. I hope we move ahead and support this rule and the bill.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I have indicated this would be the remaining speakers that we have in line with the agreement that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) and I had, and I would like to let him know we have now finished our speakers.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), the ranking member on the committee, and then we are prepared to close.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH), would he join me in pushing legislation to pass a free-standing bill to make chapter 12 permanent should this bill not succeed in the Senate as most expect? Right now, chapter 12 is being held hostage to this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) to repeat the question.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman from Michigan join me in supporting legislation in a free-standing bill to make chapter 12 permanent should this bill not succeed in the Senate as most expect that it will?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes, Mr. Speaker. But I certainly hope the other provisions that are so important, such as the discharge of those debts owed in child support, et cetera, somehow need to be corrected. But, yes, I have introduced such a bill. It is very important to farmers. I would hope we would pass the provisions in this bill.

□ 1230

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to simply state once again, as I indicated in my opening statement, that I intend to vote for this rule and I intend to vote for the bill. We would have preferred that it come up under a regular procedure; and obviously, we would prefer that other matters obviously be voted on by this House, but I will vote in favor of the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to tell my colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), that I appreciate his support. I too would ask Members to vote for this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 624, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 2415) to enhance security of United States missions and personnel overseas, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Pursuant to House Resolution 624, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of October 11, 2000 at page H 9723.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is important, for the purpose of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and for the purpose of reenlightening the Members of the House as to the purpose of the mammoth effort that we expended over the last 3 years and more to bring about needed, necessary and cogent bankruptcy reform, to outline the two main theses that apply and on which we banked our experience and our intent to bring about bankruptcy reform. They are worthy of repetition and re-repetition. And every ounce of prevention that we can add to this debate about all those who oppose the concepts that we are employing we repeat and will repeat time and time again.

Everyone and anyone who becomes so flooded with and burdened with and overextended by reason of obligations for a variety of reasons, whether it be divorce or drinking or gambling or overextension of credit in its many different forms, whatever the reason might be that someone became hopelessly indebted and found no reason to do anything except to file bankruptcy, that person, who is so overburdened will find at the hands of the bankruptcy system a fresh start. We guarantee that. That is one of the purposes of bankruptcy from its first usage back in colonial days. The fresh start will be available to every American who needs it.

But by the same token, we cannot permit people to use the bankruptcy system as a mechanism for financial planning for themselves. If we take an objective look at someone's resources, their status in society, their earning power, their status in the financial system of which our economy is a part, if we, upon examination, determine, through the bankruptcy system that we put in place, that there is an ability on the part of this individual to repay some of the debt, albeit not all of it, and not immediately, but over a period of years, then we should compel that individual, through a sympathetic system of transferring that obligation or set of obligations from Chapter 7 to Chapter 13, we should allow that individual to work his way out of that debt. We do not demand that he pay every penny back, but that he return some of the money to the general wheel that keeps our economy going.

It is unfair for such an individual, who could repay, to be absolved of any obligation and then lay his burden at the footstep of every other consumer and taxpayer in the country. Because our country is so wealthy, it is difficult to portray how one bankruptcy that loses in a stream of commerce just $10,000 truly matters. One might say, well, what is that? But that $10,000 of debt unpaid has to be made up somehow in the general economy. And who makes it up? The consumer, the seeker of credit, the purchaser of large items, like automobiles, homes, et cetera.

So this is not an issue that is out there in the ether someplace, that has no connection with everyday living in our communities and the struggles of every family. This touches the heart of the pocketbook of every family. To dismiss it as being a giveaway to somebody or other, or that benefits only one segment of society, one must take a look at individual cases of bankruptcy.

I defy anyone to comment or to assert that our bankruptcy reform crashes down on the poor or the low-income people, when the very threshold upon which the bankruptcy system begins under our reform measure exceeds the median income. Therefore, people under the median income, in whatever quarter in our country, if it is below that standard, there is almost an automatic fresh start accorded that individual when he or she files bankruptcy.

That is a magnanimous view of the low-income stratum of our society. And we say that when that individual from that stratum does find himself or herself overburdened, we are going to help. That fresh start will be available. So I reject contentions that this is a bill biased towards any segment of our society. Rather it is biased, if it is biased at all, towards rectitude, towards balancing the equation in the economy in which we find ourselves.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this measure imposes indiscriminate means tests to determine the eligibility for bankruptcy relief and the amount a bankruptcy filer is required to pay a creditor. This test does not account for such items as child care payments, most health care costs, and the costs of caring for individuals unable to care for themselves. Further, families will be required to go through a series of means tests to justify their medical bills and other expenses. These standards are so extreme that they have been rejected by the Internal Revenue Service.

So when the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), says that the two themes of this bill is to give people a fresh start and then to have, number two, some accountability for those who can and should pay, this bill flunks the test right from the beginning on both counts. It does not allow for a fresh start, and the accountability is so extreme that we are using standards that even the Internal Revenue Service rejected.

The proposal is highly damaging to a single mother's access to the bankruptcy system. It would treat an individual's credit card debt on the same level of obligation as there is to paying child support or alimony. So, therefore, I would argue that it does not make accountability an important consideration because, as again we see the awesome power of the creditor lobby, they have now elevated credit card obligations to the same level as those for child support or alimony. Now, how that meets theme two is beyond my understanding.

So, therefore, a mother who relies on payments to feed or clothe her children would be competing from the same pool of money as a major credit card company. Thanks a lot, I say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. That really makes accountability a strong theme in this so-called reform measure.

Next, the business provisions of the proposal will impose harsh time deadlines, massive new legal and paperwork burdens on businesses, real estate concerns and, by design, will lead to premature liquidation and job loss. So much for theme one of the so-called reform and fresh start of the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Thanks a lot. By leading to premature bankruptcy or liquidation and job loss, we are giving folks a fresh start. Well, my colleagues, there is the awesome power of the creditor lobby working again.

Instead of giving businesses a fresh start and a chance to reorganize, this would cripple an organization and defeat the true purpose of a bankruptcy process, even the one that we have now. At the same time, the conference report addresses the alleged rampant bankruptcy abuse by debtors. It gives next to no attention to the lending industry.

By the way, are bankruptcy filings going up or down? Is there any Member in this body that does not know that they are going down? We have tables to show that the decrease in bankruptcy filings, personal bankruptcy, in the period ending June 30 of this year, ran 8.29 percent below the year earlier levels, and per capita personal bankruptcy rates ran 9.15 percent below the year earlier levels.

So as the bankruptcy courts themselves tell us, the bankruptcy filings are down, not up, according to their figures. So what are we doing here? Well, I think we are genuflecting to the awesome power, as the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary says, the awesome power of the creditor lobby. So what we have, due to deregulation of credit cards and the resulting deluge of credit card solicitations, is that customer debt has skyrocketed to more than $1.3 trillion.

But what attention do we give to the lending lobby, the lending industry, which has encouraged this? Is there anyone that does not get one or two a week or a month of credit cards that say this card is operative, it is for you; if you need it, use it? They send them to students in colleges in their dorms. They are being flooded with them. So our response to this irresponsible activity of the creditor industry is to say that we are going to make it tough by making it harder to get started again, and then hold at the same level the family's need for their support of children. We are going to elevate the credit card obligation to the same as the ones of people who have families in need.

□ 1245

And so the conference report fails in yet another respect. It fails to require credit card companies to fully disclose the total amount of time it takes an individual to complete payment on a credit card balance if only the minimum is paid.

The conference report also omits an important Senate provision that would prevent protesters found guilty of violence and of harassment at abortion clinics from declaring bankruptcy to avoid paying court judgments.

And so, without such a provision, I say to the subcommittee chairman, we are allowing the abortion bombers to intimidate, maim and kill women without suffering any adverse financial consequence. And so, Mr. Speaker, I obviously oppose the conference reports before us.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. BRYANT) a former member of our Committee on the Judiciary who, notwithstanding the fact that he abandoned us, I am still willing to yield to him to talk about bankruptcy reform.

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I do want to thank the gentleman and commend him and other Members and especially the staff who have worked so closely with us over the last 4 years to make this bankruptcy reform a reality. I know a lot of hard work and compromise went into this legislation, and I am confident that the consumers and the creditors will be better off because of it.

In recent years, bankruptcy has truly become a first stop rather than a last resort. In 1998, approximately 1.4 million people filed for bankruptcy, which is the equivalent of more than one in 100 households across this country. This increase in the bankruptcy filings costs the American families, those of us who do not file bankruptcy, on average $400 a year because of these higher prices for their credit and consumer needs that have to be made up because of these filings.

The reform agreement before us today will protect responsible consumers while cracking down on abusive bankruptcy practices.

Now, the object of this bill is to reduce repeat filings and to prevent the gaming of the bankruptcy system, that is running up credit card bills right before they file bankruptcy or filing and dismissing a bankruptcy case and refiling as a stalling tactic. Also, this bill hopes to improve the administration of bankruptcy cases in providing debtors with information about alternatives to bankruptcy such as credit counseling services.

This bill also maintains a needs-based test, a means test so to speak, and it provides safeguards for women and for children and it assists farmers who may be forced into Chapter 7 bankruptcies by extending that particular Chapter 7.

Now, I do want to mention something about this means testing. I sat through a lot of debate this morning on this particular rule and on the general debate and I hear from the other side the opponents, the people who oppose this reform, saying that it is means testing, it is harmful to people who are poor. But then I hear other people from that same side oppose it because it fails to protect the homestead exemption on houses, $250,000 is not enough.

It strikes me kind of strange that we are talking about bankruptcy here and a concern about people who live in houses that have equity of more than $250,000. I think that is an inaccurate figure, too, I might add. Because it is not right that people who file bankruptcy ought to be able to keep houses regardless of how much they have in it or have a value of $250,000.

We have reduced that, in a compromise spirit, down to a $100,000 where it is obvious that they bought the house with the intention of trying to protect their equity and mess over all those creditors out there.

But let me go on to say, too, that I am also pleased to point out that this bill, H.R. 2415, offers my State of Tennessee specific relief by providing additional bankruptcy judges, one in the Western District of Tennessee that is a permanent judge, and a temporary judge in the eastern part of the State.

For example, in the Western District, talking about the tremendous number of bankruptcies cases, we have four judges and it is the highest filing district in the Nation. And we believe these four judges have worked too hard for too long. In fact, when we case-weight the numbers in the Western District based on filings through June of 1999, each judge has had 2,380 cases. And I would point out that 1,500 cases per judge is the level that they should be working at according to their own Judicial Conference.

So by providing this additional judgeship, we can at least reduce their caseloads down to 1,904 cases, still well above the recommended level.

Mr. Speaker, this bill does provide common sense reform and I urge its adoption.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member very much for yielding me the time. I think he knows how fond I am of him personally and how much I respect his intellect and his heart. But I rise today in support of H.R. 2415 and the much needed bankruptcy reform measures contained in this legislation.

The American people find it unacceptable and inherently unfair that those who do pay their bills have to foot the bill for those who in many instances have the ability to pay but choose not to. It has been conservatively estimated that personal bankruptcies cost every American family $400 per household per year and it takes 15 responsible borrowers to cover the cost of one bankruptcy of convenience.

The system will continue to be unjust if debtors persist in using it as a tool of first resort rather than a tool of last resort when all other financial options have been exhausted.

Clearly, this Nation's bankruptcy system is broken when it enables individuals to avoid paying their debts despite their ability to do so. What this Congress must do is to undertake genuine needs-based bankruptcy reform to require those who have the ability to repay a portion of their debts to enter a Chapter 13 repayment plan while also preserving the historic fresh start in Chapter 7 for those people who have truly fallen on hard economic times.

The goal of our bankruptcy system should be to protect those who need protecting, to provide those who experience genuine and serious financial hardship the opportunity to wipe the slate clean. What we must do is return our system back to its original fair and compassionate mission through a simple legislative fix.

Bankruptcy reform is not a Republican or a Democratic issue. It is a consumer issue. According to a recent National Consumer League survey, 76 percent of Americans believe that individuals should not be allowed to erase all of their debts in bankruptcy if they are able to repay a portion of what they owe. This survey merely reflects the American public's belief that individuals should be responsible for their own action.

This bill would help to remedy the glaring problems of today's bankruptcy system by creating a needs-based system, subject to judicial oversight, which would similarly continue to protect the rights of those citizens who need a fresh start, while at the same time requiring those who do not to meet their personal responsibilities.

H.R. 2415 represents a true compromise product between the House and Senate-passed bankruptcy reform bills. Both Chambers passed bankruptcy reform by strong bipartisan margins. The House passed their version last June by a vote of 314–108 with the support of 96 Democrats. The Senate passed theirs by 83–14.

This bill contains a number of pro-consumer items, including a host of new disclosure requirements for credit card companies. Specifically, it requires credit card statements to disclose late payment fees. It also mandates that statements must include a toll free number for consumers to receive estimates on how long it would take to repay their existing balancing by making only the minimum monthly payments.

The legislation also requires improved disclosures on introductory rates and prohibits creditors from closing an account solely if the customer does not incur finance charges.

We need to pass this legislation, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 2415.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, it gives me pleasure to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER).

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for yielding me the time, and I want to congratulate him on his fine work in bringing this measure to the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of the conference agreement and to urge its approval by the House. With this measure, we bring to conclusion a process that we launched 3 years ago to bring a much needed reform to the Nation's bankruptcy laws.

In an era in which disposable incomes are growing, unemployment rates are low, and the economy is strong, consumer bankruptcy filings should be rare. Contrary, however, to this expectation, there are now more than 1.4 million annual bankruptcy filings, a 40 percent increase from 1996 and a 95 percent increase over the number of filings 1 decade ago.

Bankruptcies of convenience are driving this increase. Bankruptcy was never meant to be used as a financial planning tool, but it is increasingly becoming a first stop rather than a last resort, as many filers who could repay a substantial part of what they owe are using the complete liquidation provisions of Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code rather than the court supervised repayment plans that are provided for in Chapter 13.

The legislation that we bring to the floor today would direct more filers to use Chapter 13 plans. Those who can afford to make a substantial repayment of what they owe would be required to do so.

This is a consumer protection measure. As the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) just indicated, the typical American family is paying a hidden tax of at least $400 every year arising from the increased cost of credit and the increases in the prices for goods and services occasioned by the discharge of more than $50 billion annually in consumer bankruptcy filings. By requiring that people who can repay a substantial part of their debt do so in Chapter 13 plans, we will lessen substantially that hidden tax.

Another key point should be made about the provisions of this conference report. The alimony or the child support recipient is clearly better off under this conference agreement than she is under current law. At the present time, she stands number seven in the rank of priority for payment of claims in bankruptcy proceedings. This conference report places her number one. Her priority is elevated from number seven in current law to number one in this conference agreement. Her claim will be first in line for payment, and other provisions of the conference agreement make it easier for her to execute against the assets of the estate of the bankrupt person than under current law.

In May of last year, this reform passed the House by the overwhelming vote of 315–108. A similar reform was approved in the other body by the vote of 83–14. The consensus in support of this reform is broad and it is bipartisan.

I would note that the conference agreement we consider today actually moves in the direction of the bankruptcy filer. It contains a means-testing threshold for the use of Chapter 7 that is more generous to bankruptcy filers than the provision in the House bill. It provides that the filer can still use Chapter 7 if he cannot repay at least 25 percent of his unsecured debt over a 5-year period, and that is after accounting for his normal and necessary living expenses. The House provision was a somewhat less generous 20 percent.

The conference agreement also provides that the filer can still use Chapter 7 unless he can repay at least $6,000 of what he owes over a 5-year period, and that also is after necessary living expenses. And that $6,000 figure over 5 years is compared to the less generous $50 per month over that same period in the House bill.

The conference agreement also contains the credit card consumer disclosure guarantees that were in the Senate bill and assure that consumers have a better understanding of the consequences of only paying the minimum amount on their credit card statement.

□ 1300

I want to commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) for his leadership on this and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM), who I was pleased to join as the original cosponsor of the first bankruptcy reform that we introduced. I want to commend the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) for his excellent work in support of this effort and say that this is a balanced bipartisan measure which will provide a substantial reform and deserves the support of this House.

I am pleased to urge approval of the conference report.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes, because my dear friend the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER) whom I tried to get on the conference as a conferee has made a case that on the surface sounds pretty good. But those who are concerned about the payment of alimony and child support have expressed strong opposition to this bill.

Now, why? The proposed legislation does not live up to its billing. It fails to protect women and children adequately. And I think we ought to have a thorough discussion on that part of the report. The child support provisions of the bill fail to ensure that the increased rights the bill would give to commercial creditors do not come at the expense of families owed support. And so what we are saying is that this is a bill that does not improve the status of women and children in bankruptcy proceedings. Absolutely not. That is also why the National Organization for Women is strongly opposed to the measure. The National Partnership for Women and Families is unalterably against this bill. The National Women's Law Center is opposed to the bill. The National Conference of Bankruptcy Institute is opposed to the bill. And one of the main reasons they are opposed to the bill is that contrary to the assertion that it allows a fresh start and a better fresh start than the existing legislation is that it does not. It would raise up the credit card creditor to the same status as those who are seeking alimony and child support payments, and that is precisely why the women's organizations are seriously opposed to this measure.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, it pleases me to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM).

Mr. GRAHAM. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to echo my congratulations to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and all those who have worked so hard to bring this bill to the floor. We are in the last hours of the Congress and I believe we are on the verge of doing something good for the American consumer and business community. This bill is the reaction to a problem. Under the old bankruptcy code, there were people throughout the land running up hundreds of thousands of dollars of debts, making incomes of $100,000, being able to file bankruptcy and walk away from their obligations, leaving a lot of the American business community holding the bag.

This bill has a balance to it. It is going to change the culture of our country. It is going to allow people to start over in a very fair fashion but it is going to ask people, if you can pay, to pay your debts the best that you can. Chapter 7 if you get under that provision, you discharge all of your debts and you basically walk away. This bill is saying, Wait a minute. If your income is such after you take your food, your clothing, private school expenses, necessary living expenses in a liberal fashion and compute it, that if you can afford to pay $100 a month over a 5-year period to your creditors, pay it. Because that is good for the American business community. It is good for the economy. I think it is good for America, to try to get people who owe something to someone else back on their feet without leaving anybody hanging.

I disagree with my friend the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS). Child support payments are elevated in this bill. That is the balance that we need. From being seventh you are now first. And you cannot get discharged from Chapter 13 if you file under that chapter if you do not keep your child support payments current. We tell the credit card community, you are just not going to be able to inundate people with free credit. You have to inform them better. There is a debtor's bill of rights that tells people options to bankruptcy and ways to make your payments and try to get people together so you do not have to file bankruptcy.

This is long overdue. This is not only good for our business community, good for consumers, it is going to change our culture. I am proud to have been a part of it. I urge its passage.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN).

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to enter into a colloquy with the gentleman from Pennsylvania if I might to understand the homestead provisions in this. The House had adopted my amendment earlier in the proceedings that would have allowed the States to opt out. Now, as I understand it there is a 2-year residency requirement under section 322 of the conference report. So a homeowner who purchased their home and files a petition for bankruptcy within 2 years would be subject to a Federal cap but after that 2 years, would not be subject to a Federal cap?

Mr. GEKAS. If the gentleman will yield, that is exactly correct. The purpose is to say to someone who would move into Texas, if you move into Texas, purchase a property and within 2 years file bankruptcy, you would still preserve a $100,000 exemption but you would not have a total exemption.

Mr. BENTSEN. But after that 2 years you would be under State law?

Mr. GEKAS. After that he is a true Texan and does not have to worry about anything except the State law.

Mr. BENTSEN. The other question is after you have exceeded the 2-year period and you increase the value of your home through addition or property values rise, are you under a new 2-year period?

Mr. GEKAS. No. After 2 years, the person under our provisions and under the intent and under the law generally, after 2 years that individual is a true Texan for all purposes of residency and lives under the homestead exemption laws of your State.

Mr. BENTSEN. And to the extent that one after the 2 years changes residence within the State, the equity they roll over, as I understand it, would be an exempt item under the State homestead law. Would it be additional equity rolled into the new purchase that would be under the $100,000 cap for 2 years or not?

Mr. GEKAS. It would not.

Mr. BENTSEN. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT).

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this very pro-consumer bankruptcy reform conference report. This vital legislation protects individuals and businesses from having to pick up the tab for irresponsible debtors, debtors who are capable of paying off a significant portion of their debts.

This bankruptcy reform bill establishes a clear causal link between a debtor's ability to pay and the availability of Chapter 7 bankruptcy superdischarge. It requires those who can afford to pay their debts to honor their commitments.

Let me emphasize at the outset that individuals who make below the median income will not be forced into Chapter 13 under this bill, although they may still voluntarily choose to file there. What this bill does do is require individuals who make above the median income and are determined to have significant repayment capabilities to file in Chapter 13.

Mr. Speaker, there are people who truly have a legitimate need to declare bankruptcy. No one is denying this. At times hardworking people come up against special circumstances that are beyond their control. Family illness, disability, or the loss of a spouse may necessitate the need to seek relief. This legislation effectively protects these individuals. Too frequently, however, people who have the financial ability or earnings potential to repay their debts are simply seeking an easy way out of repaying debts. While this may prove convenient for the debtor, it is not fair to their friends and neighbors who are ultimately stuck with the bill.

Estimates show that the average American pays as much as $550 per year as a bad debt tax in the form of higher prices and increased consumer credit interest rates to cover the economic costs associated with the excessive bankruptcy filings of others. Nationally, consumer bankruptcies reached a record 1.4 million in 1997 and those numbers have remained high. What makes these statistics particularly alarming is the fact that this trend began in 1994 during a time of solid economic growth, low inflation and low unemployment, during an unprecedented peacetime boom in our economy.

The primary culprit of this dramatic increase in bankruptcy filings is a system that allows consumers to evade personal responsibility for their debts. Under this legislation, individuals who can pay their debts will be moved to Chapter 13 where they will be given a generous 5 years to establish a fair repayment plan and get their financial houses in order.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) for their leadership in this area, and I urge its passage.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. I thank the gentleman for yielding time and for his leadership.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great regret that I come to the floor in opposition to this bill. I supported this bill when the House first voted on it. Unfortunately, the majority has taken a bill in which I thought we had made good progress and chosen to railroad it through the House without really holding a conference and by tying it to a totally unrelated embassy bill.

Furthermore, I appreciate the comments and would like to be associated with the gentleman from Michigan's comments about the many leading women's organizations that oppose the bill. Also, the majority has deleted a critical provision that Senator SCHUMER added to the bill. This provision prevents those who commit acts of violence at reproductive health clinics from escaping paying penalties for these actions. Clinic bombers should not be allowed to excuse penalties assessed on them by the courts through bankruptcy. This bill would allow them to excuse these debts and to walk away from these penalties.

Mr. Speaker, bankruptcy reform is important to the American people, but so is protecting women's safety and reproductive freedom. This is a growing problem that the majority is ignoring. Between 1993 and 2000, three doctors, two clinic employees, one clinic escort and one security guard have been murdered in acts of violence at clinics. There have been 16 attempted murders since 1991. More than 2,400 acts of violence have been reported at clinics since 1997. These included bombings, arsons, death threats, kidnappings, and other acts of harassment. The Senate approved this amendment by a vote of 80–17. Why has the majority now excluded it? Why should clinic bombers be allowed to excuse their penalties by declaring bankruptcy?

I urge all Members who care about women's safety to vote against this bill for this reason and also because of the abusive procedure under which it has been brought to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD a letter from John Podesta, chief of staff to the President, in which he writes that the President will veto the bill because, and I quote, it gets the balance wrong.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, DC, October 12, 2000.

Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER. I understand that the House will take up today the conference report on H.R. 2412, which apparently incorporates the text of S. 3186, a recently filed version of bankruptcy legislation. If this bankruptcy legislation is sent to the President, he will veto it.

Over the last few months, this Administration has engaged in a good faith effort to reach agreement on a number of outstanding issues in the bankruptcy legislation. The President firmly believes that Americans would benefit from reform legislation that would stem abuse of the bankruptcy system by, and encourage responsibility of, debtors and creditors alike. With this goal in mind, we have pursued negotiations with bill proponents on a few key issues, notwithstanding the President's deep concern that the bill fails to address some creditor abuses and disadvantages all debtors to an extent unnecessary to stem abuses by a few.

An agreement was reached in those negotiations on an essential issue—limiting homestead exemptions—with compromises made on both sides. Unfortunately, H.R. 2412 fails to incorporate that agreement, instead reverting to a provision that the Administration has repeatedly said was fundamentally flawed. The central premise of this legislation is that we must ask debtors, who truly have the capacity to repay a portion of their debts, to do so. This would benefit not only their creditors but also all other debtors through lower credit costs. Unlimited homestead exemptions allow debtors who own lavish homes to shield their mansions from their creditors, while moderate-income debtors, especially those who rent, must live frugally under a rigid repayment plan for five to seven years. This loophole for the wealthy is fundamentally unfair and must be closed. The inclusion of a provision limiting to some degree a wealthy debtor's capacity to shift assets before bankruptcy into a home in a state with an unlimited homestead exemption does not ameliorate the glaring omission of a real homestead cap.

Moreover, the President has made clear that bankruptcy legislation must require accountability and responsibility from those who unlawfully bar access to legal health services. Yet the conference report fails to address this concern. Far too often, we have seen doctors, health professionals and their patients victimized by those who espouse and practice violence. Congress and the States have established remedies for those who suffer as a result of these tactics. However, we are increasingly seeing the use of the bankruptcy system as a strategic tool by those who seek to promote clinic violence while shielding themselves from personal liability and responsibility. It is critical that we shut down this abusive use of our bankruptcy system and prevent endless litigation that threatens the court-ordered remedies due to victims of clinic violence. The U.S. Senate was right in voting 80–17 to adopt an amendment that would effectively close down any potential for this abuse of the Bankruptcy Code. We fail to understand why the bill's proponents refuse to include this provision and shut down the use of bankruptcy to avoid responsibility for clinic violence.

I repeat President Clinton's desire to see balanced bankruptcy reform legislation enacted this year. The President wants to sign legislation that addresses these known abuses, without tilting the playing field against those debtors who turn to bankruptcy genuinely in need of a fresh start. He will veto H.R. 2412 because it gets the balance wrong.

Sincerely,

JOHN PODESTA,
Chief of Staff to the President.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas Mr. BENTSEN for the purpose of wrapping up a colloquy.

Mr. BENTSEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, to follow up where we were, a question that I think is extremely important is the question of homeowners today in Texas and other States which have a broader homestead exemption.

□ 1315

Are these provisions prospective in nature in that if one has resided in their home for 2 or more years today, or of the date of enactment, if this bill is to become enacted into law, would they thus be exempted from the Federal cap provided for in this bill? Would they be under State law at that time and any subsequent purchase they make using the equity from the home they own today be exempted from that cap?

Mr. GEKAS. In the hypotheticals that the gentleman pronounced, it would come under State law. The only time that there is a look-back is the initial 2 years of residency in a homestead-exemption State.

So 2 years, and thereafter the State laws would apply.

Mr. BENTSEN. Including today. So one who has resided today in their home for at least 2 years is under State law and would not be under this cap?

Mr. GEKAS. That is exactly correct.

Mr. BENTSEN. The other is on section 308, the 7-year look-back provision which is designed, as I understand it, to prevent the diversion of nonexempt assets into exempt property, is the burden of proof on the debtor or the creditor?

Mr. GEKAS. It is on the creditor, and that really conforms to the general state of the law in such cases. There has to be affirmative evidence of fraud having been committed so that the creditor must come forth.

Mr. BENTSEN. The question is raised on the roll-over period and the prospective nature talks about interest acquired. The bill reads the homestead as interest acquired by the debtor, and this is getting somewhat technical or minute, I guess, during that 2-year period, would interest be assumed to include such things as routine principal payments or rise in property value?

Mr. GEKAS. Does the gentleman mean during the 2 years for a look-back in the 2 years?

Mr. BENTSEN. Right, during the 2-year look-back.

Mr. GEKAS. I would have to say yes, that in the look-back it would generally be determined what the value was of the claimed exemption and the $100,000 would apply.

Mr. BENTSEN. To close, for general purposes after 2 years of residency and so long as one is a resident of a State, regardless of where they live or how many places they live, the first 2 years exempts them from the Federal cap for the equity that they gain?

Mr. GEKAS. That is correct. The State laws apply.

Mr. BENTSEN. Any appreciation that applies in equity?

Mr. GEKAS. Yes, on anything that occurs after 2 years.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) for yielding me this time, and I thank him for his leadership on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition reluctantly to this conference report because I am shocked, frankly, and outraged about the way in which this bill was brought to the floor of the House. After months of negotiations on this bill, we have been given a day's notice to consider a measure that does not represent a true compromise and is still in the process of being worked out. I support efforts to ensure that those who are able to pay their debts are required to do so and to ensure that creditors extend and manage credit in a responsible manner; and I would like to see balanced, fair legislation that protects Americans from predatory lending practices and protects the assets of creditors from those who would abuse bankruptcy to avoid their debts; but this bill is lacking in a number of areas, and I would like to focus on one in particular.

The Senate version of the bankruptcy bill included a provision requiring accountability from those who terrorize reproductive health clinics, their employees and the women who need their services. This provision, which received 80 votes, eight zero votes, in the Senate, would prevent those who are convicted of a crime from hiding behind the bankruptcy system in order to shield themselves from paying the consequences of their actions.

Now, despite the fact that the President has said, again, that the clinic violence language must be included in final bankruptcy legislation for it to win his support, the provision was dropped. The proponents of the bill claim it will stop people from abusing the bankruptcy system; but by excluding the Schumer amendment individuals and organizations found to violate FACE, the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances law, will have carte blanche to abuse the system. This is wrong. It does not make sense.

Mr. Speaker, let us agree on a simple principle: violence and harassment have no place in our democratic system and using the bankruptcy code to evade the law, any law, is wrong and should not be tolerated.

FACE passed with a broad bipartisan consensus. It has dramatically reduced violent incidents at health clinics, but we need the tools to fully enforce it, and any bankruptcy bill that does not hold these criminals accountable for their actions is a disgrace. So I urge my colleagues to oppose this conference report.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I will have a motion to recommit the entire conference report to the committee of conference to insist that according to the motion to instruct conferees that we have at least one meeting of the conference committee as required by House rule XXVIII, clause 6. I intend to do that.

What we have found in the course of the study of this bankruptcy anti-reform measure are three myths. One is that it is a pro-consumer bill. It clearly is not.

Two, that it will permit a fresh start for people that are brought into bankruptcy. It actually precludes a start as efficacious as the one that already exists in the existing bankruptcy law. It is a move backwards from fresh start.

The myth of a fair accountability has been destroyed completely in the course of this discussion.

In other words, this is a one-sided measure that is guaranteed to empower the creditors' lobby in a fine new way. Of course, the reality of where this bill is going is known to many of the Members on the Committee on the Judiciary, perhaps not a lot of other Members in the body. That is to say that it is going to again be subject to some delaying tactics in the Senate and that the President has promised to veto on this measure.

So I think that that would be an appropriate conclusion to this measure and give us a chance in the next Congress to begin again.

The bill fails to address the unlimited homestead cap, which is currently enjoyed by Texas and Florida, even though there is a 2-year wait before it kicks in. It imposes a nominal cap on homestead exemptions, but it is so filled with loopholes as to be next to meaningless.

Anyone who lives in a State for more than 2 years will be able to thumb their noses at their creditors and remain in their multimillion dollar mansions, and this goes contrary to a provision that we had that would have cured this.

So this measure before us in the form of a conference report, shot through with all kinds of process defects, is mean-spirited, will have a negative impact on the most vulnerable elements of our society and so is appropriately opposed by the United Automobile Workers, the AFL–CIO, AFCSME, a raft of consumer organizations, women and family organizations. I think it is very clear that we should now vote against this measure, and I hope that many of the Members who supported the bill in an earlier vote will reconsider and vote no when this conference report comes for a vote.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS), which that is a reward that I am granting him on the basis that he has been tremendously helpful to this chairman on many separate issues in this bankruptcy reform bill, primarily what we have discussed thoroughly, the homestead exemption. We owe a great deal to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS).

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), for his thoughtfulness in allowing me an opportunity to stand up to respond to my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS).

Mr. Speaker, I have been a student of this process. Perhaps I could be accused of changing what was the Democrat option on this bankruptcy. I appeared before the Committee on the Judiciary. The prior amount was $100,000. It is very clear that the Democrat Party wanted to take people's homes from them for as little as $100,000 of a home. The Democrat Party, as exemplified by the chairman, wants to make it easier for the middle class of this country to lose their homes if they are engaged in a bankruptcy. I stood up before the Committee on the Judiciary, and I said millionaires and billionaires are talked about taking advantage of this circumstance and it is blamed on people that have a home worth $100,000. I understand the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) disagrees with me. I understand the Democrat Party disagrees with me. The fact of the matter is, is that that figure has been moved to $250,000. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) agreed with me that day as a result of testimony back in the Committee on the Judiciary. That is why we are at $250,000. $100,000 is a wrong amount, and I believe that we should be forthright in understanding that a figure of $100,000 would mean that the middle class of this country, if faced with a bankruptcy, could then be thrown out of their own home. That is the reason why we have made the changes. That is the reason why it is what is in the best interest of people not only in Texas but all across this country.

It preserves the States' rights, but the most important thing is that we aim at the problem. The problem is not the middle class of this country attempting to get out of paying their bills. It is about a problem of someone hiding their money in an asset or a resource like a home and trying to hide from their creditors. The problem, I believe, has been amply addressed.

I disagree with the gentleman's assessment and would ask that we support this because it is the right thing for America.

□ 1330

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I think the three myths that have been the basis of this bill's long life have now been exposed. There is no fresh start. The accountability is very severe. This is a very definitely an anti-consumer bill.

People of all incomes are subject to new coercive creditor motions, including being able to challenge the discharge of even small cash advances. In this bill, it defines current monthly income as the previous 6 months' income, even if they have lost their job.

I say, thanks a lot. I just sort of thank the generous, thoughtful, sympathetic people that wrote that into the bill. I will repeat it for the subcommittee chairman's benefit. It defines current monthly income as the previous 6 months' income, even if they lost that job and will not have the income in the future, thereby skewing the whole means test.

If the expenses exceed what the IRS says they should, they have to go to court and litigate it. Thanks a lot. That was a very thoughtful and sympathetic and moving provision, because they are telling an honest bankrupt to go in and litigate in another court any questions about expenses that exceed the IRS limit.

It is just the idea, it is just an indication of the great concern and touching sympathy that the other side has for the people of limited means that go into bankruptcy court.

''Disclosure of how deep you are getting into debt, and how long it would take you to pay the balance at the minimum payment.'' There is just an 800 number. And then, 80 percent of all the banks would be exempted from even that requirement.

Mr. Speaker, this is a mean-spirited bill. This is a measure that does not meet the tests of anybody.

Finally, I would like to just reiterate the comment made by my good friend, the member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), about moving child support from the seventh to the first priority. That is meaningless. It does it, but the order of priorities apply only in Chapter 7 among unsecured creditors during the bankruptcy proceeding.

Ninety-six percent of all the consumer debtors do not have any assets to distribute to prior unsecured creditors, so that has no meaning. It is a fig leaf. It is phony. It does not improve child support, for those who need the child support at all, because it moves the credit card debtors to the same priority as those who need child support.

Sorry to have to tell everyone about this at the end of this discussion, but I am afraid that those are the sad and sorry consequences of a bill that has the earmarks of the creditor lobby, that awesome creditor lobby that has had such an undue influence on the measure before us.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I do this for one small purpose, to reiterate for the record, for the Members of the House, that every contention made by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), every action taken by those who oppose bankruptcy reform, every debate that they offered over the course, every one of them has been thoroughly discussed, thoroughly debated, and each one of them considered in the overwhelming vote granted bankruptcy reform by the Members of the House.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member rises today to express his support for the Conference Report of H.R. 2415, which is amended with the Bankruptcy Reform Act. It is important to note that this Member is an original cosponsor of H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act, which passed the House on May 5, 1999, by a vote of 313–108.

First, this Member would thank the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), Chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law, for introducing the House bankruptcy legislation (H.R. 833). This Member would also like to express his appreciation to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, for his efforts in getting this measure to the House Floor for consideration.

This Member supports the Bankruptcy Reform Act for numerous reasons; however, the most important reasons include the following:

First, and of preeminent importance to the nation's agriculture sector, this Member supports the provision in H.R. 2415 which permanently extends Chapter 12 of the Bankruptcy Code for family farmers. Chapter 12 bankruptcy allows family farmers to reorganize their debts as compared to liquidating their assets. Chapter 12 bankruptcy has been a viable option for family farmers nationwide. It has allowed family farmers to reorganize their assets in a manner which balances the interests of creditors and the future success of the involved farmer.

If Chapter 12 bankruptcy provisions are not permanently extended for family farmers, this will have a drastic impact on an agricultural sector already reeling from low commodity prices. Not only will many family farmers have to end their operations, but also land values will likely plunge downward. Such a decrease in land values will affect both the ability of family farmers to earn a living and the manner in which banks, making agricultural loans, conduct their lending activities. This Member has received many contacts from his constituents regarding the extension of Chapter 12 bankruptcy because of the situation now being faced by our nation's farm families—although the U.S. economy is generally healthy, it is clear the agricultural sector is hurting.

Second, this Member supports the provision in H.R. 2415 which provides for a means testing (needs-based) formula when determining whether an individual should file for Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 bankruptcy. Chapter 7 bankruptcy allows a debtor to be discharged of his or her personal liability for many unsecured debts. In addition, there is no requirement that a Chapter 7 filer repay many of his or her debts. However, Chapter 13 bankruptcy filers, on the other hand, commit to repay some portion of his or her debts under a repayment plan.

Some Chapter 7 filers actually have the capacity to repay some of what they owe, but they choose Chapter 7 bankruptcy and are able to walk away from these debts. For example, the stories in which an individual filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy and then goes out takes a nice vacation and/or buys a new car are too common. Moreover, the status quo is costing the average American individual and family in increased costs for consumer goods and credit because of the amount of debt which is never repaid to creditors.

As a response to these concerns, the needs-based test of H.R. 2415 will help ensure that high income filers, who could repay some of what they owe, are required to file Chapter 13 bankruptcy as compared to Chapter 7. This needs-based system takes a debtor's income, expenses, obligations and any special circumstances into account when determining whether he or she has the capacity to repay a portion of their debts.

Third, this Member supports the additional monthly expenses that are not considered as a factor under the needs-based test of H.R. 2415 which determines whether a person can file Chapter 7 or 13 bankruptcy. These expenses include the following: reasonable expenses incurred to maintain the safety of the debtor and debtor's family from domestic violence, an additional food and clothing allowance if demonstrated to be reasonable and necessary; and reasonable and necessary expenses for the care and support of an elderly, chronically ill, or disabled member of the debtor's household or immediate family.

In closing, for these aforementioned reasons and others, this Member would encourage his colleagues to support the Conference report of H.R. 2415.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I regret I was absent from the floor of the House on October 12. Had I been present, I would have voted for the motion to instruct conferees to have an open conference on bankruptcy reform.

I look forward to this conference. An issue as crucial as this deserves a full and fair debate. Bankruptcy reform should expect responsible efforts from both debtors and creditors that extend credit far beyond what individuals are capable of paying back.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, the following is a letter which clarifies what will happen to child support obligations if this bill passes. It answers the myth that this bill will not harm children.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S LAW CENTER,
Washington, DC, June 7, 2000.

Hon. ROBERT MENENDEZ,
Cannon House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE MENENDEZ: The undersigned organizations are long-time advocates for women and children, including economically vulnerable single parents and their families. We are writing in response to your May 24 letter to your colleagues which criticizes the recent TIME magazine article on bankruptcy and asserts that the pending bankruptcy bill would help children obtain child support. We must respectfully, but emphatically, disagree. The bill would give many creditors, including credit card companies, finance companies, auto lenders and others, greater claims to a debtor's limited resources than they have under current law. This would intensify the competition for scarce resources between children owed child support and sophisticated commercial creditors both during and after bankruptcy.

Your letter characterizes as a ''myth'' the statement in the TIME Magazine article that: ''The proposed legislation would treat a bankrupt man's credit card debt the same as his obligation to pay child support.'' However, the effect of several provisions of the bill, taken together, would indeed have this result. As the National Association of Attorneys General, commenting on a similar, earlier version of the bankruptcy bill warned, it:

Would encourage credit card companies to treat all debts as secured even though the resale value of the personal property charged on such cards would rarely approach the amount of the debt and even though the interest rates charged for such debt are set in recognition of the fact that such debts are essentially unsecured; and

As a consequence, could allow credit card debt to be elevated to the same or a higher level than domestic support claims and make it far more difficult to ensure that debtors will be able to satisfy their obligations to their spouses and children. (Emphasis added) (Resolution of the National Association of Attorneys General, March, 1999)

Your letter states the following ''fact'':

Bankruptcy reform moves child support to the number one priority position in bankruptcy proceedings. Currently it is priority number seven, behind things like attorney fees! Just as important, the reform bill ends the ''automatic stay'' provision, which currently allows bankruptcy filers to avoid paying child support while their cases are pending—and which gives filers and their attorneys an incentive to drag out the process. Finally, the bill prevents a debtor from discharging their debt under Chapter 13 until all child support payments are made.

Unfortunately, the child support provisions that you mention in your letter would not solve the serious problems the rest of the bill would create for children in need of support.

Moving child support from seventh to first priority sounds good, but is virtually meaningless. This order of priorities only applies in Chapter 7, among unsecured creditors, during the bankruptcy proceeding. Even today, fewer than five percent of consumer debtors in Chapter 7 have any assets to distribute to priority unsecured creditors after secured debtors receive the value of their collateral. Under the bill, there would be even less for priority unsecured creditors in Chapter 7 cases. Only the poorest debtors will have access to Chapter 7 under the means test, and the claims of secured creditors, who are paid before even ''priority'' unsecured creditors, will be increased. Thus, in effect, children owed support will have ''first priority'' to nothing. And, once the Chapter 7 proceeding is over, these priorities have no effect. Under current law, child support and alimony obligations are among the few debts that cannot be discharged in bankruptcy. However, under the bill, many more debts, including credit card debts, will survive bankruptcy and compete for the debtor's resources.

In Chapter 13, current law already requires child support owed to families to be paid in full. (The major change in this section of the bill would be an increase in the rights of States to be paid in Chapter 13 for child support that was assigned to them as reimbursement for public assistance.) However, other provisions of the bill would make it less likely that children would actually receive all the child support they are due in Chapter 13. For example, the bill would require debtors in Chapter 13 to pay many other creditors in full—including credit card companies claiming security interests in property of little or no value. The bill may say that debtors must pay all these debts in full; but if there is not enough money to go around, it simply will make it less likely that children will get the support they need during the Chapter 13 proceeding, much less afterward.

Under current law, the ''automatic stay'' does not allow bankruptcy filers to avoid paying child support while their cases are pending; relief from automatic stay for child support enforcement is routinely granted, and some jurisdictions do not even require the filing of a motion. The elimination of the automatic stay would simplify the process of collecting child support during bankruptcy in some cases. However, the potential benefit of this provision is outweighed by the hundreds of pages of other provisions that increase the rights of commercial creditors, during and after bankruptcy, at the expense of children.

Our organizations are committed to making sure that children get the support they need and deserve. We have opposed this Bankruptcy Reform Act because it will reduce the ability of parents to pay their most important debt—their debt to their children.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I support the long-awaited bankruptcy reform legislation included in H.R. 2415. As a small businessman, I know the importance of improving the bankruptcy system for Americans.

While the bankruptcy process should continue to be a life preserver for those who have debt that is insurmountable, this bill makes the needed for reforms to prevent abuse of the system. Not reforming the system amounts to a hidden tax on American consumers, who currently subsidize individuals who walk away from mountains of debt, yet can afford to pay back a portion of their debts.

The number of bankruptcies has trended upwards, despite the economy's overall good health. In 1997, the figure climbed to 1.35 million, more than triple the number recorded in the early 1980s. The rise in bankruptcy filings is often attributed to a rise in household debt burdens. Since 1980, household debt has risen from about 61 percent to 85 percent of total disposable personal income.

This bill provides for the increased use of Chapter 13 bankruptcy, which allows for the repayment of some debts. This is an appropriate step to ensure that our bankruptcy laws ensure that individuals who can repay a portion of their debts, pay their fair share. I commend my colleagues for their hard work and years of effort to reduce the ''abuse'' of the bankruptcy system while continuing to protect low-income consumers.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am in strong support of this conference report. We have before us a fair and even-handed conference report that will allow us to consider this important legislation to reform the nation's bankruptcy system.

Procedure in the House is not always all that we might want it to be, but when we are presented with legislation that is so needed and so desired by the American people, we must take hold of it and champion it to see that it becomes law.

This bankruptcy reform legislation will remedy weaknesses in existing law that allow higher income taxpayers to escape their responsibilities even when they are able to repay a portion of what they owe. This bill will take steps to eliminate the ''bankruptcy of convenience.''

At the same time, this legislation will protect those who truly need a second chance and maintain their ability to obtain a fresh start. Further, this legislation contains important protections for children and spouses who are owed child support or alimony.

By equipping state child support collection agencies with the necessary tools and codifying the importance of child support and alimony obligations, this legislation will increase our commitment to children and families, and will hold parents, husbands, and wives to their responsibilities.

Over 70 percent of Americans have indicated their desire for bankruptcy reform. We can do no less than what the American people have overwhelmingly asked of us.

I urge your support of this important legislation, and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the bankruptcy reform conference report.

This legislation has been a long time coming. Since 1980, bankruptcies have risen 400 percent, imposing a heavy burden on American families. Some estimate that bankruptcies cost each household $400 a year in the form of higher interest rates on their credit cards, car loans, school loans, and mortgages.

The means testing approach championed by my colleague, GEORGE GEKAS, will make bankruptcy abuse much harder in the future. Wealthy individuals who can hire savvy lawyers will no longer be able to game the bankruptcy system at the expense of the American consumer.

What this bill says is that if you file bankruptcy, you will not be able to walk away from your debt if after all your reasonable monthly expenses are taken into account, you still have $166 in your pocket. If you are one of these people, then you will have to enter into an agreement to repay at least part of your debt in a 5 year plan, unless you can prove special circumstances to the judge. That is taking responsibility for your debt instead of imposing the cost on other consumers.

I also want to thank Chairman GEKAS for his support in helping my home State of Delaware receive an additional bankruptcy judgeship. As I testified before a joint House-Senate Judiciary Committee hearing earlier this year, Delaware's bankruptcy judges have the highest average bankruptcy caseloads in the Nation according to the U.S. judicial conference. The need for relief has reached critical levels and Chairman GEKAS has been quick to recognize this.

Recognition also must go to Speaker HASTERT and Majority Leader ARMEY, who fulfilled their commitment to finding an appropriate vehicle that would allow the will of the House and the will of the Senate to proceed on this legislation. They did the honorable thing by taking our unrelated riders from both sides of the aisle and presenting this body with a clean bill for us to vote on. I thank them for their leadership.

Finally, I want to thank Chairman GEKAS for his support in removing a provision in the bill that would have eliminated a business' place of incorporation as an acceptable venue for filing a bankruptcy. Delaware's bankruptcy judges and the Delaware bar are among the finest in the Nation in resolving bankruptcies quickly, fairly and efficiently. We need to keep the courtroom doors open in Delaware.

Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support this clean, balanced bankruptcy reform conference report.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. CONYERS

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report?

Mr. CONYERS. Yes, sir, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CONYERS moves to recommit the conference report on the bill (H.R. 2415) to the committee of conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to insist on conducting at least one meeting of conferees as required by House Rule XXII, cl. 12, and in accordance with the motion to instruct conferees approved by the House of Representatives yesterday by a vote of 398 to 1, before making any report on the bill.

Mr. GEKAS (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The motion to recommit was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DIRECTING SECRETARY OF THE SENATE TO CORRECT ENROLLMENT OF S. 3186, BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 2000

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 427) directing the Secretary of the Senate to correct the enrollment of the bill S. 3186.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) for the purpose of explaining what we have before us at this time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law and the Senator from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY, the subcommittee chairman of the Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts, for all their hard work over the past few years in getting this legislation to the point where it is today.

Both men have demonstrated tremendous leadership and fairness in practice in creating this agreement that just passed this body, and I want to thank them for their efforts in the motion to rename this bankruptcy bill.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, continuing to reserve my right to object, did I understand the gentleman from Texas to say that he wanted to rename the bankruptcy bill in honor of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and someone else, Senator GRASSLEY?

Mr. SESSIONS. In fact, the gentleman from Texas is seeking to rename the bill the Gekas-Grassley Act.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman, this is something that he thinks would help the bill, or help American history, or help those who are concerned with bankruptcy law? What are we doing?

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the gentleman for his question. It is simply to rename the bankruptcy bill in honor of both the gentlemen who have worked diligently on its passage.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, continuing to reserve my reservation of objection, I have a number of questions that I will forego, but I want to say this. I think this is an appropriate disposition of this measure. I will not recall the way I have described this bill.

Mr. Speaker, if any of that is accurate and my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, still wants to have the bill named in his honor, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman for not only his consideration, but his collegiality in this effort.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 427

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in the enrollment of the bill (S. 3186), A bill to amend title 11, United States Code, and for other purposes, the Secretary of the Senate shall make the following corrections:

(1) Amend section 1(a) of the bill to read as follows:

''(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the 'The Gekas-Grassley Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000.' ''.

(2) Strike ''Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000'' each place it appears throughout the bill and insert ''Gekas-Grassley Bankruptcy Reform Act of 2000''.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SESSIONS

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SESSIONS:

Page 1, line 2, strike out ''S. 3186'', and insert ''H.R. 2415''; and

Page 1, line 4, strike out ''Secretary of the Senate'' and insert ''Clerk of the House''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS).

The amendment was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

The title of the concurrent resolution was amended so as to read: ''Directing the Clerk of the House to correct the enrollment of the bill H.R. 2415.''.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will now put the question on each motion to suspend the rules on which further proceedings were postponed on Tuesday, October 10, 2000, in the order in which that motion was entertained.

Votes will be taken in the following order:

H.R. 5174, by the yeas and nays;
H.R. 4345, de novo;
H.R. 4656, by the yeas and nays;
H.R. 34, de novo;
H.R. 3292, de novo;
H.R. 468, de novo;
H.R. 5083, de novo.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first such vote in this series.

PROVIDING FOR VOTING IN MILITARY INSTALLATIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 5174.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5174, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

AUTHORIZING USE OF CAPITOL GROUNDS FOR MILLION FAMILY MARCH

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 423) authorizing the use of the Capitol Grounds for the Million Family March, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 423

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring),

SECTION 1. AUTHORIZATION OF MILLION FAMILY MARCH ON CAPITOL GROUNDS.

Million Family March, Incorporated (in this resolution referred to as the ''sponsor'') shall be permitted to sponsor a public event, the Million Family March, on the Capitol Grounds on October 16, 2000, or on such other date as the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate may jointly designate.

SEC. 2. TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The event authorized by section 1 shall be free of admission charge to the public and arranged not to interfere with the needs of Congress, under conditions to be prescribed by the Architect of the Capitol and the Capitol Police Board.

(b) EXPENSES AND LIABILITIES.—The sponsor shall assume full responsibility for all expenses and liabilities incident to all activities associated with the event.

SEC. 3. STRUCTURES AND EQUIPMENT.

(a) STRUCTURES AND EQUIPMENT.—Subject to the approval of the Architect of the Capitol, beginning on the day preceding the event authorized by section 1, the sponsor may erect or place and keep on the Capitol Grounds, until not later than 8:00 p.m. of the day succeeding the event, such stage, sound amplification devices, and other related structures and equipment as may be required for the event.

(b) ADDITIONAL ARRANGEMENTS.—The Architect of the Capitol and the Capitol Police Board are authorized to make any such additional arrangements as may be required to carry out the event.

SEC. 4. ENFORCEMENT OF RESTRICTIONS.

The Capitol Police Board shall provide for enforcement of the restrictions contained in section 4 of the Act of July 31, 1946 (40 U.S.C. 193d; 60 Stat. 718), concerning sales, advertising, displays, and solicitations on the Capitol Grounds, as well as other restrictions applicable to the Capitol Grounds, with respect to the event authorized by section 1.

SEC. 5. LIMITATIONS ON REPRESENTATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No person may represent, either directly or indirectly, that this resolution or any activity carried out under this resolution in any way constitutes approval or endorsement by the Federal Government of any person or any product or service.

(b) ENFORCEMENT.—The Architect of the Capitol and the Capitol Police Board shall enter into an agreement with the sponsor, and such other persons participating in the event authorized by section 1 as the Architect of the Capitol and the Capitol Police Board considers appropriate, under which such persons shall agree to comply with the requirements of subsection (a). The agreement shall specifically prohibit the use of any photograph taken at the event for a commercial purpose and shall provide for the imposition of financial penalties if any violations of the agreement occur.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 423.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4392) ''An Act to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes.''

CONCURRING IN SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 4386, BREAST AND CERVICAL CANCER PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT OF 2000

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 628 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 628

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4386) to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to provide medical assistance for certain women screened and found to have breast or cervical cancer under a federally funded screening program, to amend the Public Health Service Act and the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act with respect to surveillance and information concerning the relationship between cervical cancer and the human papillomavirus (HPV), and for other purposes, with the Senate amendment thereto, and to consider in the House, without intervention of any point of order, a motion offered by the chairman of the Committee on Commerce or his designee that the House concur in the Senate amendment with the amendment printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. The Senate amendment and the motion shall be considered as read. The motion shall be debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Commerce. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the motion to final adoption without intervening motion or demand for division of the question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this rule, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Committee on Rules met and granted a rule waiving all points of order against a motion to concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 4386, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act of 2000 with an amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the rule provides for 1 hour of debate in the House on the motion equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Commerce.

The rule also waives all points of order against the amendment printed in the Committee on Rules report.

Mr. Speaker, this rule allows us to finally pass a very, very important bill. The Breast Cancer Treatment Act will allow low-income, uninsured women to get treatment for their breast and cervical cancer.

Right now, uninsured women can receive free Federal mammograms and pap smears; but if they find out they have cancer, they are on their own.

There is nothing worse than being diagnosed with breast cancer or cervical cancer and then being told, sorry, there is nothing we can do to help. That is ridiculous. It is very, very expensive to get chemotherapy and radiation, which are the treatment options we have available today. I know this because I just finished that treatment through my own battle with cancer.

It is also a very emotional battle when one is told they have this disease and just diagnosed with it and somebody should not have to worry that they are not going to be able to get the treatment they need. Because they naturally would think, I am going to die. What is going to happen to me?

I was very lucky because I was able to afford health insurance. This bill is for working women who have no insurance, and it is crucial that we do our part to help them with the tough time in their lives.

In my own State of North Carolina, 20,000 women have been screened for breast cancer through the government's free mammogram program. And up until now, many of these women have been left out in the cold.

Now, as soon as we get this bill to the President, these women will have health. And there is another issue in this bill which we are going to be addressing and we both have speakers on both sides of the aisle, and that is the human papilloma virus. We are going to be talking about that. And then, as we go through the process, I am going to move at the end of the rule to make an amendment to the bill. And I want to make that clear.

So we need to pass this rule and, more importantly, let us get this bill to the President.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from North Carolina for yielding me the customary half hour.

Mr. Speaker, first and foremost, I want to express my very strong support for the underlying bill. I am proud to be an original cosponsor of H.R. 1070, on which the legislation is based.

Our consideration of this measure is long overdue. I want to commend the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) and the gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. DANNER) as well as all the members of the Women's Caucus for persevering and advancing the issue and bringing it before the House today.

Now, according to our colleagues in the other body, the other body will not, I repeat, will not consider the measure in the final days of Congress if we allow the Coburn amendment to go forward. And with this in mind, my colleague the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) has secured a mechanism to remove the additional language to provide for consideration of a clean bill. She has my strong support in this effort. I urge the support of my colleagues, as well.

I would like to say a word about the serious nature of the human papilloma virus to both men and women as one of the leading causes of both cervical and prostate cancer, and I would also like to have some more work done on the importance of surveillance and research on that virus. I think it is an important step, and I look forward to seeing the provision that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) has in his amendment included on a bill this year, but just not this one. We cannot afford to let this year about to go by while women wait.

The Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act is much too important to be caught up in the procedural confusion. This bill provides an opportunity to extend care and treatment to low-income women diagnosed with cancer under the CDC breast and cervical cancer screening program. For many of these women, such a bill will ensure that they have access to affordable care.

Low-income women screened and diagnosed with breast cancer through the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention of Breast and Cervical Cancer Control Program should not have to hold bake sales to obtain treatment for breast cancer. The underlying bill will give States the option of providing Medicaid coverage for the treatment of these women.

Mr. Speaker, the bill has the strong support of the National Breast Cancer Coalition, a 500 member organization representing hundreds of thousands of individual members. And we also have letters of support from numerous health care organizations urging that the Senate version of the bill be considered so that we can pass this and send it to the President this year.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) my friend.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from North Carolina, who is a very dear friend of mine, and want to say this: There is no question I have lost the battle on this bill to have women have the knowledge about what the risks are from this virus. And that has been my goal all along.

Every Friday and every Monday that we are not here, I treat women. I hate this virus. I hate it worse than HIV. Because what it does is it takes the self-esteem away from a woman. A woman feels dirty when she finds out that she has got this virus.

Unfortunately, we as a body have condoned the message in this country that says to our young children and young adults that they can have safe sex. That is a lie.

A condom offers no protection from this virus. The NIH has stated so. As a matter of fact, NIH Dr. Richard Cosner has stated that no additional research should be done on the efficacy of condoms as related to this virus because the studies are irrefutable that a condom will not protect them.

I understand the concerns of the gentlewoman from New York and the Women's Caucus in this. I want a breast and cervical cancer bill. I have three close family members with breast cancer. I want this. I want this for the women in my practice who have trouble getting treatment when they are working and do not have health insurance. I do not mean to be an impediment. But if we take the same track on cervical cancer, on prostate cancer, and now 20 percent of the gay men in this country have rectal dysplasia, which means they are going to have rectal cancer if we take the same track we did initially on HIV and offer treatment only, without education and information for prevention, what we have done is a very great disservice to the country.

□ 1445

We have abrogated our responsibility. The fact is that we can prevent cervical cancer. Yes, we have set up a great screening system to find this. That is why we find it early. That is why we have such wonderful cure rates on cervical cancer. But we should not have as many women with cervical cancer as we do in this country: 3,800 women will die this year from cervical cancer; 30,000 will be diagnosed with cervical cancer in this country. Those are preventable diseases.

As we discuss the health care dollars and the health care crisis in this country, to be spending money on treatments when we could have prevented it is very, very foolish. I would like to engage the gentlewoman from New York in a colloquy, if I might. I would like to just ask again, I heard her opening statement and I am very appreciative of it. Can I have a commitment from the Women's Caucus that before this session of Congress is over, that we in fact will have in some language somewhere a study and a prevention message for the young people in this country as relating to human papilloma virus?

Ms. SLAUGHTER. If the gentleman will yield, if I could give him that assurance, I would. Unfortunately, I do not determine what goes on what bills. However, I made it as clear as I could in my statement that we recognize that what he is doing is important, that we want to see it this year. However, there is no mistaking the fact that if his amendment is on this bill, the Senate will not take it up this year. That means that another year, maybe two, would pass before the poor women in the United States would have access to treatment. We would be more than happy, and I will give the gentleman my commitment that we would vote for that, be happy to do it; but certainly I am not the person he wants to talk to about putting that on another bill.

Mr. COBURN. I have the assurance of our leadership. What I want is the assurance of the Women's Caucus that they want women in this country to be informed about this risk.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I think we have made that very clear. I do not know anything I could say to make it clearer. We want all the information we can get. We do not believe there is any such thing as too much. But we want to save this bill because women are waiting.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the gentlewoman, and I reclaim my time.

I would just say the following thing: information is powerful. Women in our country are smart. They make good medical decisions. They can and must be informed of the risk of this virus. Seven million women this year will become infected with this virus. Not all of them will develop cervical cancer. But if one does, we have not done our job.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COBURN. I yield to the gentlewoman from New York.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I just first of all want to commend the gentleman from Oklahoma for his efforts, his really sincere and hard efforts to alert the public on the danger of HPV, which is a very widespread sexually transmitted disease. As cochair of the Women's Caucus along with my dear friend and colleague from the great State of New York (Mrs. KELLY), he has my absolute commitment to work this year to find some vehicle to have this study and the important work that he is supporting in a package this year. But as the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) pointed out, the Senate has said they want a clean bill. That is what we want to give them. But we applaud his efforts, his work and we want to work with him.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the gentlewoman for that assurance.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS).

Mrs. CAPPS. I thank my colleague from New York for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I have spent many months working with my colleagues in the Committee on Commerce on helping to support the Breast and Cervical Treatment Act. I want to pay particular tribute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), who is not able to be here today for her leadership in that effort in the committee and throughout the House.

I want to pay a special tribute today to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) for her leadership to move this legislation along. As a nurse, I fully understand the importance of human papilloma virus as a public health issue. I commend the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) for his interest in this topic, and I hope that the House will address this issue very soon.

But today we must be voting on a clean bill so that we can ensure that low-income women who have been screened positive for breast and cervical cancer can get the treatment that they so desperately need. As the gentlewoman from North Carolina said, early diagnosis is meaningless without the opportunity for treatment. That is what this bill, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act, addresses. Adding the HPV provision to this bill which is extraneous to its underlying purpose of treatment jeopardizes its passage. Think of the disservice this does, the critical lifesaving treatment that could be denied to millions of women in this country today if this happens.

Today, instead, we have the chance to pass this strongly bipartisan bill out of the House and send it directly to the President's desk for a signature. We cannot let that opportunity pass by.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY).

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the rule for H.R. 4386, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act. Back in May, the House passed this legislation under the suspension of the rules. Today, we have the opportunity to again support this important legislation which would provide treatment for low-income women with breast and cervical cancer by closing the gap in an existing Federal program that screens low-income women for breast and cervical cancer but does not provide treatment once diagnosed.

The rule we are now considering will allow the House to consider the same bill which the Senate passed this week, and by the end of today we will have a bill to send to the President to close this gap and provide treatment for the hundreds of thousands of women across this country who need this treatment.

The rule removes the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN). His amendment addresses a serious disease, the human papilloma virus. But unfortunately this language may have slowed this bill's passage in the other body. I support the efforts of my colleague, and I look forward to joining him in the future to have these concerns considered. I join my colleague, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY), the cochair of the House Women's Caucus, in committing to work within the Women's Caucus for the inclusion of his bill in any vehicle possible this year so we can address this dangerous virus.

Presently, I urge all of my colleagues to support this rule, however, and the underlying bill. This legislation is a critical step in ensuring women have access to the treatment that they need for these terrible diseases. I thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO) for their work on this issue.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. WAXMAN).

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I came to the floor originally to speak against the rule, but now I understand that the rule will be amended and the language that was added to the Senate bill will not be included so that this legislation will go directly from the House to the President. We hear he is anxiously awaiting the opportunity to sign it.

I was the author of the legislation originally to provide the breast and cervical cancer screening. That was during the Bush-Quayle administration. We had their support for that legislation, but we could not get them to agree to help fund the treatment for women if they found that they had cancer. It is now 8 years later and in a bipartisan and maybe unanimous move we are finally going to allow low- and moderate-income women who are screened for breast and cervical cancer under the existing program to have assured treatment under this legislation.

This bill would provide them the hope by allowing States to cover them under Medicaid to get the care that they need. It makes sense. It is in fact a cruel hoax to say to a woman, ''Go get screened but if it turns out you have cancer, if you don't have insurance, you're on your own.''

Unfortunately, in these last 8 years, the number of people who are uninsured has grown 1 million each year. So we have more and more people uninsured. At least for those women who have breast and cervical cancer, once they are screened under the existing program, we will now provide medical services, lifesaving medical services for them. It would be a travesty to do otherwise.

I am pleased now to support the rule when it is amended and to support the legislation. It is long overdue. I look forward to having the President sign this legislation into law.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, this should be a guy thing, and I want to tell my colleagues why. I joined the Labor-HHS committee because it focuses primarily on two issues: one is education, the other is medical research. This century is going to be, I think, not for technology but the most important century for medical research in the history of mankind, from the genome program to cell division where we can take pancreatic cells and inject into maybe a child that has juvenile diabetes.

I would like my colleagues to remember that we lost Herb Bateman this year. Congressman Vento, we go to his funeral tomorrow. Cancer is a brutal thing. I know many of our colleagues on this floor have contracted it. I have talked to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO). She is a cancer survivor. My mom is a cancer survivor. There is no better woman in this country than my little mom. But can you imagine, and I know when the doctor looked me in the face and said, ''Duke, you've got cancer,'' that is pretty tough. And I try and put myself in the position that what if I did not have care for my medical retirement from my military retirement, what if someone says, ''Duke, you've got prostate cancer, but you've got no hope. You're going to die.'' How terrible is that in a country as powerful as ours? I look at the things in my own personal life. I am pro-life. My colleagues know that. And I disagree with areas like Planned Parenthood on their abortion issue. But I went to Planned Parenthood, and I saw many women receive mammograms, pap smears, care that indigent women would not have received. At least we need to come together in those areas to make sure that many of our unfortunate that do not have health care can come together and get that. That is why I think this is so important, and I rise in strong support. I want to thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for this legislation.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON).

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this measure and to pay tribute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO) and the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) for taking the lead and for the rest of the women in the bipartisan Women's Caucus. Many taxpayers' dollars went into the discovery and the security of having diagnostic and treatment modalities for cervical and breast cancer. Yet we have seen a number of working women, low-income women without health insurance coverage not be able to get treatment simply because they cannot afford it. Yet some of their tax dollars went into the real arrival of these answers that we have today.

I stand here as a cancer survivor because of these diagnostic and treatment modalities.

□ 1500

My grandmother was a victim. So I do know what it is like to be told not only of a family member but be told myself that I have cancer, and to have access to getting treatment.

I would hope that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) would understand that we do not want to delay this measure any longer in going to get the President's signature so that women can have access to this treatment. I do not believe that he would want to do that.

I understand the seriousness of that virus. I too am a health professional. I am a registered nurse and understand the real importance of early diagnosis and treatment. Far too long we have waited for this to become law, and I hope we will wait no longer.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN).

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, breast and cervical cancers have continued to increase in exponential numbers. Just today approximately 480 women across our Nation will be diagnosed with breast cancer and approximately 120 will die from this affliction. Women's cancers are sweeping the families of our Nation at high speeds, and while researchers continue to look for cures and effective treatments, many women will never be able to see the benefits of such research because they simply will not be able to afford it.

Today, by passing this legislation, we will be on our way to ensuring that low-income women without health insurance have access to lifesaving treatment.

Cancer eats away at the spirits of women battling with this disease. These women should not have to waste their energy scrambling for an ad hoc patchwork of providers, volunteers and charity care programs that will only result in unpredictable, delayed, or incomplete treatment. For the women and families fighting cancer, every minute counts. They simply cannot and should not have to wait any longer for this treatment. Their lives may depend on the outcome of today's vote. I urge my colleagues to vote for the passage of this bill so that low-income women can have a fighting chance at beating breast or cervical cancer.

I would like to thank my dear constituent, Jane Torres, president of the Florida Breast Cancer Coalition, for her selfless devotion to this very worthy cause; and to Fran Visco, president of the National Breast Cancer Coalition, for her tireless efforts to eradicate breast cancer; and to my dear colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO), the leader of this legislation, who continues to show through his actions that the welfare and the health of women and families remain his priorities; and lastly, to my colleague, the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), a breast cancer survivor and a fighter to whom this legislation is dedicated and a fearless advocate for all women living with breast cancer.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) for yielding me this time, and for her leadership.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this rule and the underlying bill. This is an extremely important bill, and it will literally save thousands of women's lives. Mr. Speaker, I ask everyone to stop for a moment and think about what they might do if they were diagnosed with cancer but were told that no treatment options were available under their insurance and that they could not afford treatment because they could barely afford to feed their family and pay their rent.

Mr. Speaker, for thousands of women in this country, this is an unfortunate reality. There is an outstanding program under the CDC called the National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection program. It provides screening for low-income women who have little or no health insurance, but for women who find that they have cancer from this important screening program there is no guarantee of any treatment. It is clear that this situation must change. This bill will do that.

The Women's Caucus has made it a top priority. I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO) and the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS), the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), the gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. DANNER), and my Women's Caucus cochair, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY), for their tireless work to get this bill passed. I also want to thank all the members of the Women's Caucus who signed a letter to Speaker HASTERT this week urging swift passage of the bill.

This bill gives States the option to provide Medicaid coverage to uninsured or underinsured women who have been diagnosed through the CDC's screening program. It passed overwhelmingly in the House and Senate, and every day this bill is delayed we have women dying from treatable breast and cervical cancer. Today is a great and important day for women facing breast and cervical cancer. I commend the leadership for bringing it to the floor today, and I also want to commend the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) for his efforts and pledge my support to continue working with him on the dangers of HPV.

I urge total support and passage and to the President's desk.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise simply to thank all of those who have been engaged in this battle both personally and as well publicly. I do acknowledge the importance of this legislation and particularly the fight against this virus HPV. I think it is very important to acknowledge the number of women who have died suffering from both breast and cervical cancer. Just a week ago, many of us, or this past month, saw the Susan B. Coleman Race for the Cure all over the Nation. Thousands of women stood up to be counted for a cure for breast cancer. In my own community 20,000 walked, and I am particularly proud of the Sisters Network, a group of African American women who have gone into the community to fight against the stigma of acknowledging the importance of getting a mammogram or the importance of early detection.

This legislation, however, comports with the mission of many women in the United States Congress and that is there can be no real research if we do not use clinics and reach out to women to be tested and further research in the National Institutes of Health. I am glad that this legislation will help low-income women, inner city women, rural women, Asian, Hispanic, African American women, white women, all women who face these devastating diseases; and we will learn more by this legislation. I hope that my colleagues will support this legislation enthusiastically, but I also ask that we continue to fetter out some of the perceived uncurable diseases that have plagued American citizens, and particularly in this instance women. I also want to salute the very brave women who are survivors and ask that there be many more as we seek a cure for these diseases.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as I stated earlier, the amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) is not going to be included on this bill, just for clarity; but I do want to say that I will do everything in my power to make sure that the very important issue is included in a bill this year. I want to thank the Women's Caucus for coming forward and saying that they are willing to work on this as well because we all understand how important it is to women that we get this done, and men, too, relative to prostate cancer.

I also want to thank everyone on both sides of the aisle for their cooperation on this and making it possible to see this bill come to fruition this year, and also thank the Breast Cancer Coalition for their support and other groups on the outside, and especially the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO), who has been a real champion of this and spent a lot of hard work on this issue over the past year.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MRS. MYRICK

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). The Clerk will report the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mrs. MYRICK:

Strike all after the resolved clause and insert:

That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4386) to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to provide medical assistance for certain women screened and found to have breast or cervical cancer under a federally funded screening program, to amend the Public Health Service Act and the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act with respect to surveillance and information concerning the relationship between cervical cancer and the human papillomavirus (HPV), and for other purposes, with the Senate amendment thereto, and to consider in the House, without intervention of any point of order, a motion offered by the chairman of the Committee on Commerce or his designee that the House concur in the Senate amendment. The Senate amendment and the motion shall be considered as read. The motion shall be debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Commerce. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the motion to final adoption without intervening motion.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I do want to reiterate that this means this bill will go straight to the President for signature.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the amendment in the nature of a substitute and on the resolution.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK).

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution, as amended.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 628, I call up the bill (H.R. 4386) to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to provide medical assistance for certain women screened and found to have breast or cervical cancer under a federally funded screening program, to amend the Public Health Service Act and the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act with respect to surveillance and information concerning the relationship between cervical cancer and the human papillomavirus, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BILIRAKIS

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

The text of the motion is as follows:

Mr. BILIRAKIS of Florida moves that the House concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 4386.

The text of the Senate amendment is as follows:

Senate Amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act of 2000''.

SEC. 2. OPTIONAL MEDICAID COVERAGE OF CERTAIN BREAST OR CERVICAL CANCER PATIENTS.

(a) COVERAGE AS OPTIONAL CATEGORICALLY NEEDY GROUP.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)(A)(ii)) is amended—

(A) in subclause (XVI), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(B) in subclause (XVII), by adding ''or'' at the end; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(XVIII) who are described in subsection (aa) (relating to certain breast or cervical cancer patients);''.

(2) GROUP DESCRIBED.—Section 1902 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(aa) Individuals described in this subsection are individuals who—

''(1) are not described in subsection (a)(10)(A)(i);

''(2) have not attained age 65;

''(3) have been screened for breast and cervical cancer under the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention breast and cervical cancer early detection program established under title XV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300k et seq.) in accordance with the requirements of section 1504 of that Act (42 U.S.C. 300n) and need treatment for breast or cervical cancer; and

''(4) are not otherwise covered under creditable coverage, as defined in section 2701(c) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300gg(c)).''.

(3) LIMITATION ON BENEFITS.—Section 1902(a)(10) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)) is amended in the matter following subparagraph (G)—

(A) by striking ''and (XIII)'' and inserting ''(XIII)''; and

(B) by inserting '', and (XIV) the medical assistance made available to an individual described in subsection (aa) who is eligible for medical assistance only because of subparagraph (A)(10)(ii)(XVIII) shall be limited to medical assistance provided during the period in which such an individual requires treatment for breast or cervical cancer'' before the semicolon.

(4) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1905(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d(a)) is amended in the matter preceding paragraph (1)—

(A) in clause (xi), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(B) in clause (xii), by adding ''or'' at the end; and

(C) by inserting after clause (xii) the following:

''(xiii) individuals described in section 1902(aa),''.

(b) PRESUMPTIVE ELIGIBILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 1920A the following:

''PRESUMPTIVE ELIGIBILITY FOR CERTAIN BREAST OR CERVICAL CANCER PATIENTS

''SEC. 1920B. (a) STATE OPTION.—A State plan approved under section 1902 may provide for making medical assistance available to an individual described in section 1902(aa) (relating to certain breast or cervical cancer patients) during a presumptive eligibility period.

''(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

''(1) PRESUMPTIVE ELIGIBILITY PERIOD.—The term 'presumptive eligibility period' means, with respect to an individual described in subsection (a), the period that—

''(A) begins with the date on which a qualified entity determines, on the basis of preliminary information, that the individual is described in section 1902(aa); and

''(B) ends with (and includes) the earlier of—

''(i) the day on which a determination is made with respect to the eligibility of such individual for services under the State plan; or

''(ii) in the case of such an individual who does not file an application by the last day of the month following the month during which the entity makes the determination referred to in subparagraph (A), such last day.

''(2) QUALIFIED ENTITY.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the term 'qualified entity' means any entity that—

''(i) is eligible for payments under a State plan approved under this title; and

''(ii) is determined by the State agency to be capable of making determinations of the type described in paragraph (1)(A).

''(B) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may issue regulations further limiting those entities that may become qualified entities in order to prevent fraud and abuse and for other reasons.

''(C) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as preventing a State from limiting the classes of entities that may become qualified entities, consistent with any limitations imposed under subparagraph (B).

''(c) ADMINISTRATION.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The State agency shall provide qualified entities with—

''(A) such forms as are necessary for an application to be made by an individual described in subsection (a) for medical assistance under the State plan; and

''(B) information on how to assist such individuals in completing and filing such forms.

''(2) NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.—A qualified entity that determines under subsection (b)(1)(A) that an individual described in subsection (a) is presumptively eligible for medical assistance under a State plan shall—

''(A) notify the State agency of the determination within 5 working days after the date on which determination is made; and

''(B) inform such individual at the time the determination is made that an application for medical assistance under the State plan is required to be made by not later than the last day of the month following the month during which the determination is made.

''(3) APPLICATION FOR MEDICAL ASSISTANCE.—In the case of an individual described in subsection (a) who is determined by a qualified entity to be presumptively eligible for medical assistance under a State plan, the individual shall apply for medical assistance under such plan by not later than the last day of the month following the month during which the determination is made.

''(d) PAYMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, medical assistance that—

''(1) is furnished to an individual described in subsection (a)—

''(A) during a presumptive eligibility period;

''(B) by a entity that is eligible for payments under the State plan; and

''(2) is included in the care and services covered by the State plan, shall be treated as medical assistance provided by such plan for purposes of clause (4) of the first sentence of section 1905(b).''.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Section 1902(a)(47) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(47)) is amended by inserting before the semicolon at the end the following: ''and provide for making medical assistance available to individuals described in subsection (a) of section 1920B during a presumptive eligibility period in accordance with such section''.

(B) Section 1903(u)(1)(D)(v) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(u)(1)(D)(v)) is amended—

(i) by striking ''or for'' and inserting '', for''; and

(ii) by inserting before the period the following: '', or for medical assistance provided to an individual described in subsection (a) of section 1920B during a presumptive eligibility period under such section''.

(c) ENHANCED MATCH.—The first sentence of section 1905(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''and'' before ''(3)''; and

(2) by inserting before the period at the end the following: '', and (4) the Federal medical assistance percentage shall be equal to the enhanced FMAP described in section 2105(b) with respect to medical assistance provided to individuals who are eligible for such assistance only on the basis of section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii)(XVIII)''.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section apply to medical assistance for items and services furnished on or after October 1, 2000, without regard to whether final regulations to carry out such amendments have been promulgated by such date.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 628, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and insert extraneous material on H.R. 4386.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4386, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act of 2000. I commend the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) for her personal courage in the face of breast cancer and for her work in persuading the House leadership to bring this important bill to the floor today.

I also wish to recognize one of the original cosponsors of H.R. 4386, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO), for his many months of hard work on the Committee on Commerce persuading Members and forging alliances with the American Cancer Society, the National Women's Health Network, the National Cervical Cancer Coalition, the National Breast Cancer Coalition, the Cancer Research Foundation of America, and so many others, to make this day possible. His diligent work on H.R. 1070 laid the groundwork for this legislation. Mr. Speaker, I was joined on our Committee on Commerce by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), who persistently fought for progress on this bill.

Like so many women I have met over the last few years advocating for this legislation, I understand the fears that families face when they first hear that word. I have worked in Congress to help find ways to help more women from falling victim to cancer. In the closing days of the last session, the Committee on Commerce reported out H.R. 1070, the Lazio-Eshoo Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act of 1999. I am very pleased that we are now on the floor debating a bill based on the committee's work, which addresses both breast cancer, the leading cause of cancer deaths among women, and cervical cancer, cancer caused by the HPV viral infection that kills more women in America than HIV, the cause of AIDS.

I am deeply disappointed, as has been stated by others, that the other body stripped the House-passed amendments that would do so much to prevent cervical cancer. Perhaps this is a consequence of the outside lobbying groups that have been formed around breast cancer, leaving in the dust their sister organizations concerned about cervical cancer, and that is a shame.

Mr. Speaker, we need to do more about cervical cancer than pass resolutions increasing awareness about it. We need to take positive steps to prevent its occurrence in the first place through our public health agencies. Cervical cancer is 100 percent preventable, and I fear that if the House is not successful in addressing prevention, the families of the 5,000 women who will die of this disease this year will judge us for not taking action when we had the opportunity.

So, Mr. Speaker, while I am disappointed that the bill we consider today does not address prevention of cervical cancer, and I am not really sure why in the world we have refused to do that, but in any case I do believe that we should move forward on the underlying bill and address cervical cancer prevention in another piece of legislation.

□ 1515

H.R. 4386 will close a gap left open when the screening program was first created, and it represents an important step forward in the battle against breast and cervical cancer.

I urge my colleagues to support passage of this critical measure, which will give new hope to breast and cervical cancer patients in need as we continue the fight to find a cure for these terrible diseases.

Again, I thank the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), the gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. DANNER), the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), my Committee on Commerce colleagues, and many others who have contributed to bring this legislation to the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO) and the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) for their hard work on behalf of women screened under the CDC Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening Program.

H.R. 4386 has garnered tremendous support with some 318 cosponsors. In 1990, Congress passed the Breast and Cervical Cancer Mortality Prevention Act. That bill authorized funding for a national breast and cervical cancer screening program focusing on uninsured and underinsured women.

The program is federally-funded and locally operated. Simply put, it works.

My home State of Ohio set up 12 local screening sites, providing coverage for all of Ohio's 88 counties. Since the Ohio program's inception, 16,000 women have been screened for breast and cervical cancer. Cancer has been detected in more than 200 women.

Early detection alters the odds of successful treatment dramatically, restoring precious years otherwise lost to these devastating cancers. But, unfortunately, there is there is a catch. Early detection is a futile and ultimately cruel exercise if a cancer diagnosis does not trigger appropriate treatment. The two obviously go hand-in-hand.

The 1990 bill authorized funding for screening, but not for treatment. Instead, it calls on States to secure treatment for women diagnosed with cancer under the Federal screening program.

As it turns out, the onus of responsibility has fallen on the local screening programs. Staff at the screening programs and at the screening sites typically do two jobs. They arrange screenings. Then, when tragically necessary, they try to convince hospitals and doctors to provide free cancer care to patients, cobbling together any program, any services, any assistance, any help they can.

This is a labor-intensive hit or miss effort that places an immense burden on the screening programs, with no guarantee that women will receive care on a timely or a consistent basis. In a health care system shaped all too often now by the managed care industry, providers inevitably have less flexibility to offer their time and their services for free.

The Federal government invested $158 million to the breast and cervical cancer screening program in fiscal year 1999, yet we are only reaching 12 to 15 percent of the target population. When the women we have invested in are diagnosed with cancer, our commitment to them, unbelievably, ends.

CDC cancer screening resources should be used to provide cancer screening. Health care resources should be used for health care. That is where Medicaid comes in.

The title of the original authorization is the Breast and Cervical Cancer Mortality Prevention Act, but mortality prevention requires not just screening, but also treatment. H.R. 4386 fills that gap. It establishes a modest optional Medicaid benefit enabling the Federal government to contribute to the costs of providing proper care for these women.

By freeing up screening program resources, by eliminating the uncertainty around treatment for women screened under the CDC program, H.R. 4386 permits our Nation to achieve the full health potential promised in the Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening Program.

We need to fight breast and cervical cancer with every weapon available. Early detection, proper health care, are the strongest weapons we have. Because the Republicans changed a bad rule to a good rule, this bill will go straight to the President, not back to the Senate.

On this side of the aisle, we enthusiastically support this bill, as the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO) when she began the process did, and as all of us have joined her.

I urge my colleagues to support this very good legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and I want to thank the gentleman for his great work on this, and also commend the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) for her sponsorship of H.R. 4386, the Breast Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act.

Passage of H.R. 4386 would guarantee low-income uninsured women in this country treatment if they are diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer in the Federal screening program. Currently, as we know, many low-income and uninsured women are not receiving the treatment and medication they urgently need because they simply cannot afford it.

It is crucial that we pass this legislation and that we pass it today so that women across the country receive the lifesaving treatment that they so desperately deserve and need. Mr. Speaker, breast cancer is the most common cancer among women, other than skin cancer. It is the second leading cause of cancer death in women after lung cancer.

I would point out to my colleagues that my own cousin Sue, who was very, very close to me, fell victim to this disease several years ago. She was misdiagnosed. She went to her own doctor, who missed the signs. It was a matter of providential help that she walked into one of those mobile screening clinics and found out that that lump that she was so concerned about turned out to be cancer. Because of that, she got several years because she was able to at least get it treated. Had she known about it sooner, I do believe that my cousin Sue would be here today.

In like manner, my wife's mother died of breast cancer. That was more than 25 years ago. But she, too, went to a doctor, and had it missed because he missed the signs of what was taking place in her body. She passed prematurely while my wife was still in high school.

We all have cases. Every single one of us have a loved one who has been lost to this devastating disease. Hopefully, this kind of initiative will at least spare some the agony of this terrible cancer.

As my colleagues know, the American Cancer Society reports that there will be approximately 182,000 new cases of invasive breast cancer in the year 2000 among women in this country, resulting in about 40,800 deaths from this horrible disease.

It is imperative, Mr. Speaker, that Congress continues to expand research opportunities focusing on finding a cure, increasing early detection, and speeding access to treatment for breast cancer.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), who played a role in 1990 in writing the original Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I support this legislation. I want to commend my colleagues who have had a part in bringing this legislation to the floor today.

I want to pay tribute to my friend, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) for having withdrawn his amendment. That is going to make it possible for us to send it to the President for signature.

I want to commend my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. I commend the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), and the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO), for their leadership on it. We owe them a great debt.

More importantly, the people in the country owe gratitude to these Members and all of the others, some 318 of them, who worked to bring this legislation to the floor.

This is good legislation. Hardly a Member of this body, or indeed, a citizen walking down the street in this country, has not had his or her life touched by cancer, and hardly a citizen has not had a loved one who has had to confront this terrible disease.

Like most other, I can tell stories of people in my family that I have lost to this disease. It has left permanent scars on the family. It has left permanent scars on me and on a lot of others.

Having said that, this legislation is not only good, humane, important, but it is needed. Some years ago I was at a hospital in Michigan, a major hospital. And they say, Mr. DINGELL, ''There is good news.'' I said, ''I am glad to hear it. What is it?'' They said, ''We now are able to examine women under Medicaid to find out if they are at risk from cancer of the breast and of other parts of the body.'' They said, ''But there is bad news.'' I said, ''What is that?'' They said, ''We can screen them for cancer, but we cannot provide the necessary treatment under Medicaid to remove the cancer.''

I said ''That is like telling a woman that she has cancer, that is the good news, and the bad news is, she is going to die.'' I think that was intolerable then, and I am happy to note that the legislation before us addresses that problem. Women are now able to know when this bill is signed by the President, as it will be, that there will be treatment for those women who are in the low- and moderate-income groups so that they will not know that when they get a government analysis of their health and are tested for cancer, they are going to know they have cancer, but they also will know they are going to die.

The wonderful thing about this legislation is it is going to give lots of hope to Americans who have no other hope in the time when they have the greatest need, when they have cancer.

I applaud the legislation. It meets a tremendous need in our society. These women will now know that they can expect to have at least a fighting chance to have decent treatment, and know that they have a chance to live for themselves and for their families and for those who love them.

It is a humane, a necessary, a good piece of legislation. Mr. Speaker, I rejoice that the House is considering this legislation today. I support it, and I am delighted that the matter will now go to the President for signature, because it is an important and needed piece of legislation, and should go so as speedily and as rapidly and as efficiently as we can possibly get it there for the signature of the President, so the money can begin to be spent on a terrible need of women who have no other hope for surviving a terrible disease.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA), who is probably the largest proponent of women's issues in this House.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, who has been a great advocate for issues that affect women, children, and families, and this is certainly a case in point.

Mr. Speaker, October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Congress has an opportunity to do something now to help turn awareness into action by passing H.R. 4386, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act.

One out of every nine women will be diagnosed for having breast cancer. Just last Saturday I was in Boston, where the eldest child of my late brother was buried, having had breast cancer.

So we know that awareness is important as well as treatment being important, diagnosis, mammograms, personal checking by oneself, and certainly through the Centers for Disease Control and the prevention and early detection program.

The Senate passed the bill we are considering today unanimously last week. Women and their families across the country are really looking forward to this legislation finally being signed into law. Indeed, I want to applaud the many groups that have diligently worked very hard for this bill.

I also want to applaud the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO). I want to applaud the chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS), the ranking member, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) for the hard work they have put into this legislation.

The legislation is lifesaving. It has strong bipartisan support, a groundswell of support from the grass roots level. With passage of the Senate version of the bill, we will take the final step in a long process to guarantee low-income, uninsured women in this country the treatment they need when they are diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer through the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's early detection program.

I cannot imagine diagnosing and then not treating. This bill will do that. It will allow us treatment. Many of us have worked hard to get this bill passed. Let today be the day. We are going to pass this bill through the House, with the gentleman's leadership.

□ 1530

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time and for his hard work on this bill.

This is a great bipartisan moment in the House. The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) and the bipartisan Women's Caucus have worked together to make sure that this bill gets done this year.

Mr. Speaker, it is harder to get low-income women to take preventive steps. We know resources is one of the reasons; but the fact is we have to fight against advice, for example, on whether or not mammograms are harmful. We have to fight against the lack of education that middle-income women do not suffer from. But there is no greater deterrent than knowing that the information I find may be information I have to not only live with, but ultimately die with, because there is no treatment, no matter what we learn.

Mr. Speaker, this really raises moral and ethical issues, because if we detect but do not treat, what are we as a society doing and saying? We have made real progress on early detection in recent years. It is quite amazing progress.

For example, the majority of women in the District of Columbia probably now get a mammogram. D.C. offers free screening at 26 different sites, a program called WISH, Women Interested in Staying Healthy, that is pennywise and healthwise, because it saves money and saves lives, but not if there is no treatment. We are then defeating our own purpose.

Let me give you a painful example. The incidence of breast cancer among black women is significantly less than among white women, but the mortality rate among black women is much greater: 19.8 per 100,000 for white women, 26.5 for black women. Why? Of course, it is a combination of early diagnosis and no treatment, no early diagnosis and no treatment.

It is almost cruel to offer one without the other. If we continue to do this, it will throw us back on early detection, because we would be sending the message, don't come forward and scare yourself to death because we cannot do anything for you afterwards.

Mr. Speaker, we have made enormous progress on early diagnosis of cervical cancer and breast cancer. Now we are making great progress on curing them.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN), who has been very, very involved in this issue in his 6 years in the House.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS), the chairman, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN), the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Health and Environment, for getting this bill brought to the floor, and, in particular, in moving to concur in the action by the other body so this bill can be sent directly to the President and be enacted this month, which is in fact Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Mr. Speaker, this measure would provide critical Medicare for low- and moderate-income working women who have been diagnosed with breast and cervical cancer.

Under a 1990 law, low- and moderate-income women are eligible for screening for both breast cancer and cervical cancer through the Centers for Disease Control and Early Prevention early detection program. This has served more than a million women and diagnosed more than 30,000 women with cancer or precancerous conditions. However, it is unconscionable that we would help these women get the screenings they need to discover these cancers, but not provide any ability for follow-up care.

The diagnosis of breast or cervical cancer should not be a notice of a death sentence to a working woman who has no insurance.

Mr. Speaker, under current law, treatment is available only for a small percentage of these diagnosed women, those who are eligible under the TANF programs or under the supplemental security income program for disability. As a result, many of these 30,000 low- and moderate-income women who have been diagnosed simply delay treatment because they cannot afford it or because they make too much money to qualify for Medicaid.

This bill would correct this inequity by giving States the option to expand Medicaid coverage for these women who have no health insurance.

Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased that the bill is structured to encourage the States to immediately expand their Medicaid coverage program for women. Under the bill, States would receive an average of 68 percent of the cost share by the Federal Government and they would be responsible for 32 percent. This is much higher than the basic Medicaid rate for many States, including my State of Texas, where the average rate of the Federal Government is 61 percent. And I hope it would encourage the State to move quickly.

Earlier this year, I met a young women, Ms. Barbara Marsh, who is receiving treatment in a clinic, the Rose, which is located in my district and who would benefit from this program. Ms. Marsh of Humble, Texas, was diagnosed with breast cancer and is a self-employed dance instructor. At the age of 32, Barbara discovered a lump in her breast and was treated for breast cancer through the public health system. However, because she owns her own dance studio, which is considered to be an asset, she was required to pay the $26,000 for her medical treatments.

Mr. Speaker, unable to afford these high bills, Ms. Marsh did not seek any additional follow-up treatment until August of 1999 when her breast cancer had advanced to Stage 3. If Barbara had health insurance, she would have had access to follow-up care and treatment and may have discovered this disease in a much earlier stage. But because she is self-employed and does not have any health insurance, she suffered.

This legislation would ensure that Ms. Marsh and thousands of women like her across America will have access to cutting-edge treatments that can save their lives. In a Nation with the greatest health and research assets and facilities in the world, no one should suffer the risk of death due to cancer for lack of access to such assets.

I congratulate the sponsors of this bill. I am proud to be a cosponsor of the initial House bill, and I look forward to its passage and its enactment into law.

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act.

Nearly 40,000 low-income women have been diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer or pre-cancerous lesions since the National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program was established one decade ago. For many of them, the pain of learning they have a devastating illness is exacerbated by the fact that they cannot afford the treatment they know they need.

I do not want this Congress to have to tell another woman that yes, you have this disease, but no, there is nothing we can do to help you fight it.

This bill allows us to help these women by providing coverage for the treatment they need. It is common-sense legislation, and the overwhelming consensus with which it passed in the House and in the Senate is proof of that fact. Today, we have an opportunity to again show our overwhelming support for the Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act.

I would like to take a moment to thank the Speaker of the House for his commitment to moving this bill through all the procedural hurdles it has faced. He promised women that the House would pass this bill before Mother's Day, and he did. He promised them we would take it up again before adjourning, and we are.

Mr. Speaker, I am hopeful that this bill will move swiftly from our halls to the President's desk and become law. The women who will be diagnosed through this program deserve nothing less than prompt action by the President. I urge my colleagues to vote yes on this critical bill.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4386 and urge my colleagues to pass this important legislation.

I am grateful for the strong bipartisan support this legislation has received and I am proud to support this bill again so it can be forwarded to the President for signing and passage.

Mr. Speaker, passing this bill is critical for all Americans, but it is especially critical for families in my home State of New Jersey where breast cancer death rates are the highest in the nation. The program served women with incomes that are low but above the eligibility of Medicaid.

Ten years ago this Congress established a screening program to prevent and detect breast and cervical cancer to be administered under the auspices of the Centers for Disease Control (CDC).

In my home State of New Jersey, 20,000 women have been screened for breast cancer under the CDC program since 1996, and 16,000 have been screened for cervical cancer. Nationwide, over 200,000 women received mammograms under the CDC program in 1997 alone.

But until now, the program has not assured those women unfortunate enough to be diagnosed with either of these diseases that they would receive coverage and treatment, because, while they were uninsured, they had income above the limit set by State Medicaid programs. Too many of these women were left without hope. This was a great travesty.

Mr. Speaker, we must do more than just diagnose the problem. We must take the next step to ensure treatment for those without health insurance and pass this important legislation.

Thanks to this bill these women will now be eligible for Medicaid coverage should they be diagnosed with either of these diseases. This bill will save lives.

I know that many here in this Congress have been working hard to see this discrepancy addressed. I applaud their efforts and I am glad that we are finally having a chance to pass this much-needed legislation this year.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act. I first want to commend my colleague Representative ANNA ESHOO for her hard work on this important bill. She has been a great leader in this effort for many years. In addition, I also commend Representative SLAUGHTER and my colleagues in the women's caucus for their work to ensure that we have the opportunity to vote on a clean bill that will make it to the President's desk.

We all agree that Americans should be educated and informed about HPV, and all other sexually transmitted diseases. However, passage of this important legislation to help uninsured women beat back the ravages of breast and cervical cancer is vital, and it would have been a tragedy to jeopardize its success by including language unacceptable to the Senate.

Every year, Cervical cancer kills 4,400 women and breast cancer, the leading cause of death among women between 40 and 45, kills over 46,000 women. This bill builds on the CDC's National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program which covers screening services, but does not cover treatment for women who are detected with cancer. The Breast and Cervical Cancer Protection and Treatment Act takes the vital next step to offer lifesaving treatment to cancer victims.

Early detection of breast and cervical cancer saves lives. According to the CDC, approximately 15 to 30 percent of all deaths from breast cancer among women over the age of 40 and virtually all deaths from cervical cancer could have been prevented with early screening and treatment.

Unfortunately, many of the women diagnosed through the CDC screening program do not receive the care they need because they lack adequate health insurance. Uninsured women with breast and cervical cancer face significant barriers to receiving lifesaving treatment. Women who are uninsured are 40 percent more likely to die from breast cancer than those with insurance. Not only are these women likely to be screened, but the scope of treatment they receive is often limited by their ability to pay.

The Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment and Prevention Act would provide states with the option to provide the full Medicaid benefit package without delay to uninsured women diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer through the CDC screening program. As a result, thousands of low-income women would have access to consistent, reliable treatment.

I urge my colleagues to vote yes on this bill.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am honored today to join my colleagues in support of H.R. 4386, The Breast and Cervical Cancer Treatment Act. I am pleased that the Republican leadership has withdrawn the Coburn Amendment, which will allow this bill to pass the house today.

This year, more than 200,000 American women will be diagnosed with breast and cervical cancer. These women are our mothers, our grandmothers, our sisters, our colleagues and our friends.

In 1990, Congress took the first step toward the fight against breast and cervical cancer by passing the Breast and Cervical Cancer Mortality Prevention Act. This law authorized a breast and cervical cancer-screening program for low income, uninsured or underinsured women through the Center for Disease Control (CDC). Since its inception, the program has screened more than 500,000 women. Unfortunately, that is not enough. This program fails to provide any federal resources to pay for treatment once women are diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer.

H.R. 4386, The Breast and Cervical Treatment Act is a bipartisan piece of legislation which would provide Medicaid assistance to treat low-income, uninsured or underinsured women diagnosed breast or cervical cancer. Under this bill, the low income, uninsured or underinsured women diagnosed under the CDC Program will now receive the necessary treatment they need and deserve.

In the last decade we have made great strides in fighting against breast and cervical cancers. I am pleased to support this bill because the passage of this legislation today will give many women who were once hopeless a fighting chance to survive this terrible disease.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I urge a yes vote, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebreska). All time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to House Resolution 628, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS).

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CORRECTIONS IN ENROLLMENT OF H.R. 5164, TRANSPORTATION RECALL ENHANCEMENT, ACCOUNTABILITY, AND DOCUMENTATION (TREAD) ACT

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 428), providing for corrections in the enrollment of the bill (H.R. 5164) amending title 49, United States Code, to require reports concerning defects in motor vehicles or tires or other motor vehicle equipment in foreign countries, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 428

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in the enrollment of the bill, H.R. 5164, entitled ''An Act to amend title 49, United States Code, to require reports concerning defects in motor vehicles or tires or other motor vehicle equipment in foreign countries, and for other purposes'', the Clerk of the House of Representatives shall make the following corrections in section 6:

(1) insert before ''Section 30120(c)'' the following: ''(a) REMEDY PROGRAM.—''; and

(2) insert at the end of section 6 the following:

''(b) REIMBURSEMENT PRIOR TO RECALL.—Section 30120(d) of title 49, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following: ''A manufacturer's remedy program shall include a plan for reimbursing an owner or purchaser who incurred the cost of the remedy within a reasonable time in advance of the manufacturer's notification under subsection (b) or (c) of section 30118. The Secretary may prescribe regulations establishing what constitutes a reasonable time for purposes of the preceding sentence and other reasonable conditions for the reimbursement plan.''.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, This concurrent resolution authorizes the Clerk of the House to correct the enrollment of the bill, H.R. 5164, the TREAD Act. This legislation passed both the House and Senate without opposition yesterday.

Due to an inadvertent drafting error, a paragraph of the amendment offered by Mr. LUTHER in committee was deleted from the bill reported to the House, and left out of the bill subsequently passed by both the House and Senate. This provision, which addressed the reimbursement for repairs made prior to a recall, enjoyed broad bipartisan support and was always assumed to be part of the package passed by the House.

This concurrent resolution simply corrects this error, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and insert extraneous material on H. Con. Res. 428.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4392, INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2001

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 626, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 626

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 4392) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, this rules provides for the consideration of the conference report on H.R. 4392, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001. The rule waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration.

Further, the rule provides that the conference report shall be considered as read. This is the standard approach for conference reports, and this is a noncontroversial rule.

I urge all of my colleagues to support it. In addition, I strongly encourage my colleagues to support the conference report itself. While we will discuss the substance of the conference report during the general debate, this bill is extremely critical in terms of making sure our intelligence agencies have the capabilities needed to protect the United States and the lives of American citizens at home and abroad.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this rule allows for the consideration of the fiscal year 2001 intelligence conference report. This conference agreement is, in the main, not controversial. There is, however, concern about title VII of the conference agreement, which creates a new Public Interest Disclosure Act.

Mr. Speaker, as Members know, detailed information about the provisions contained in authorizations for the intelligence activities are for the most part classified. It is my understanding that there is little disagreement on the part of the House managers on the provisions of the conference agreement contained either in the statement of managers or in the classified annex. However, title VII, the new Public Interest Declassification Act, sets forth standards governing access to and protection of national security information and creates a new set of penalties relating to disclosure of classified information.

Both the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman HYDE) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), the ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary, have expressed their grave reservations about these provisions and their implications on first amendment rights. Both the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman HYDE) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) have said that they should not become law without full public hearings. However, since the Senate has already acted on this conference agreement, a motion to recommit the agreement to the conference has been precluded.

I would hope in the next Congress, the Committee on the Judiciary, in cooperation with the Select Committee on Intelligence will thoroughly examine these issues and, if necessary, make remedial changes to the provisions now found in title VII of the conference agreement.

Mr. Speaker, in the meantime, I urge Members to support this rule so that the House may proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider is laid on the table.

□ 1545

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 626, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4392) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). Pursuant to House Resolution 626, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of October 11, 2000 at page H9709.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS).

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to present the conference report on the Fiscal Year 2001 Intelligence Authorization bill. I believe that hard work and careful deliberation has produced a first-rate bill that funds the critically important work of our intelligence community, and we are all reminded today just how critical that work is.

As has been the long-standing custom of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, this conference report is a bipartisan product which reflects credit on our committee's members and its very highly professional staff, and I want to thank all involved.

This conference report authorizes funds for fiscal year 2001 intelligence-related activities, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System. I just wanted to take a moment to highlight several provisions of the conference report for the consideration of Members.

First, this conference report, I am happy to announce, includes Senator MOYNIHAN's ''Public Interest Declassification Act of 2000.'' This legislation is an important first step in regaining control and putting some order to the government's declassification process, a subject of great interest to many Members. I want to commend Senator MOYNIHAN for his tireless work to encourage the appropriate and timely declassification of appropriate U.S. Government records.

Another initiative of note is language addressing the serious problem of leaks of classified information by U.S. Government officials. Mr. Speaker, leaking classified government information is not a right or a privilege of U.S. officials or employees who have access to that information. Too often over the past few years, we have significantly risked, and sometimes lost, fragile intelligence resources because those employed by the government and who have access to classified information have chosen to leak that information and, thus, have ignored their commitments to national security. Damage has been done.

The provision in this conference report simply states that, if one is a current or former government employee who had access to classified material that one has promised to protect, that one must live up to those obligations. If one does not, then one is going to be held accountable.

The provision is narrowly crafted to protect the rights that all Americans hold dear. It is not, as some will say, an affront to the first amendment. In fact, the Justice Department has reviewed the provision and finds no constitutional infirmity. They even support the provision. The committee has looked carefully at this provision. As George Tenet, the Director of Central Intelligence, has stated, ''the administration leaks like a sieve.'' This must stop.

Mr. Speaker, although I expect some discussion about the provision I just mentioned, I do not want Members to lose sight of a key and important fact. Today's activities in the Middle East speak volumes, sad volumes, I am afraid to say, to the type of world that we now live in. The apparent attack on the U.S.S. Cole and the violence in Israel and Palestine are terrible reminders of how fragile our national security can be.

The only way to be ready to face the threats to our security, and that is the security of all Americans at home and abroad, is by having a vibrant first line of defense that provides indications and warning, and that is our intelligence community. This conference report directly helps to rebuild resources that were cut after the Cold War and ensures the protection of our rights and liberties now and in the future. It is carefully crafted.

Before I close, I want to mention one other important point. With the conclusion of this Congress, the committee will lose the talents of several valued Members who have either served out their terms on the committee or who have chosen to seek other opportunities.

The gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), our esteemed vice chairman, who also serves this body as the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on appropriations will rotate off the committee.

The gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) has been a tireless supporter of the committee and of the intelligence community. His insights and his opinions have been invaluable to me and to the committee. He has also been instrumental in ensuring that his subcommittee and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence work very closely together, which has benefitted this House in many ways. I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), and all Americans thank him for the work he has done.

In addition, I would like to recognize two other Members who will not be with the committee next year: the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI). They have each contributed in an important way to the committee's work, and we on the committee shall certainly miss them.

Also, I would be remiss if I did not mention the excellent work by staff on both sides of the aisle, and I say that from my heart. Their efforts have allowed for us to be here today with a good bipartisan product on a critical subject.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good and important piece of legislation. I urge my colleagues to support its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this conference report, and because of a scheduling problem, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BISHOP), a very valuable Member of our committee.

Mr. BISHOP. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I want to thank the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. DIXON), the ranking member, and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), the chairman, for the outstanding work that they have done and also the work of the staff which is so invaluable in helping us to come up with this work product.

Mr. Speaker, months ago, during the debate on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence's reported authorization bill, I highlighted several very positive features of the bill and applauded the bipartisanship and the excellent cooperation in the work of the committee under the leadership of the chairman and the ranking member.

I am pleased to note that this conference report sustains the important initiatives and actions recommended in the House bill. This outcome, too, is testament to the sound judgment and hard work of the committee leadership and, indeed, of all my colleagues on the committee.

During our meetings with the Senate, and our discussions with the administration, concern arose over a House proposal to require the National Reconnaissance Office to contract separately from the Air Force for the large rockets that carry our reconnaissance satellites into orbit.

The House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence adopted this proposal after substantial investigations and hearings following the disturbing and costly string of launch failures and after several years of unjustified volatility in the NRO's launch budget.

The Subcommittee on Tactical and Technical Intelligence, on which I serve as ranking member, concluded that there would be greater accountability and sounder fiscal management if the NRO were assigned clearer responsibility for this aspect of its overall mission.

At the same time, I appreciate the concerns that this step could contribute to deterioration of the partnership between the Air Force and the NRO in managing U.S. national security space launch programs.

In this regard, I would cite the clear guidance in the statement of managers that we expect the NRO and the Air Force to continue working closely together, including negotiating contracts with industry together to ensure favorable prices.

I would add also that I expect the NRO's contract awards to provide appropriate support to DoD's policy of maintaining a competitive space launch industrial base. The NRO and the Air Force are of course subject to higher management authority, and the NRO director himself an Assistant Secretary of the Air Force. I would expect that DoD management could check any harmful centrifugal forces in the NRO-Air Force relationship.

Mr. Speaker, I will conclude by applauding the vigorous steps contained in the conference report to overcome serious management and resource problems at the National Security Agency and to improve the ability of the National Imagery and Mapping Agency to exploit and distribute imagery collected by satellites and aircraft. These agencies and their respective missions remain absolutely critical to diplomacy and military preparedness.

I think it is a great conference report. I think we are moving forward. I urge my colleagues and the House to adopt it. I think the committee has done a good job, and we have served our colleagues and the country well.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me begin by complimenting the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), our chairman, for his hard work and his dedication, as reflected in this conference report, to meeting the needs of the men and women who produce the intelligence on which policy makers and military commanders rely.

As adopted by the House, the intelligence authorization was one-tenth of one percent above the President's request. This conference report is below the House bill and two-tenths of one percent below the request. The primary reason for the reduction is that some of the items authorized in the House bill were funded several months ago in a supplemental appropriations measure.

The conference report, as did the supplemental appropriation bill, supports the transformation initiative that the Director of the National Security Agency, General Michael Hayden, has begun to implement. It is critical to the security of the United States that NSA be modernized.

General Hayden has developed a plan, which the committee generally supports. The modernization of NSA will not succeed, however, without the sustained, visible support of the most senior leaders of the Department of Defense and the intelligence community. To date, in terms of resource allocation, I have not seen evidence that the rebuilding of NSA is a top priority of the executive branch. I hope that this changes next year.

One of the shortcomings in the intelligence community, in my view, is that there is too much emphasis on collection and not enough on making sure that which is collected can be used. If it were possible to collect only important information, this imbalance would be inconsequential.

Our national technical means, however, collect volumes of information that must be analyzed to identify what is important, put in a usable form, and sent to those who need it.

Last year, Congress made clear its expectation that the new Future Imagery Architecture (FIA) would be an adequate balance between collection activities and TPED or tasking, processing, exploitation and dissemination activities. Congress was clear in the description of the consequences that would flow from an executive branch decision not to make TPED investments sufficient to utilize fully the collection capabilities of FIA. As the classified annex to this conference report makes clear, the resolve of Congress on this issue has not changed.

The conference agreement amends the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) and the criminal code in ways that deserve some comment.

□ 1600

Among other things, the FISA amendments make clear that, in making a probable cause determination that a target was an agent of a foreign power, the court may consider past activities of the target. I am advised that the target's past activities have regularly been part of a probable cause determination. In this respect, the amendment represents a codification of current practice.

There have been suggestions that the amendment is needed to ensure that information once excluded from the probable cause determination merely because it was dated will now be considered. I believe that this is an incorrect interpretation of both the current practice and the effect of the amendment. Those facts which are relevant to determining the probability that a target is currently an agent of a foreign power should be considered. Those facts that are irrelevant, regardless of whether they are fresh or stale, should not be considered.

Section 304 makes the unauthorized disclosure of properly classified information acquired by a person who has, or had, authorized access to the information a felony, subject to 3 years imprisonment, when the disclosure is made willingly and knowingly to a person known not to have authorized access. I disapprove of the practice by which some individuals entrusted with access to classified information leak that information to unauthorized recipients, including members of the media. I share the frustration of those who open their daily newspapers only to see in print some of the most sensitive information in our government's possession. I have, however, grave concerns about the reach and the scope of section 304.

There are currently a variety of statutory and administrative prohibitions on the authorized disclosure of classified information. The fact that more leakers are not punished is not, and I stress is not, the result of too few prohibitions, it is the result of the great difficulty inherent in identifying the leakers. Section 304 adds another prohibition, unwisely in my judgment. It will not make it easier to identify the source of a leak.

Before our conference began, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and I received a letter from the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary urging the rejection of this provision. In their letter the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) noted that by making all leaks subject to criminal penalties the provision ''has profound First Amendment implications and goes to the very heart of the ability of the public to remain informed about matters of critical public interest which often relate to governmental misdeeds.''

In conference, I offered an amendment to narrow the definition of classified information under section 304 to make sure that only leaks of information of substantial sensitivity would be punished under this provision. Other leaks would continue to be punishable under other statutes or administrative procedures. Although my amendment was approved by the House conferees, the Senate rejected it. I hope that in the next Congress the Committee on the Judiciary, in whose jurisdiction the issues raised by section 304 properly reside, will carefully examine the provision.

Last year's intelligence authorization act established a commission to examine the judicial review questions raised by the Foreign Narcotics Kingpin Designation Act. The commission was given one year from the date of enactment to review the current judicial, regulatory, and administrative authorities under which the United States blocks assets of foreign persons, and to provide a detailed constitutional examination and evaluation of remedies available to United States persons affected by the blocking of assets of foreign persons.

I had hoped that the commission might have completed its work in less than a year because of the great importance I attach to the resolution of the due process concerns raised by the drug kingpin legislation. Although it now appears the commission will need all of the time allocated, I look forward to its report and hope that it is dispositive of these concerns.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to advise the House that two of our very constructive and important Members have served their eight year terms on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. The gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), conclude their terms of service this year. I want to thank them for their many contributions to the committee's work over the past eight years. Their enthusiasm, insight, and perspective will be sorely missed.

I urge the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE), the chairman of our Subcommittee on Technical and Tactical Intelligence.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I rise in strong support of the conference report for the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 2001.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and the ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), are to be commended for the outstanding leadership they have provided to the intelligence community during these difficult times.

I would also like to recognize the efforts of our distinguished vice chairman, the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), who will be rotating off our committee under our rules. His insights into the technical and distinctly military programs within the intelligence community have been very helpful for me in understanding our future needs. Likewise, as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations, his explanations of the resource challenges facing the community are invaluable. I thank him for his service to our Nation's security.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on Technical and Tactical Intelligence, I understand the critical need to invest in and modernize our technical intelligence systems. Although the investment in our intelligence community's infrastructure had declined over the years, and the strains were clearly showing through, we have responded in the past 6 years by making some very difficult but sound choices to ensure there are adequate future technical resources. This year's conference report continues to address some very substantial problems, but this is still only a beginning. We understand that providing the country with the capabilities it deserves and needs will take years and will require continued support from Congress.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report also provides our senior policymakers with sufficient capabilities and tools to advance our foreign policy, to enable strong leadership and proactive diplomacy, and to improve our military's advantage over its adversaries, if and when needed.

I am also pleased that we have incorporated a provision into this year's conference report to address a concern related to the National Reconnaissance Office and its launch program. This was the outcome of a series of meetings, briefings, and hearings for which I personally devoted a great deal of time. This provision has many benefits. One, it will improve the NROs and our ability to have insight and perform oversight into contracting launch services; two, it will allow us to hold the NROs more accountable for their activities; and, three, it could lead to significant savings for the government and American people.

I want to address an issue that has been raised regarding this important provision, and I want to make something very clear. There is nothing in this provision that precludes the Air Force and the NRO from continuing to work in a very close partnership. This includes continuing cooperation on the wide range of launch service activities and facilities that they share, as well as continuing potential block purchases for launch vehicles if the NRO believes this is in the best interest of the government.

Now, however, with this provision, the NRO will have insight into and better control of launch contracts that have not been there before. We expect that this added responsibility will ultimately result in a stronger partnership between these two organizations. It will certainly provide better budgeting of scarce intelligence resources.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report for the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 2001 is a responsible, reasonable, and appropriate request to fund our Nation's national security needs. The President, our policymakers, our military, and the people of the United States deserve nothing less. I ask the Members of the House to give it their full support.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise as a member of the committee whose 8-year term is coming to an end there. At this time I would like to commend our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), for his leadership, his fairness, and his willingness to listen to another point of view on the committee over these years. I thank him.

And to our ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), we are also very proud of his service. As a Californian, I am particularly proud of his service as ranking member on the committee, and I hope to see him serve as chair in a very short time on this very important committee.

I would also like to commend the staff, I would say on both sides, but I really view it as a unified staff of the committee, who have served the Members so well and, in doing so, the community that we have oversight over.

Mr. Speaker, I have been impressed with the dedication and hard work of the men and women who work in the Nation's intelligence agencies and the amazing feats they can accomplish. They often provide our policymakers a decisive advantage in accomplishing our Nation's policy goals and national defense goals.

While I have been a member of the committee, I have been especially concerned about the issue of proliferation and how well the United States tracks and then prevents weapons proliferation, particularly weapons of mass destruction. I have often been dismayed how clear our evidence on proliferation can be and how slow our diplomatic response has been. We need to maintain a robust intelligence effort on proliferation, and the issue needs continued attention and oversight in the future.

I have also been deeply concerned over how counterintelligence investigations have been handled. I reject the notion that one American citizen is more likely to engage in espionage than another because of his or her particular ethnic background. We are a proud Nation strengthened by our immigration, and the rights of all our citizens must be respected.

Mr. Speaker, secrecy is, of course, one necessary element in the conduct of intelligence. Information that is necessary for us to counter proliferation, terrorism, and espionage often must be obtained secretly; and thus our sensitive sources and methods must be protected. Let us stipulate to that. We all want to protect our sources and methods. Yet I am concerned that the public interest is too often thwarted by too much classification of information and by maintaining classification for too long.

Last year, there were over 8 million classification actions; 10 percent more than the year before. Clearly, the system is not perfect; but even so, we were all troubled by leaks and by the damage they can cause. Nevertheless, I am strongly opposed to the section of this legislation that would for the first time in our history enact an official secrets law.

We have to remember that those who violate the rules on handling classified information should be and are punished administratively. It is already a felony to disclose national defense information to foreign nations or their agents in order to injure the United States. Other felony laws protect specifically defined, especially sensitive categories of information. The Intelligence Authorization Act, on the other hand, the bill before us today, would make it a felony for officers or employees of the government to knowingly disclose classified information broadly defined without the government even having to prove any damage to national security.

In our briefing, I was convinced by the presentation that this ''officers or employees of the government'' includes Members of Congress. By the actions taken in this bill, Members of Congress will be subject to criminal charges if this category of properly classified information is revealed by them. Make no mistake, this provision marks the first time that Congress has placed the full force of criminal law behind the executive branch's classification system. The current Executive Order on classification of information at least has the virtue of specifically prohibiting classification of information in order to conceal violations of law, inefficiency or administrative error, or to prevent embarrassment to the government.

But the next President of the United States could change this prohibition and this leaks law would still be on the books. The Congress is foolish in my view, and that is a word I have never used here on the floor, to give a blank check to the executive branch for prosecutions in this important area.

I understand that the authors of the provision intend for it not to be used to target the President, but I see nothing to prevent reporters from being hauled in before grand juries and being forced to reveal their sources.

Furthermore, we do not each know how this leaks law would interact with criminal laws on conspiracy aiding and abetting solicitation and the like.

The Committee on the Judiciary should examine issues such as these and the impact on the first amendment issues before the Congress adopts such important legislation. We should remember how difficult it has been in our Nation's history to challenge official versions of the facts when it comes to national security matters, even for Members of Congress.

We all know that those outside powers are running a greater risk of prosecution under this statute than those on the inside. I do not think that this provision in the bill is in our national interest, and that is why I was not able to sign the conference report on this important legislation.

Again, I commend the distinguished chairman of the committee, the distinguished ranking member, and the marvelous staff for their service to the committee.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), a senior member of the committee.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report builds on the substantial work done in last year's authorization bill to institutionalize the use of competitive alternative analytical techniques by the Central Intelligence Agency. This action is intended to further guard against intelligence surprises and analytic complacency or ''group think,'' while better preparing policy-making intelligence consumers to deal with the complexities of the post-Cold War international security environment.

Furthermore, the conference report provides the means to modernize the production mechanisms used by the CIA's Director of Intelligence to produce and disseminate its invaluable finished intelligence products in a more timely and secure manner. By promoting greater analytical interaction and timeliness, the conference report helps to ensure that intelligence consumers have the full range of tools necessary to make informed policy before the swiftest of events force them into a defensive crisis management posture, as too often has occurred in recent years.

I would like to mention that the committee has worked through this conference report, as we did in last year's report, to address the problem of the chronic shortage of trained expert linguists available to the intelligence community to exploit what is being clandestinely corrected.

Moreover, we have taken steps to promote greater interoperability between intelligence analysts of different agencies to further create synergies that will improve the quality of intelligence reporting.

Finally, I am pleased to note that this conference report will help the intelligence community to standardize and automate self-evaluative tools for promoting greater interaction between those who collect intelligence and those who determine its meaning and significance. In this way, collectors will be able to determine the value of what they are acquiring, and in instances where it is not so valuable, they can adjust their collection focus accordingly.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), the ranking member, for their leadership.

I urge adoption of this conference report.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER), a distinguished member of our committee.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend from the State of California (Mr. DIXON), the ranking member, for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to associate myself with the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) and again our ranking member for the hard work they put in on this bill all year long, not just on the conference report.

I also want to say that they really strive hard to create an atmosphere of bipartisanship on that committee, and I salute them for their hard work with that, and also for the excellent professionalism we have on our staff.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Fiscal Year 2001 Intelligence Authorization Act. Although this conference report represents a funding level slightly below the President's request, I believe that it nevertheless sets about the right level of overall funding for intelligence activities next year.

I am pleased that the conferees have adopted language that urges the administration to submit requests to Congress for reallocation of funds to important initiatives, including language training and counterterrorism efforts.

During my travels in various Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence hearings, administration officials have expressed concern about the state of language capabilities of intelligence community personnel. I have found that all too often there are not enough people speaking the language native to the country in which they serve and too many of those who are not sufficiently proficient in that language.

I firmly believe that language proficiency is critical to the core mission of the intelligence community. Collectors, processors, and analyzers must have sufficient linguistic skills to meet the challenges posed by global targets.

I have, therefore, advocated relentlessly for the sufficient funding of language related initiatives. I am pleased that our actions will allow those men and women on the intelligence front line to have the language training and related resources needed to effectively do their jobs. We must continue on this mission.

Finally, the conference report sends a message that defeating terrorism is important to this Congress. Earlier this year, I met with the deputy director of Central Intelligence and discussed the challenges posed by international terrorists. One thing was clear from that meeting, as well as from oversight and legislative hearings. The United States must have a robust counterterrorism program.

I am pleased that the conferees have chosen to fully fund the President's request for counterterrorism activities. We would welcome proposals for the reallocation of funds to efforts in this critical area.

I again thank the chairman and the ranking member.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS), a man who keeps our budget check working carefully for the committee.

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report for the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001.

There are many important aspects of this report, but I thought I would use my time to address a concern to all of us, especially today, the scourge of terrorism.

The bombings of our embassies in Kenya and Tanzania brought the Usama Bin Laden organization to the forefront of terrorist threats to U.S. interests, although numerous other terrorist groups continue to plague us and put American citizens at risk.

Now, just this morning, we learned of what appears to have been a very tragic attack on an American destroyer, the U.S.S. Cole, off Yemen that has resulted in the loss of American lives. The committee, together with its counterpart in the other body, understands the critical need to be able to fight back. The Cole incident yet again, Mr. Speaker, reminds us of the importance of good intelligence in preventing these kinds of crises and, as in the case of this one, bringing the perpetrators to justice.

The Intelligence Oversight committees are charged, among other things, with overseeing the budgets, programs, and activities of the various counterterrorism elements of the intelligence committee. And I submit, Mr. Speaker, that our ability to fight back and, more importantly, to prevent terrorist attacks from occurring at all is robust and growing. But these capabilities, especially those involving the prevention mission, need constant attention, as the Cole incident reminds us.

The millennium celebrations around the world, which are a time of great risk for us all, proved that our counterterrorism professionals were ready and able to protect and defend. I am proud to say, Mr. Speaker, that the intelligence community has time and time again saved lives and secured the interests of Americans and their allies. This arduous task consumes a significant amount of limited resources, but I would find it hard to believe that any responsible person could deny that this is money well spent.

We on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence are dedicated to ensuring that the intelligence community has adequate resources and is well prepared to phase down the Usama Bin Ladens of this world.

While we are satisfied that the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence has generally performed well against the terrorist target, we have learned through the course of our normal oversight work that much more can and needs to be done, especially as terrorists attempt to acquire chemical and biological weapons to pursue their shameful war against society. This conference report will enhance our ability to defend ourselves against terrorists through a variety of means.

I just want to say that our chairman and ranking minority member have done a wonderful job leading this committee in a bipartisan fashion and I want to thank them for their efforts. I urge adoption of this conference committee report.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS), our connection to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this conference report.

I would first like to commend the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) for his stewardship through the process. I would also like to recognize the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), the ranking member, for his contributions to the committee's efforts as well.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report provides very important investments for the intelligence community, including enhancements in many areas that are of specific interest to the military. I wish we could do more, especially given the ever-increasing requirements that are being placed on intelligence to protect our troops who have been sent all over the world for every sort of mission.

One of the most important issues facing the intelligence community is the modernization of the National Security Agency. This agency, which supplies signal intelligence to all levels of government, from the most senior policymaker to the pilot in the cockpit, is in many ways the linchpin of our warning capability. But today, this agency is about to be overtaken by technology and by potential adversaries who are increasingly sophisticated.

The NSA, in response, is undergoing a unique transition, the success of which will affect the overall capabilities of the intelligence community for the next several decades. The Director of Central Intelligence has made the modernization of NSA his number one priority.

The good news is that the NSA director, Lieutenant General Mike Hayden, is committed to leading his agency to overcome the modernization challenge. Those challenges are great. They involve overhauling every aspect of the NSA, from technical collection capabilities, to acquisition programs and personnel structure.

General Hayden must be successful. But in order to make the needed changes, he needs certain tools. Perhaps the most critical tool is the ability to move the right people into key positions in the Agency to affect change. Because of the unique and serious situation at NSA, I am pleased that this conference report gives the NSA director that ability through the NSA Voluntary Separation Act. This provision permits the establishment of an early retirement and voluntary separation program for all NSA employees, including the most senior levels of management. With this authority, it is anticipated that the director will be able to accomplish the personnel changes and management changes necessary to see the process of NSA modernization through to completion. General Hayden has our support in these efforts.

I urge all my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), the distinguished ranking member of the House Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member of the committee (Mr. DIXON) for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to be here to find out if anybody ever got the letter that me and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) sent to the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) about the fact that criminal matters fall under title 18 of the U.S. Code and is within the total jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. Did anybody ever find out about that letter?

Well, we were trying to get some jurisdiction for this part of the bill that deals with making it a felony for a Government employee to disclose any and all information that the Government says is classified.

The history of this provision, I say to members of the committee, is that it was dropped quietly into a Senate version and has never had hearings in the House or the Senate, no hearings on a provision that has the exclusive jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. And we did not even get a response from the letter that the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary sent the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS).

And so, why are we doing this?

□ 1630

There are a number of theories about this. Members may find out by examining what would have happened had this been the law for the last 30 years:

One, the scope of the government's activities in Vietnam through the Pentagon papers would have resulted in prosecutions.

Two, the CIA's complicity in the overthrow of Salvador Allende in Chile.

Three, the Nixon administration's support of Pakistan in its 1971 war with India.

Four, the revelations about spying at U.S. laboratories.

Five, China's alleged military involvement with Pakistan and North Korea.

Six, basic information regarding the size of the CIA's annual budget.

See, the reason that we are doing it this sneaky way is because it will scare the bejesus out of whistle blowers and they will be able to be criminally punished by not sending this through the Committee on the Judiciary. I am not saying that Judiciary might not have passed this out. We do our share of things that I do not agree with, either. But this super sneaky way of trying to do it does not reflect any credit on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

I resent this very much the way you have dismissed the Committee on the Judiciary. I think this is a travesty. And, by the way, The New York Times, The Washington Times, the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, The Austin American Statesman and other papers have all exposed this for what it is. I am shocked that this radical departure of the way we legislate would be applauded on the floor, tremendous congratulations for a bipartisan effort. Well, everything bipartisan is not always right, and here is a perfect example of it.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LAHOOD).

Mr. LAHOOD. Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding what the gentleman from Michigan just said, I am standing on this side of the well so I can say to all the Members of the House, this is one of the most bipartisan committees I have ever served on, and I serve on the Committee on Agriculture which is a bipartisan committee. This is one of the best, thanks to the leadership of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON). The staff people work together, and we work closely with the people from the CIA and the defense intelligence community and all the intelligence community because we care about the people who are out there around the world putting their lives on the line, in dark corners of the world.

This is a bipartisan effort. People should be supporting this bill, notwithstanding what the gentleman from Michigan said. And I have a great deal of respect for him. This is a bipartisan bill. Every Member should support it. I know we are going to hear opposition to it.

I want to dedicate just a couple of minutes to the human side, the human program of intelligence. It is often portrayed in books and movies. It is the spy versus spy story, the world's second oldest profession. I am glad to say that America has some excellent spies, and I am proud of what the conference report does to make them more productive and effective. And I am sorry, this is not a laughing matter, this is an important matter. After what has happened in the world today, I hope Members will think twice about supporting this bill. This is not a humorous matter. We are talking about people around the world who are offering up their lives in public service for all of us so that we can have a safe world.

Anyone who reads the newspapers and watches the television, if anybody flips over to CNN right now will see reports on there about what happened. Five Americans were killed today and some people believe it was a terrorist attack. So this is important legislation. Criminal organizations use ever more sophistication to infiltrate our financial institutions and expand markets for illegal narcotics. The proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons remains a top-priority concern of all civilized countries. The cyberthreat becomes more and more real and ominous to Americans as our economy and our well-being become ever more dependent on computers and communication networks.

What these threats have in common is the human factor. What this conference report does for our spies, the anonymous defenders of the United States, for one it will provide more funding for their overseas operations. And it does so in two ways. It provides continued but overdue increases in the budget for human operations; and, number two, it ensures that the funds that we allocate for these operations arrive in tact to those operating overseas.

I encourage and advise all Members to vote for this bill today to send a strong message to the intelligence community all over the world and to public servants who offer up their lives on behalf of all of us that we stand behind them and with them on their important work.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend the conferees, especially the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), for working together to include in this conference report the Nazi War Crimes and Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act which I authored along with the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) and Senator DEWINE. This provision will extend the original Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act for 3 additional years while also adding responsibilities to the Interagency Working Group's work as it pertains to war crimes committed by the Japanese Imperial Government during World War II.

In 1998, President Clinton signed into law the original Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act that established a process for the declassification of documents maintained by government agencies about Nazi war criminals and its allies. To date, the Interagency Working Group has reviewed more than 6 million pages of material and has released over 1.5 million pages of previously classified documents to the public regarding World War II. Already, significant new information about World War II war crimes has been revealed in the more than 400,000 Office of Strategic Services records released this past June by the Interagency Working Group at the National Archives. However, even with the diligent work the Interagency Working Group has accomplished, there is an overwhelming amount of material that still needs to be reviewed and declassified.

This success has also been achieved even though the Congress has not appropriated funds for the support of the Interagency Working Group or for the activities carried out by the various agencies that hold the records. Without the resources to review the materials being released, it will be years before we truly understand the significance of what is contained in the declassified materials.

This conference report is a step forward in providing the Interagency Working Group the authority and support it needs to complete the tremendous tasks before them. I still have some concerns regarding the language concerning the cooperation of U.S. Government agencies with the Interagency Working Group and the ability of the Interagency Working Group to review the more than 18 million pages of Japanese Imperial Government information that the U.S. returned to Japan after World War II. However, I support this conference report before us and hope that the chairman and ranking member will work with me next year to clarify this language and intent of this legislation so as to further the success of the Interagency Working Group.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to clarify one point concerning title 8 of this bill. Is it the gentleman's understanding that this section in no way affects the authority of the Interagency Working Group established under Public Law 105–246, the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act of 1998, with regard to the ability of the Interagency Working Group to retrieve documents from U.S. Government agencies?

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. GOSS. Yes, it is.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Further, is it the gentleman's understanding that the exceptions enumerated in that act are in no way affected by the bill before us today?

Mr. GOSS. That is correct.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON), a very valued member of our committee, given all the events in that part of the world.

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for their work on this bill. I am the junior member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and I have found it to be a pleasure to work there because of the workmanlike and bipartisan and professional approach to oversight in the intelligence community. We have a wonderful staff and a focus on what this country needs in a quiet way.

Intelligence is the eyes and ears of our national security. Events like those we have seen today bring that home more closely than we usually see in the day-to-day events of intelligence. It is an important part of keeping our Nation strong and free. And it is more and more difficult because of the diversity of threats that we face as a Nation. We have more data from which to derive information and that creates a tremendous challenge for our intelligence agencies.

I wanted to particularly thank the chairman and the ranking member for what this bill does for counterintelligence. It strengthens counterintelligence in a number of ways, particularly giving more tools to the agencies that need them in order to counter threats from other intelligence agencies.

I also want to commend them on their oversight of our counterintelligence program in this country. The committee played a quiet role in the creation of the NNSA which John Gordon is now the capable head of. And this committee, I think, brought some common sense and some balance to what we needed to do to protect our Nation's secrets while not damaging that which we were trying to protect. I appreciate the committee's point of view, its common sense approach, its balance and its competence in this area.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR)

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman and the ranking member and all members of the committee for their service.

It pains me greatly as a former member of the CIA, as a former United States attorney, as a Member of this body, though, to rise today in opposition to this bill. It pains me greatly not only on the substance of what is contained in this bill, which is by and large very good, solid legislation, properly reflecting the tremendous work that our intelligence officials in this country and all over the world perform, giving them additional tools with which to perform those duties, but it also pains me because of the process whereby I feel compelled to come before this body and oppose this important piece of legislation.

This legislation contains a provision that will create, make no mistake about it, with not one day of hearings, without one moment of public debate, without one witness, an official secrets act. For those who do not know what an official secrets act is, it is something that we have never had in this country. It has been broached many times, particularly in the Cold War era. But our regard for constitutional civil liberties, our regard for the first amendment, and our belief that before the government can put somebody in jail for following their conscience and disclosing information showing government wrongdoing, the government must shoulder a heavy burden, has in every case in which an effort has been made to enact an official secrets act beaten back those efforts.

Yet today we stand here with such a provision amending title 18, the criminal code, that would create an official secrets act. That would mean that any individual who discloses information that is classified by the executive branch can be thrown in jail for up to 3 years for every disclosure.

Currently, if an individual discloses certain categories of important national security information, he can and should be prosecuted. It is not as if these people who harm our Nation's security are not going unprosecuted. They are.

□ 1645

This provision, though, would silence whistleblowers in a way that has never before come before this body and which has never before been enacted. This is about to be done without the Committee on the Judiciary even having been given the courtesy to look at this legislation, to assess its first amendment problems; without one hearing, without one witness, without one moment of debate.

This is very similar, Mr. Speaker, to what happened 2 years ago on this same bill. The government was granted extensive expansion of wiretapping authority without one witness, without one debate, without one day of hearing. It was slipped into this bill 2 years ago.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this bill so that it can go back to the drawing board and these particular provisions that have no business being in this bill without having gone through the Committee on the Judiciary can be properly assessed and their full constitutional ramifications properly studied.

One can only pick up the paper almost every day and see examples, whether it is Bill Gertz or Gary Aldrich or others, of people who have let the public know important information who would be thrown in jail under a provision that is about to pass without one day of hearing, without one witness, without even the Committee on the Judiciary having been given the courtesy to assess it.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I serve on the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations, and it is one of the most bipartisan committees that I serve on. I appreciate the bipartisanship of the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) as well. I think the Members on both sides of the aisle will agree that I think we have a long way to go and a lot of work to do. I think this is a good bill. I think hard work has been done on it, but I think there is also agreement in areas that make up intelligence and the agencies, a strong military.

While we may have the strongest military in the world, our national readiness rates are very, very low in many cases. That hurts our intelligence capability. Where our military is strung out for nation-building quite often, according to George Tenet, those assets were spread so very thin that it made it almost impossible to track Osama bin Laden because we were engaged in those events. Our State Department, both under Republicans and Democrats, I think all that needs to be done is take a look at what happened to Enrique Camarena in the drug wars and the lack of support for our agents under the State Department, to Rambouillet, to hitting the Chinese Embassy. I also think it is wrong that we had technology that we were developing to defeat a Soviet missile. I cannot say what that missile is; but when we gained access to that particular missile, we found out our defensive system would not work.

We spent nearly a billion dollars to build that defensive system that would not work. And the reengineering of that, we now have a system at very low cost that will defeat that Soviet system, and that is why I think many of us got so concerned when Loral with Bernie Schwartz gave up second and tertiary missile boots to China, they gave up MRVing capability which we, Intelligence, knew that the W–88 warhead had already been stolen by the Chinese, and then the targeting device. The CIA briefed many of us that North Korea was many years away from striking the United States with a nuclear weapon. They can now hit the United States with a Taepo Dong-2 missile. That should concern all of us, and I think we have a long way to go to secure the national security and intelligence forces of our country.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. HUTCHINSON).

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report, and I wanted to respond to my good friend, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR), and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) as well, on a couple of issues.

First of all, this provision simply says that we are going to take some action to prohibit the unauthorized disclosure of classified information by government officials. Now, a complaint has been made that, well, it should have gone through the Committee on the Judiciary. I am a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I guard our jurisdiction very carefully; but, in fact, this was attached by the Senate, who held hearings on this, who heard witnesses and who debated this, and this is a normal process. Whenever they attach a provision, we in the House have to consider it. We have to look at this, and from the standpoint of the Committee on the Judiciary, I believe that this is carefully crafted.

Now, the argument is made that this is going to silence whistle-blowers. Well, I do not think that is true at all. First of all, whistle-blowers are protected under the current law. Secondly, whistle-blowers who have a concern about whether information is properly classified or there is a concern about the agency that they are working for, can come to Congress. That is our job. The oversight committee would hold hearings on it, would deal with that issue, would protect the whistle-blower. They are protected under law and under the interests of Congress, and so I do not think that should be a concern.

The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR) raised the question that we are going to criminalize conduct that historically has not been criminalized and, in fact, what we are doing is to say that if an employee of the United States, this does not pertain to the news media, but if an employee of the United States has possession of classified material and then discloses it to someone who is not authorized to receive that material, then they can be prosecuted.

But there is something more in there that was left out of the presentation of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR), and that is they must have done it knowingly and willfully, and that is the intent portion of the burden of proof that will be on the government. So it does not prosecute mistakes, someone who accidentally or inadvertently discloses information. They have to intentionally have done that, knowingly have done that.

So I think it is well drafted, and I urge my colleagues to support this well-drafted protection of classified information.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT).

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the bill contains my amendment to investigate the effects of espionage on American business and industry and jobs. I am also glad at least we got some report language on China. It should have been in the bill.

There is not enough anatomy in either of these bodies. Mr. Speaker, we have had independent counsels on Henry Cisneros and Monica Lewinsky. Now, look, Monica may be a threat to fidelity. She is not a threat to liberty.

We had a Chinese Red Army general who funneled cash to the Democrat National Committee, and we will not even include the Traficant language as binding that says what is the extent on the national security. A Chinese missile, as we laugh, will not have exemption for one party or the other. A Chinese missile will hit all America. God Almighty. Last month's 1-month trade deficit was $31 billion. At 1,000 jobs per billion, we lost 31,000 high-paying manufacturing jobs. If that were just put into highways, we would have created over a million jobs for 2 years.

What is wrong with us? Are we afraid of the politics of China? The American people are watching. The greatest threat to our national security is China, and they bought and spied and posed that great threat.

I am disappointed. The intelligence committee is our number one charge to secure America, secure that American peace. We are not doing that. I think we are gutless, and I yield back the fact that that should not have been in the report language as a wish; that should have been a commitment and a mandate by Congress to investigate this Chinese business.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on balance this is a good conference report that has been brought together in a bipartisan way. I understand the ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary. I raised in the conference his letter. I attempted to modify the language to make it more narrow. The fact is that the Senate would not yield on this issue. I disagree with that part of the bill because, one, it is the identification of leakers before they can ever be penalized. Increasing the penalty, to me, does not work. I certainly think that the House Committee on the Judiciary should look at this, and I will pledge my support to support legislation that in some way may either modify or mitigate the damage, if any, that has been done.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to again publicly thank the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON) for being an extraordinary ranking member, reaching across so many times on complicated and sensitive matters and carrying a huge proportion of the load of the committee. I have a plan that would like to keep him there as ranking member. I realize that may not go entirely across the aisle.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), the vice chairman and critical link to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate my colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I have a magnificent speech that has been prepared carefully for this discussion today. I am not going to refer to the speech, but rather submit it.

In the meantime, Mr. Speaker, I want to express my deep appreciation to my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), with whom it has been my privilege to work for many, many years in the State legislature as well as here. He has done a fantastic job, in my view, providing the kind of balance that we need that makes the work of this committee such a nonpartisan piece of work.

In turn, before coming to the committee, it had not been my privilege to know well the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS). The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) is a person of fabulous background, but very unique experience in this subject area. He comes to our committee at a most important time in our history. The leadership he has provided for us is very important to the security interests of this country, at home and abroad, but especially of significance to those who care about freedom in the world.

The men and women who make up the personnel base of our intelligence community overall are fabulous people. They do wonderful work on our behalf. Most of it gets very, very little attention. From time to time, we have a problem where someone crosses the line, usually stupidly, sometimes overtly, and the work of the agency does come to public view. It ofttimes is of great disservice to this country. It is important, very important, that we secure those personnel who want to make sure that the work of the agencies take place as reflected in the direction of the law passed by the Congress.

I very much wanted to focus upon the comments of my colleague, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR). Let me say that whistle-blowers are protected within this bill and within the law. So long as they come forward with matters that are security matters about which they are concerned and they disclose them to people who are cleared to receive such information, they can carry forward their conscience and their responsibility as they would see fit.

□ 1700

There is no restriction there, and the law is very careful about that. I understand that lawyers, about presuming that only lawyers have these answers, but the committee has worked very carefully with the work done by the Senate, and I am comfortable with that work, as of that moment.

The work of this bill is very, very critical work. Because of some of these questions that are being raised, the votes today may be very important. I urge the Members of the body to realize how significant the work of this committee is and how important it is that they give it their full support, as well as their attention.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to testify that this is a very fine piece of work done by both bodies, carried forward in a most positive way by the leadership of both the ranking member and the chairman.

Mr. Speaker, this is my last year on the committee, and I want to express to our Chairman and to Mr. DIXON my sincerest thanks for their dedication in ensuring this nation has the intelligence capabilities critical to protecting our freedoms. It's not often thought of in these terms, but intelligence truly is our first line of defense, and the close, personal, working relationship Chairman GOSS and Mr. DIXON have, has made our jobs all the easier. I want to thank you both, and I believe this entire body owes you a great deal of gratitude.

Mr. Speaker, every year those of us who serve on the Intelligence Committee stand before this body to discuss the Intelligence Authorization bill. Because of very real national security issues, we cannot discuss the sensitive details of the bill. We simply have to ask our colleagues to "trust us" as we vote on the classified aspects of our intelligence agencies and activities. Mr. Speaker, let me assure you, and, most importantly, the American people, that each member of the committee takes that responsibility very seriously. The issues and debates we take up in committee about our intelligence programs are based solely on national security interests.

Partisian politics is not a function in the conduct of committee business. This has earned the Intelligence Committee the trust that is required. Mr. Speaker, while the Members deserve much for their efforts to oversee our Nation's intelligence organizations, I would be remiss in not making mention of the superb committee staff. The staff deals with some of the most difficult issues facing our country. They do tough work, in a tough environment, and we ask much of them. I thank each member of the Intelligence Committee staff for the support they provide, and more importantly, for what they do for America.

Mr. Speaker, a quick word about our magnificent intelligence community. It is a community of professionals who work in the background and who don't get much credit, if any, for successfully accomplishing the difficult tasks they are asked to carry out. The men and women of the intelligence community often bear the full brunt of public criticism for the rare, but inevitable intelligence shortfall—after all "perfect knowledge" is a noble, but usually unobtainable, goal. So it is important that we, who know the details of the good work of this community, take every opportunity to thank them for their heroism publically.

We can't, for example, publically acknowledge the Central Intelligence Agency for an operation that might stop a planned terrorist attack, or the National Security Agency for providing the piece of information that might allow military commanders to locate critical targets, the National Imagery and Mapping Agency for providing the proof that a foreign nation is developing weapons of mass destruction, or the FBI for locating and removing a Russian listening device in the State Department conference room. These and the other intelligence organizations and the analysts who make sense of the myriad information stand watch for all Americans day in and day out. I thank them for the jobs they do, for the professionals that they are, and for the sacrifices they make every single day.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I urge support for this conference report. Indeed it provides the intelligence community with the resources it needs to carry out its mission, and it ensures that the American military forces deployed around the world have the best information resources we can provide them.

That is not to say that I think we have done enough. The world is not a safe place. There are truly bad actors in the world and, in fact, we may be living in a more dangerous and unstable world today than we faced during the cold war: This past week's events in the former Yugoslavia are example; the increase in terrorism—as, tragically, we saw again this morning in the Persian Gulf; the proliferation of inexpensive weapons of mass destruction that puts unbelievable destructive power in the hands of small nations and non-nation groups; the number of countries with nuclear weapons and the means to deliver them is increasing. These threats present tough information challenges for our intelligence community; challenges that must be met. We have to make sure our intelligence organizations are given the proper resources to successful operate in this dangerous world.

This conference report provides adequate resources that should be seen as a down payment on keeping our intelligence community capable and viable in this dangerous world. But to protect our national security, we must resolve to invest more in our "intelligence first line of defense." I urge my colleagues to vote with me in support of this conference report.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say I support subtitle B of this conference report regarding the Diplomatic Telecommunications Service. Along with the ranking democratic member of the International Relations Committee I wanted to clarify that section 322(a)(6)(C) does not include personnel requirements. It is our understanding that this provision does not require State Department personnel detailed or assigned to the DTS or DTSPO to be polygraphed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). All time has expired.

Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. An insufficient number of Members have risen, a recorded vote is not ordered.

A recorded vote was refused.

So, the conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4392, and the conference report just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. FROST asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I ask for this time to inquire about next week's schedule, and I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS).

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

I am very pleased to announce that the House has completed its legislative business for the week. The House will not be in session tomorrow.

The House will meet next week for legislative business on Tuesday, October 17, at 10:30 a.m. for morning hour, and at 12 noon for legislative business.

The House will consider a number of measures under suspension of the rules, a list of which will be distributed to Members' offices tomorrow.

On Wednesday, October 18, and the balance of the week the House will consider the following measures: H.R. 4635, the Department of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development Appropriations Act conference report; H.R. 4577, the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations conference report; and H.R. 4942, the District of Columbia appropriations conference report.

Mr. Speaker, the House will also consider any other conference reports that may become available throughout the week.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I have several questions, if I may, to the gentleman from Florida.

The first question is, does the gentleman expect any other business on Tuesday besides suspension bills?

Mr. GOSS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday there is possibly a motion to go to conference on the VA–HUD bill. That is a possibility.

Mr. FROST. Another question. The gentleman has said on Wednesday and the balance of the week, and the gentleman listed several bills. Could the gentleman be more specific as to what day the gentleman expects the Labor-HHS appropriations to be on the floor?

Mr. GOSS. It is clear that we can say the conferees are working hard. We hope to know sooner rather than later exactly which bills are going to come up on which days, but I do not think I can give any specific certainty on that. I would not want to preclude the hard work that is going on.

Mr. FROST. The final question, which is, of course, the $64,000 question, on which day does the gentleman expect us to adjourn for the year?

Mr. GOSS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I think the gentleman undervalues the question.

Mr. FROST. A little inflation.

Mr. GOSS. I am sorry to say that I do not have the answer to that question.

Mr. FROST. I thank the gentleman very much.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, OCTOBER 16, 2000

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 2 p.m. on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING ON TUESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 2000

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent when the House adjourns on Monday, October 16, 2000, it adjourn to meet at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, October 17, for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

ARNOLD C. D'AMICO STATION

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Government Reform be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 4853) to redesignate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1568 South Glen Road in South Euclid, Ohio, as the ''Arnold C. D'Amico Station,'' and ask for its immediate consideration by the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I will not object, and I rise in support of H.R. 4853.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I will try to be very brief for an explanation to the House.

The bill before us was introduced by our colleague, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES) on July 13 of this year, and was amended by the Committee on Government Reform on October 5.

The amendment very simply changes the word ''Glen'' to ''Green'', as determined after review by the United States Postal Service. As the Clerk has read, it does redesignate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1568 South Green Road in South Euclid, Ohio, now known as the South Euclid Station, to afterwards be designated as the Arnold C. D'Amico station.

As is the practice of the Committee on Government Reform, the entire delegation in this House from the State of Ohio has cosponsored this legislation.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I yield to the gentlewoman from Ohio.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding to me and giving me the opportunity to speak.

I briefly thank my colleagues for their support to designate a post office in the city of South Euclid on behalf of the mayor, Arnold C. D'Amico.

Mr. Speaker, Arnold D'Amico was born in Warren, Ohio on September 3, 1923 and received his early education from Notre Dame Sisters at Saint Mary's Catholic School. After graduating from Warren Harding School he enrolled at Kent State University. However, World War II interrupted his college education and Mr. D'Amico served with distinction for three years in the United States Army, and was assigned to the Aleutian Islands and the China-Burma-India theaters. Following his distinguished military service he returned to Kent State University, earning a Bachelor of Science degree in business Administration.

After graduation, Mr. D'Amico was very active politically in the Greater Cleveland business community with a career spanning over 20 years. During this time he was elected councilman for Ward 2 in South Euclid, Ohio. While on City Council, Mr. D'Amico served on the Planning Commission, and he was the chairman of the Council of Government of the Tri-City Consortium on Aging Commission. Subsequently, he was elected Mayor of South Euclid, Ohio.

In 1976, Arnold D'Amico became South Euclid's first full time Mayor. He was not only committed to the city of South Euclid, but he was also instrumental in moving the city forward. Under his leadership South Euclid prospered and established itself as a model city of efficiency.

Mayor D'Amico was a wonderful man and I am happy to support this designation.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Oregon will continue to yield, I want to thank the gentlewoman from Ohio for bringing this designation to our attention.

We have had the opportunity on this House floor to name facilities on behalf of many distinguished Americans, and clearly, this particular individual meets that high standard.

I think it is important to note that Mr. D'Amico spent a lifetime in service to his community, a lifetime in service to his country, beginning in his service in World War II in the United States Army, moving on as a diligent worker in the Office of Price Stabilization, and later as an auditor for the Air Force.

But clearly through all of his years, he most distinguished himself during his distinguished service in the South Euclid City Council, and as I am told, later became not just the mayor of South Euclid in 1972, but indeed, the first full full-time mayor in 1976.

Reading the materials presented by the gentlewoman on his behalf, I can say without fear of qualification that he accomplished much during his tenure there. He established an office on the aging, a paramedic program, established the 911 emergency program, and pushed for a community center. He later served as president of the county Mayors' Association, chairman and treasurer of the regional income tax authority, and so much more.

Clearly, Mr. Speaker, we have in this individual someone who understood the sense and the value of community, and did not just recognize it in his own heart but went out and gave of himself to contribute back.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I, as the chairman of the subcommittee, give my full endorsement to this. I am pleased that we are able to take it up this afternoon in this fashion.

I commend the gentlewoman for her actions.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. If the gentleman from Oregon will yield further, briefly, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his support of this designation.

The reason I was so brief in my commentary, I did not think I had a chance to lay upon the record all the things that the gentleman said about Mayor D'Amico of South Euclid.

He was truly a genuine supporter of mine in every office that I have run for previously, and a leader and a light in the community of Cuyahoga County.

I would just like to associate myself with the comments of the chairman and thank him for his support, and thank the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for his support.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 4853

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ARNOLD C. D'AMICO STATION.

(a) DESIGNATION.—The facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1568 South Glen Road in South Euclid, Ohio, and known as the South Euclid Station, shall be known and designated as the ''Arnold C. D'Amico Station''.

(b) REFERENCES.—Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the facility referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the ''Arnold C. D'Amico Station''.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. MCHUGH

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the Nature of a Substitute offered by Mr. MCHUGH:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. ARNOLD C. D'AMICO STATION.

(a) DESIGNATION.—The facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1568 South Green Road in South Euclid, Ohio, and known as the South Euclid Station, shall be known and designated as the ''Arnold C. D'Amico Station''.

(b) REFERENCES.—Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the facility referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the Arnold C. D'Amico Station.

Mr. MCHUGH (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment in the nature of a substitute be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH).

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: ''A bill to redesignate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1568 South Green Road in South Euclid, Ohio, as the 'Arnold C. D'Amico Station'.''.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4853.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

FAMINE PREVENTION AND FREEDOM FROM HUNGER ACT OF 2000

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4002) to amend the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to revise and improve provisions relating to famine prevention and freedom from hunger, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Famine Prevention and Freedom From Hunger Improvement Act of 2000''.

SEC. 2. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

(a) DECLARATIONS OF POLICY.—(1) The first sentence of section 296(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a(a)) is amended to read as follows: ''The Congress declares that, in order to achieve the mutual goals among nations of ensuring food security, human health, agricultural growth, trade expansion, and the wise and sustainable use of natural resources, the United States should mobilize the capacities of the United States land-grant universities, other eligible universities, and public and private partners of universities in the United States and other countries, consistent with sections 103 and 103A of this Act, for: (1) global research on problems affecting food, agriculture, forestry, and fisheries; (2) improved human capacity and institutional resource development for the global application of agricultural and related environmental sciences; (3) agricultural development and trade research and extension services in the United States and other countries to support the entry of rural industries into world markets; and (4) providing for the application of agricultural sciences to solving food, health, nutrition, rural income, and environmental problems, especially such problems in low-income, food deficit countries.''.

(2) The second sentence of section 296(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a(a)) is amended—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (7) as subparagraphs (A) through (G), respectively;

(B) in subparagraph (A) (as redesignated), by striking ''in this country'' and inserting ''with and through the private sector in this country and to understanding processes of economic development'';

(C) in subparagraph (B) (as redesignated), to read as follows:

''(B) that land-grant and other universities in the United States have demonstrated over many years their ability to cooperate with international agencies, educational and research institutions in other countries, the private sector, and nongovernmental organizations worldwide, in expanding global agricultural production, processing, business and trade, to the benefit of aid recipient countries and of the United States;'';

(D) in subparagraph (C) (as redesignated), to read as follows:

''(C) that, in a world of growing populations with rising expectations, increased food production and improved distribution, storage, and marketing in the developing countries is necessary not only to prevent hunger and ensure human health and child survival, but to build the basis for economic growth and trade, and the social security in which democracy and a market economy can thrive, and moreover, that the greatest potential for increasing world food supplies and incomes to purchase food is in the developing countries where the gap between food need and food supply is the greatest and current incomes are lowest;'';

(E) by striking subparagraphs (E) and (G) (as redesignated);

(F) by striking ''and'' at the end of subparagraph (F) (as redesignated);

(G) by redesignating subparagraph (F) as subparagraph (G); and

(H) by inserting after subparagraph (D) the following:

''(E) that, with expanding global markets and increasing imports into many countries, including the United States, food safety and quality, as well as secure supply, have emerged as mutual concerns of all countries;

''(F) that research, teaching, and extension activities, and appropriate institutional and policy development therefore are prime factors in improving agricultural production, food distribution, processing, storage, and marketing abroad (as well as in the United States);'';

(I) in subparagraph (G) (as redesignated), by striking ''in the United States'' and inserting ''and the broader economy of the United States''; and

(J) by adding at the end the following:

''(H) that there is a need to responsibly manage the world's agricultural and natural resources for sustained productivity, health and resilience to climate variability; and

''(I) that universities and public and private partners of universities need a dependable source of funding in order to increase the impact of their own investments and those of their State governments and constituencies, in order to continue and expand their efforts to advance agricultural development in cooperating countries, to translate development into economic growth and trade for the United States and cooperating countries, and to prepare future teachers, researchers, extension specialists, entrepreneurs, managers, and decisionmakers for the world economy.''.

(b) ADDITIONAL DECLARATIONS OF POLICY.—Section 296(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a(b)) is amended to read as follows:

''(b) Accordingly, the Congress declares that, in order to prevent famine and establish freedom from hunger, the following components must be brought together in a coordinated program to increase world food and fiber production, agricultural trade, and responsible management of natural resources, including—

''(1) continued efforts by the international agricultural research centers and other international research entities to provide a global network, including United States universities, for international scientific collaboration on crops, livestock, forests, fisheries, farming resources, and food systems of worldwide importance;

''(2) contract research and the implementation of collaborative research support programs and other research collaboration led by United States universities, and involving research systems in other countries focused on crops, livestock, forests, fisheries, farming resources, and food systems, with benefits to the United States and partner countries;

''(3) broadly disseminating the benefits of global agricultural research and development including increased benefits for United States agriculturally related industries through establishment of development and trade information and service centers, for rural as well as urban communities, through extension, cooperatively with, and supportive of, existing public and private trade and development related organizations;

''(4) facilitation of participation by universities and public and private partners of universities in programs of multilateral banks and agencies which receive United States funds;

''(5) expanding learning opportunities about global agriculture for students, teachers, community leaders, entrepreneurs, and the general public through international internships and exchanges, graduate assistantships, faculty positions, and other means of education and extension through long-term recurring Federal funds matched by State funds; and

''(6) competitive grants through universities to United States agriculturalists and public and private partners of universities from other countries for research, institution and policy development, extension, training, and other programs for global agricultural development, trade, and responsible management of natural resources.''.

(c) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—Section 296(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking ''each component'' and inserting ''each of the program components described in paragraphs (1) through (6) of subsection (b)'';

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting ''and public and private partners of universities'' after ''for the universities''; and

(B) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(3) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by inserting ''and public and private partners of universities'' after ''such universities'';

(B) in subparagraph (A), by striking '', and'' and inserting a semicolon;

(C) in subparagraph (B), by striking the comma at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(D) by striking the matter following subparagraph (B); and

(E) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) multilateral banks and agencies receiving United States funds;

''(D) development agencies of other countries; and

''(E) United States Government foreign assistance and economic cooperation programs;''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) generally engage the United States university community more extensively in the agricultural research, trade, and development initiatives undertaken outside the United States, with the objectives of strengthening its capacity to carry out research, teaching, and extension activities for solving problems in food production, processing, marketing, and consumption in agriculturally developing nations, and for transforming progress in global agricultural research and development into economic growth, trade, and trade benefits for aid recipient countries and United States communities and industries, and for the wise use of natural resources; and

''(5) ensure that all federally funded support to universities and public and private partners of universities relating to the goals of this title is periodically reviewed for its performance.''.

(d) DEFINITION OF UNIVERSITIES.—Section 296(d) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a(d)) is amended—

(1) by inserting after ''sea-grant colleges;'' the following: ''Native American land-grant colleges as authorized under the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994 (7 U.S.C. 301 note);''; and

(2) in paragraph (1), by striking ''extension'' and inserting ''extension (including outreach)''.

(e) DEFINITION OF ADMINISTRATOR.—Section 296(e) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a(e)) is amended by inserting ''United States'' before ''Agency''.

(f) DEFINITION OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE PARTNERS OF UNIVERSITIES.—Section 296 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(f) As used in this title, the term 'public and private partners of universities' includes entities that have cooperative or contractual agreements with universities, which may include formal or informal associations of universities, other education institutions, United States Government and State agencies, private voluntary organizations, nongovernmental organizations, firms operated for profit, nonprofit organizations, multinational banks, and, as designated by the Administrator, any organization, institution, or agency incorporated in other countries.''.

(g) DEFINITION OF AGRICULTURE.—Section 296 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(g) As used in this title, the term 'agriculture' includes the science and practice of activity related to food, feed, and fiber production, processing, marketing, distribution, utilization, and trade, and also includes family and consumer sciences, nutrition, food science and engineering, agricultural economics and other social sciences, forestry, wildlife, fisheries, aquaculture, floraculture, veterinary medicine, and other environmental and natural resources sciences.''.

(h) DEFINITION OF AGRICULTURISTS.—Section 296 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) As used in this title, the term 'agriculturists' includes farmers, herders, and livestock producers, individuals who fish and others employed in cultivating and harvesting food resources from salt and fresh waters, individuals who cultivate trees and shrubs and harvest nontimber forest products, as well as the processors, managers, teachers, extension specialists, researchers, policymakers, and others who are engaged in the food, feed, and fiber system and its relationships to natural resources.''.

SEC. 3. GENERAL AUTHORITY.

(B) by striking ''which shall assist'' and all that follows and inserting ''which shall assist in and advise on the mechanisms and processes for implementation of activities described in section 297.''.

SEC. 5. ANNUAL REPORT.

Section 300 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2220e) is amended by striking ''April 1'' and inserting ''September 1''.

Mr. BRADY of Texas (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, as an original cosponsor of H.R. 4002, the Famine Prevention and Freedom From Hunger Act of 2000, this Member certainly wants to commend the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRADY] for taking the lead on this important issue and introducing this bill which updates the context of agricultural development in Title 12 of the Foreign Assistance Act and expands the role of America's land-grant universities in these efforts. Indeed, it was a pleasure to work with him on this effort.

H.R. 4002 was first passed by the House under suspension of the rules on July 24, 2000. On October 4, 2000, the other body passed a slightly amended version of H.R. 4002 by unanimous consent. This Member supports the expeditious final passage of H.R. 4002 in the House so that it can be enrolled and sent to the President to be signed into law.

Since the Foreign Assistance Act was enacted in 1961, the scope of U.S. food aid and agricultural assistance has expanded to include: forestry, fisheries, family and consumer sciences, horticulture, agribusiness, agricultural processing, marketing, distribution, trade, food safety, nutrition, agricultural policy, environmental protection, food science and engineering, veterinary medicine, agricultural economics and other social sciences, and other science and practice related to food, feed and fiber. Indeed, H.R. 4002 updates current law and U.S. foreign assistance policy to reflect these changes.

This bill also ensures the transformation of development abroad into benefits to the U.S. University research and extension services, especially those associated with America's land-grant colleges, along with their public and private partners are supported to help transform agricultural progress abroad into benefits to U.S. communities and businesses through trade. The pending legislation expands the definition of eligible universities to include those institutions engaged in agricultural teaching, research and "outreach" as well as "extension." This certainly is an effective and responsible approach which utilizes America's land-grant university expertise to help famine prevention and freedom from hunger abroad.

Mr. Speaker, the Famine Prevention and Freedom from Hunger Prevention Act of 2000 would, for the first time, create a direct link between development abroad and the interests of U.S. rural communities. Clearly, it deserves our strong support and this Member urges its adoption. Again, this Member commends Mr. BRADY for his leadership on this issue.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the original request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

□ 1715

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4002.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

CORRECTING ENROLLMENT OF H.R. 3244, VICTIMS OF TRAFFICKING AND VIOLENCE PROTECTION ACT OF 2000

Mr. BRADY of TEXAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 149) to correct the enrollment of H.R. 3244, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution, as follows:

S. CON. RES. 149

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Clerk of the House of Representatives, in the enrollment of the bill (H.R. 3244) to combat trafficking of persons, especially into the sex trade, slavery, and slavery-like conditions, in the United States and countries around the world through prevention, through prosecution and enforcement against traffickers, and through protection and assistance to victims of trafficking, shall make the following correction:

In section 2002(a)(2)(A)(ii), strike ''June 7, 1999,'' and insert ''December 13, 1999,''.

The Senate concurrent resolution was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBER TO ATTEND THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE HONORABLE BRUCE F. VENTO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 618, the Chair announces the Speaker's appointment of the following Member of the House to the Committee to attend the funeral of the late Bruce F. Vento:

Ms. PELOSI, California.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

SPECIAL RECOGNITION OF SAMOAN HEAVYWEIGHT BOXER DAVID TUA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, what is it that Olympian gold-medalist volleyballer Eric Fonoimoana, Junior Seau of the San Diego Chargers, Joe Salave'a of the Tennessee Titans, Edwin Mulitalo of the Baltimore Ravens, Naomi Mulitauaopele of the Utah Starzz, Marcus Tuiasosopo of the Washington Huskies, All-American UCLA discus thrower Seilala Su'a, Yokozuma Sumo Grand Champion Musashimaru, Ozeki Sumo Champion Konishiki, WWF Wrestling Champion Tuifeai, ''The Rock,'' and heavyweight boxer David Tua all have in common?

Mr. Speaker, they are Samoan Polynesians who share the same cultural heritage like the Maoris of New Zealand, the Hawaiians or Kanaka Maoli, Tongans, and Tahitians.

After the elections, Mr. Speaker, I suggest to my colleagues and to the millions of boxing fans throughout America, to kick back and turn their TV sets on to HBO and witness one of the most historic events that will transpire the evening of November 11 in Las Vegas, the world heavyweight boxing championship fight between Lennox Lewis and Samoan heavyweight boxer David Tua.

Mr. Speaker, it is against Samoan tradition to be boastful and arrogant, but as a totally neutral observer, and with all due respect, Lennox Lewis is going to painfully wake up the next morning and count how many ribs he has left, and then he will wonder if he was hit by either a dump truck or a D–9 caterpillar tractor, after fighting against David Tua.

You see, Mr. Speaker, this guy, David Tua, he has the heart and soul of a pure Polynesian warrior. He has got a nasty left hook and a deadly right hand knockout punch. He only weighs about 250 pounds. He has no neck, and his legs and calves are like tree trunks, which is typical of Samoan men who wear what we call here in America skirts, but they are actually lavalavas.

I want to express my personal thanks and appreciation to the good people of New Zealand, all the pakehas and our Polynesian cousins, the Tangata Maohi, for looking after David Tua and his family, and for their acceptance of David Tua, and I say to my Maori cousins (the gentleman spoke Samoan).

Mr. Speaker, I do not know if David Tua is listening to this presentation; but, Mr. Speaker, I do know that David Tua is a humble man, never speaks ill of his opponents, and I believe the American people and boxing fans around the world are going to remember him well for his talents and, above all, his sportsmanship-like conduct.

Mr. Speaker, I call upon the Prime Minister of the Independent and Sovereign State of Samoa and the Governor of the U.S. territory of American Samoa to declare November 11 as National David Tua Day. It will be a day that will be remembered by the Samoans throughout the world, the Samoan David going up against the Goliath Lennox Lewis; and, of course, we all know the results of that famous encounter.

Mr. Speaker, in describing David Tua's physical presence, I am reminded of a poem that a Hawaiian comedian, Frank Delima, once wrote about Samoans. By the way, Mr. Speaker, David Tua's favorite pasttime is writing poetry.

Anyway, the poem, in part, is entitled ''Abdullah Fata'ai,'' and it goes like this:

I am 9 feet tall and 6 feet wide.
I got a neck made of elephant hide.
I scrape da haoles off the soles of my feet.
I drove my Volkswagon from the back seat.
I eat green bananas, tree and all.
My favorite game is tackle football.
I wear a skirt, but you better not laugh, cause it won't be funny when I break you in half.
I'm as gentle and sweet as a grizzly bear.
Only difference is he got more hair.
I got the nicest smile in all the Pacific.
I got an island home that's superterrific.
But I don't like fight and you don't like die.
So when I say (the gentleman spoke in Samoan), you better say ''Hi.''

Mr. Speaker, as we say in the Samoan language (the gentleman spoke in Samoan) David Tua, which means, Mr. Speaker, may your body be as invisible as the air and may your eyes be as bright as the sun. May you be victorious in battle. All our hopes and aspirations are with you, David Tua.

EXCHANGE OF SPECIAL ORDER TIME

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to claim the special order time of the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

WARNING ABOUT FOREIGN POLICY AND MONETARY POLICY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, over the last 3 years to 4 years, I have come to the floor on numerous occasions trying to sound a warning about both our foreign policy and our monetary policy. Today our monetary policy and our foreign policy have clashed. We see now that we face serious problems, not only in the Middle East, but on our financial markets.

Yesterday, I talked a bit about what I see as a financial bubble that has developed over the past decade and made the point that a financial bubble can be financed through borrowing money, as well as inflation. A financial bubble is essentially a consequence of inflation. A lot of people talk about inflation being the mere rising of some prices, but that is not the case.

Most good economists recognize that inflation is a consequence of monetary policy; as one increases the supply of money, it inflates the currency. This distorts interest rates, and it distorts the markets. Sometimes this goes into goods and services, and other times these excessive funds will go into marketplaces and distort the value of stocks and bonds.

I believe this is what has happened for the past 10 years. Mr. Speaker, so in spite of the grand prosperity that we have had for this past decade, I believe it is an illusion in many ways, because we have not paid for it. In a true capitalist society, true wealth comes from hard work and savings.

Today, the American people have a negative savings rate, which means that we get our so-called capital from a printing press, because there are no savings and no funds to invest. The Federal Reserve creates these funds to be invested. On a short-term, this seems to benefit everyone.

The poor like it because they seem to get welfare benefits from it; and certainly the rich like it, because it motivates and stimulates their businesses; and politicians like it, because it takes care of deficits and it stimulates the economy.

The only problem with this is it always ends, and it always ends badly. And this is the reason that we have to meet up with a policy that seems ridiculous. The economy seems to be doing quite well, but the Federal Reserve comes along and says there is a problem with economic growth. Economic growth might cause prices to go up; so, therefore, what we have to do is cut off the economic growth. If you have slower growth, the prices will not go up any longer.

They are talking about a symptom and not the cause. The cause is the Federal Reserve. The problem is that the Federal Reserve has been granted authority that is unconstitutional to go and counterfeit money, and until we recognize that and deal with that, we will continue to have financial problems.

We have heard that the 1990s was a different decade, it was a new era, economy, exactly what we heard throughout the decade prior to the collapse of the markets in Japan. The markets have now been down more than 50 percent in Japan for more than 10 years, and there is no sign of significant recovery there.

Also there were other times in our history when they talked about a new era economy.

Let me read a quote: ''With growing optimism, they gave birth to a foolish idea called the New Economic Era. That notion spread over the whole country. We were assured that we were in a new period where the old laws of economics no longer applied.'' Herbert Hoover in his memoirs.

It is an illusion to believe that the new paradigm exists. Actually, the computer industry involves 5 percent of the economy; 95 percent is what they called the old economy. I ascribe to old economic laws, because the truth is, we cannot change economic laws. And if inflating a currency distorts the market and the boom leads to the bust, that cannot be repelled.

If we are looking towards bad times, it is not because of current policy, it is because of previous policy, the previous policy of the 10 years, the time when we live beyond our means. We say how did we live beyond our means? Where did the money come from? Are we not spending less than Washington? No, we are not spending less in Washington. Are not the deficits a lot less? They are less, but they are not gone.

Where did we borrow from? We borrowed from overseas. We have a current account deficit that requires over a billion dollars a day that we borrow from foreigners just to finance our current account deficit. We are now the greatest debtor in the world, and that is a problem. This is why the markets are shaky, and this is why the markets have been going down for 6 months, and this is why in a foreign policy crisis such as we are facing in the Middle East, we will accentuate these problems. Therefore, the foreign policy of military interventionism overseas is something that we should seriously question.

TERRORISM AND VIOLENCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. ENGEL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, the news in the Middle East today is unfortunately not very good news. The attack on the U.S.S. Cole reminds us as Americans once again how terrorism can rear its ugly head at any time at any place. The events during the past several days in the Middle East and in Israel and the West Bank show us again that terrorism and violence is just right around the corner.

Only a few months ago, Mr. Speaker, the Israeli government demonstrated the willingness to make sweeping concessions at Camp David. Unfortunately, Mr. Arafat rejected it. When we talk about the peace process and we talk about partners for peace, we have to understand that it takes two to tango. We cannot have peace if only one side is making concessions and the other side continues to hang on to its strident demands.

In fact, during the entire process at Camp David, which lasted many, many days, Mr. Barak, the prime minister of Israel, made concessions that no one would have dreamed that any Israeli government or prime minister could have made even a year ago, 6 months ago. He made those concessions; but Mr. Arafat, particularly with Jerusalem but other things as well, stuck to his hard demands.

□ 1730

The Palestinian leadership rejected compromise. They showed that they are only interested in peace on their terms. Again, a peace can only be achieved if both parties are willing to negotiate and both parties are willing to compromise.

The violent Palestinian riots we are witnessing today and for the past several days, in my opinion, result directly from the fact that Yasir Arafat did not prepare his people for peace. In fact, Arafat tries to skillfully use the pale of terrorism as a negotiating tool, playing the classic good guy-bad guy routine.

As Mr. Barak was restraining the expectations of his people, preparing the Israeli people for compromise, Arafat was pumping up the Palestinian demands and preparing them for conflict. If one does not prepare one's people by telling them that they will have to compromise to get a peace, then expectations are raised and a compromise is not able to be gotten. So today, unfortunately, we must say that Yasir Arafat has not been and is not a partner for peace.

Mr. Speaker, I just watched Prime Minister Barak speak live on CNN. Once again, he declared his willingness to make peace, but he rightfully said that his nation, Israel, will do everything in its power to protect its people. Israel needs a partner for peace, a partner that does not engage and incite into violence; one that does not look the other way when there are people that are destroying ancient religious shrines in Nablus; one that does not allow their people to beat innocent Israelis to death, as happened this morning in Ramallah; and one that does everything in its power to set the conditions for peace.

The underlying basis for negotiations was the recognition of the PLO by Israel in exchange for the renunciation of violence by the PLO and Chairman Arafat.

In his September 9, 1993 letter for the late Prime Minister Rabin, Chairman Arafat ''renounced the use of terrorism and other acts of violence'' and pledged to ''prevent violence and discipline violators.'' Unfortunately, 7 years later, this has not happened.

Unless the Palestinian leader calls on his people to halt their fanatical, hostile public violence and directs the security services to maintain order, as he promised, the Palestinians will be in violation of, not only the text of the peace agreements, but the basic understanding which underlay the process.

Furthermore, as the Palestinian rock and molotov cocktail throwers and gunmen continue to rage, Israel will be within its rights as a sovereign nation to take whatever actions it needs to protect its people and frontiers.

Now, there is a moral imperative to stand our ground. Israel is not only our closest friend and ally in the Middle East, they are in the right. Israel has demonstrated its willingness to make peace and is now under attack by thousands of violent rioters. It is time for Congress to express its solidarity with the people of Israel and stand with them at this crucial time.

We must condemn the Palestinian leadership for its cowardly encouragement of mass riots and for doing so little to halt the hysterical rampagers.

We must demand that Arafat and his lieutenants use their security services to restrain unnecessary acts of violence, show respect for our holy sites, and settle grievances only through negotiations.

In the days to come, I expect new challenges to our U.S. policy; and I suspect we will arise to the occasion.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4516) ''An Act making appropriations for the Legislative Branch for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, and for other purposes.''

H.R. 4541, THE COMMODITY FUTURES MODERNIZATION ACT OF 2000

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, the estimate of private sector mandates prepared by the Congressional Budget Office for H.R. 4541, the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000, was not available when the Committee on Commerce filed its report on the bill. Pursuant to section 423(f)(1) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended, I am submitting that statement for publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, October 11, 2000.

Hon. TOM BLILEY,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed estimate of private-sector effects of H.R. 4541, the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000. CBO completed a federal cost estimate and an assessment of the bill's effects on state, local, and tribal governments on September 6.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contacts are Judy Ruud and Tim VandenBerg.

Sincerely,

BARRY B. ANDERSON
(For Dan L. Crippen, Director).

Enclosure.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE ESTIMATE OF COSTS OF PRIVATE-SECTOR MANDATES

H.R. 4541—Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000

Summary

H.R. 4541 would impose several new private-sector mandates as defined by the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) on persons or entities subject to the jurisdiction of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), registered futures associations, and electronic trading facilities. CBO cannot determine whether the direct cost of those mandates would exceed the threshold set by URMA for private-sector mandates ($109 million in 2000, adjusted annually for inflation).

Private-sector mandates contained in the bill

H.R. 4541 would impose three sets of private-sector mandates. First, it would impose Title V of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, the privacy provisions of that act, on all persons or entities subject to the jurisdiction of the CFTC. Second, under certain circumstances it would require registered futures associations to also become registered national securities associations, and hence subject them to the Securities and Exchange Commission as well as the CFTC. Third, it would authorize the CFTC to require certain electronic trading facilities to disseminate trading data.

Privacy Provisions

H.R. 4541 would extend the privacy protection provisions contained in Title V of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act to persons or entities whose financial activities are subject to the jurisdiction of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. CBO cannot estimate the costs of complying with the privacy provisions primarily because of uncertainties about how consumer privacy protections would apply to the broad categories of entities subject to the jurisdiction of the CFTC and because of the unavailability of information about the privacy protection procedures that those entities now have in place.

In accordance with CFTC implementing regulations, the bill would require affected entities to:

Develop administrative, technical, and physical safeguards of the nonpublic information they possess concerning their customers;

Disclose their policies and practices regarding the disclosure of customers' nonpublic personal information to nonaffiliated third parties when customer relationships are initiated and annually thereafter, and give the consumer the option to stop such disclosure to nonaffiliated third parties.

Safeguards. Providing adequate safeguards for customer information could impose several costs on affected entities. The largest of these, perhaps, is ensuring the technical security of customer information. Establishing such safeguards could be quite costly for some entities, particularly the measures needed to protect computer databases. However, the cost may be minimal to entities that already have adequate safeguards in place and would face few additional costs to comply with the requirements. Due to lack of information regarding the existing level of consumer information safeguards, the safeguards that might be required under the legislation and the costs involved in upgrading these safeguards, CBO cannot estimate the cost of those requirements.

Privacy Policy and Disclosure. Developing and disseminating privacy policies, establishing procedures to notify customers of possible information disclosures, and allowing customers to disallow such disclosure would involve a variety of costs. Developing privacy policies may require entities to incur legal costs. After the privacy policy has been adopted, relevant personnel may need training on new procedures. Notifying existing and new customers of the firm's privacy policy would entail printing and mailing costs. And the requirement to notify customers of information disclosures and allow them to opt out might require the development of new databases to track customers' opt-out elections. Furthermore, to the extent that the affected entities have been profiting from the disclosure of consumers' nonpublic personal information, entities may lose revenue if many of their customers opt out of such disclosure.

The total cost of complying with the bill's privacy policy and disclosure requirements is uncertain. Several factors could mitigate the costs of complying with the privacy policy and disclosure requirements. For example, some of the affected entities may only have institutional customers. Entities with no consumer accounts may not incur the costs associated with developing a privacy policy, notifying customers of the privacy policy, and tracking customers' responses allowing or disallowing disclosure of their information. The cost of complying with the privacy requirements would also be reduced to the extent that the affected entities do not disclose personal information to nonaffiliated third parties—in that case, the privacy policy would be relatively simple, and they would not need to track customers' responses to the policy. Moreover, if the CFTC or industry associations furnish model privacy policies, the cost of developing privacy policies might also be reduced. CBO was unable to obtain data on the extent to which the affected entities disclose customer information to nonaffiliated third parties, or obtain data concerning the possible cost of implementing systems to track delivery of privacy notices and customer opt-out elections.

Dual Registration of Registered Futures Associations

H.R. 4541 would require futures associations registered with the CFTC to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as a national securities associated, if any of its members effect trades in the newly authorized security future products. This provision would mandate that the National Futures Association, a self-regulatory organization for the U.S. futures industry, be registered with, and fall under the regulatory scrutiny of the SEC. The National Futures Association and the SEC do not expect this requirement to impose many additional costs since this new regulatory oversight would largely parallel existing supervision by the CFTC.

Dissemination of Trading Data by Certain Electronic Trading Facilities

H.R. 4541 would authorize the CFTC to prescribe rules and regulations to ensure timely dissemination of price, trading volume, and other trading data by electronic trading facilities dealing with transactions in exempt commodities or swaps, should the CFTC determine that the electronic trading facility performs a significant price discovery function for transactions in the cash market for the commodity underlying the contracts being traded on the electronic trading facility. Based on information provided by the CFTC, it is quite possible that the CFTC would not use this authority. If, after a period of time, the CFTC did require such an electronic trading facility to disseminate trading data, the cost to the electronic trading facility would depend upon the specific information to be released, and the type of dissemination that the CFTC required. The costs of disseminating trading data may be small if simply daily dissemination to a public source were required, but would be higher if continuous, real-time dissemination were required.

URGING ENVIRONMENTAL DEBATE BETWEEN PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I want to spend this time this evening dealing with an issue that I hope will get the attention that it deserves yet in this election. We just had the second Presidential debate last night. I still hold out hope for an environmental debate between the candidates for President as well as leaders in both parties up and down the ticket.

The significance of the environment to the American public is not just a matter of public opinion polls, although I note with interest recently a publication of the Clean Air Trust where they had conducted a survey of voters that indicated that 4 in 10 suggested that they would shun a Presidential candidate who opposed tougher new clean air standards, according to their national poll by the nonprofit Clean Air Trust. They were conducting this survey to determine the impact of just this one key environmental issue, clean air.

At the same time, nearly 6 in 10 voters say they would reward a Presidential candidate who fought to support clean air standards. These are entirely consistent with results of a separate Clean Air Trust survey of likely voters in the battleground State of Michigan. But we do not have to just look at public opinion polls.

I note with interest that, when we open up the newspapers in our communities from coast to coast, border to border, they are filled with issues of environmental concern to our citizens. A lot of the work that I do in Congress focuses on livable communities and what the Federal Government can do to be a better partner in promoting an environment where our families are safe, healthy, and economically secure.

I am pleased that the Vice President has been a champion of the Federal partnership in promoting livable communities. His activity on behalf of the President's Council for Sustainable Development, indeed, he has been pushing and probing across the board in the Federal Government for each and every agency to have their program of sustainable development, of livable communities, of ways to promote environmental enhancement.

The contrast with Governor Bush I think could not be more stark. There is no comprehensive State program in the State of Texas dealing with environmental quality and livability. Indeed, there is no indication that Governor Bush has chosen this as an area that he wants to promote Federal involvement and partnership.

When we look at the response to local communities in the State of Texas to try and deal with those problems, it appears that he does not really look with favor at initiatives at the local level.

I would quote from a recent column by Neal Peirce, one of the national journalistic experts in this arena who has been following livability environment and what happens in our metropolitan areas for several decades. He had indicated that the question about Governor Bush is why he seems oh so indifferent to America's growth quandaries. He constantly stresses local control.

But The Austin American-Statesman reports that, when the growth-deluged city of Austin, the capital, moved to regulate development and water quality, Governor Bush approved State legislation to negate all its efforts.

So it appears that he does not have a comprehensive program in the State of Texas. He does not support a comprehensive approach on the part of the Federal Government. He is willing to cut active local governments like the capital city of Austin off at the knees.

This, I think, speaks volumes to the American public about the most important challenge that we are going to be facing in terms of enhancing and maintaining our quality of life.

I think a further elaboration of the difference between the record of the Vice President and the Governor of Texas is enlightening.

The State of Texas ranks near the bottom in spending on the environment, 44th out of the 50 States in per capita spending on environmental programs, according to The Los Angeles Times last April. Texas is the third worst in the country for toxic water pollution last year. It was ranked third worst in terms of dumping chemicals into the water supply. It also ranked second worst for omitting known and suspected carcinogens to water in the country.

In 1998, Texas also had the record with the third most pollution in the country and ranked third in omitting reproductive toxins into the waterways, and second worst in dumping nitrate compounds into that State's waterways.

Governor Bush selected as his Vice Presidential nominee Dick Cheney, a gentleman, a former colleague of many in this Chamber where he served for some dozen years in the 1980s and 1990s. Secretary Cheney, as a Member of this body, voted seven times against authorizing clean water programs, often as one of a small minority of Members who voted against the authorization.

In 1986, Secretary Cheney was one of only 21 Members to vote against the appropriations to carry out the Safe Drinking Water Act. In 1987, he was one of only 26 Members who voted against overriding President Reagan's veto of the reauthorization of the Clean Water Act.

The contrast here with Vice President GORE is stark. As a Senator, GORE fought for cleaner water. He was an original cosponsor of the Water Quality Act of 1987. He has been part of an administration that has set aside more lands for Federal protection than any administration since the man who got the ball rolling, Republican President Teddy Roosevelt almost a century ago.

He has been an active promoter of critical partnerships to protect habitat. As my colleagues know, 70 percent of the continental United States is in private hands, and any successful effort to maintain and restore the Nation's wildlife must include these private landowners.

One of the most valuable tools that has evolved is the habitat conservation plan, which is a long-term agreement between government and land owners that helps ensure the survival of threatened wildlife, while still allowing productive use of the land.

Prior to 1993, only 14 such plans existed. This administration, with the Vice President as the point person on the environment, has since forged another 250 plans, protecting more than 20 million acres and 200 threatened species, voluntary programs with private landowners to protect wildlife.

I think it is also clear that the Vice President would continue to protect and perhaps even expand national parks and monuments. This has been an item of some modest concern on the floor of this House, and we have had an opportunity to discuss it. I think the Vice President is clear that he would be supportive of those efforts, and he would seek full funding of the land legacy initiative that the administration, Mr. GORE, proposed.

They have supported full and permanent funding for the Land and Water Conservation Fund. As part of the 2001 budget proposal, the President and Vice President requested $1.4 billion for the Land Legacy Initiative. I have every confidence that, as President, AL GORE would continue to insist that the Land and Water Conservation Fund be fully funded.

□ 1745

The Vice President is also on record to support reform of the antiquated mining law to help pay for conservation. Currently, the Mining Act of 1872 remains on the books exactly as it was signed by President Ulysses S. Grant more than a century and a quarter ago. It grants, effective today, allowing patents for hard rock minerals on public lands to be mined for $2.50 or $5 per acre.

Since taking office in 1993, just in the course of the last two administrations, the 1872 Mining Law has required the Department of the Interior to sign 40 mining patents that deeded away publicly owned resources valued in the billions of dollars, one estimate is more than $15 billion, to individuals and private mining companies. No guarantee that those private mining companies are even American companies. In return, the taxpayers have received a little more than $24,000.

The Vice President supports modernization of this law to take advantage of changed circumstances. We are no longer needing to bribe people to exploit the wilderness and settle the West. We can use the money from any mining royalties that we ought to grant to help pay for incentives to protect open space and help communities support local parks.

Again, as I look back and reflect on the difference that there would have between the Vice President and Governor Bush, I think this record is stark. If one reviews the record of Governor Bush, who cites his stewardship, now in his second term as governor of our country's second largest State, and look at what he has done for parks or public land in the State of Texas, I think any objective review of that record would find that it is indeed sparse.

Texas ranks number 49 out of all the States in the amount of money it spends on State parks. That is number 49, I might add, from the top to the bottom. It is next to the last. A 1998 State audit found that Texas had a funding backlog of $186 million just for maintenance of its existing parks. In 1999, the Texas Parks Commission tried to remove a cap on the sporting goods tax to increase its revenues so it could do something to help this desperate situation in the State of Texas. The governor, sadly, did not support the proposal and the measure died.

There was at least some lip service that was given by the administration of Governor Bush when he appointed a task force to find solutions to these problems. He created a task force on conservation which he ''charged with finding ways to ensure that Texas leaves a legacy for our children and grandchildren, a legacy of unwavering commitment to protect and preserve our treasured lands.'' Sounded good. But when he had an opportunity to translate this into action, the governor ignored the request for additional funding from the Texas Parks Commission.

One of the most exciting proposals that has developed in this Congress, and something that has excited the attention of Americans across the country, has been fully funding the Land and Water Conservation Act, the CARA legislation, which passed this Chamber with an overwhelming bipartisan vote under the leadership of the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), chairman of the Committee on Resources, and the ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER). That was really an artful piece of legislation that would have the opportunity of really transforming the use of our public land. It had resources for urban parks, for nature areas, for habitat restoration, conservation, purchase and maintenance, and historic activities. There was something here that excited, I think, the attention of environmentalists, conservationists, and citizens all across the country.

According to the San Antonio Express News last year, when asked if he would support the legislation, the governor did not know. I quote: ''I do not know how to answer your question.'' And to the best of my knowledge, I have not seen him adding his voice to try and pry this legislation out of the death grip that it has with the Senate leadership where it has not been permitted to move.

It is clear that Governor Bush would increase logging on public lands, but it is less clear what that environmental impact would be. He would reverse the roadless area protections that are encountered in the administration's roadless areas initiative, and this came out of his visit to Seattle, as quoted in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer on June 26 of this year.

The vice presidential nominee of the Republican Party has been clear that a Bush-Cheney administration would be very interested in reopening the issue of the lands that have been protected from development by this administration.

Another issue of great concern to those of us in the Pacific Northwest, where we are struggling with how to balance the variety of interests dealing with the problems of the Columbia River System, with the issue of endangered species, with salmon, treaty rights to Native Americans, where there are conflicts in terms of barge traffic on the rivers, recreational users, and power, this is not an easy issue; and one of the things that has been clear is that this administration is willing to explore all options, and even some that are going to be very difficult. Vice President GORE has reiterated the fact that he feels that until we have a plan in place, that we need to keep all these options on the table.

Unfortunately, Governor Bush has stepped into a difficult situation, one that does not have an obvious solution, and is willing publicly, I think sadly for political purposes, to rule out some options without having anything in the alternative. For him, evidently, not complying with the Endangered Species Act, not dealing with our commitments under treaty obligations to Native Americans, the extinction of salmon runs is, in fact, an option.

The area of clean air is another one that is of great concern, I think, to all Americans; but I want to pause at this point because I have been joined by the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY). I am going to begin a somewhat lengthy piece, but the gentleman from New York, who is a member of the Committee on Appropriations and a tireless champion for environmental interests in his district, in his State of New York, and throughout the country, I know has been deeply involved in a number of these issues. He is a member of the Subcommittee on Interior of the Committee on Appropriations as well, and I would yield to him if he has some observations or thoughts at this point as we have been discussing these issues as it relates to the Vice President, Governor Bush and the choices before us.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me, and I particularly thank the gentleman for taking this time to discuss an important issue, which has not gotten the attention that I think it deserves in the context of this particular Congress.

In fact, as a member of this Congress, I have often felt that we are fighting a defensive action here, where we are taking actions that are designed to prevent harm from being done rather than moving forward in a positive direction on a number of environmental issues that really need to be addressed. The Endangered Species Act is one, and I know that the gentleman just referenced it, that deserves a great deal of attention.

The issue of CARA, a piece of legislation which is designed to protect public lands and open space, and provide also recreational opportunities both in rural and urban settings, is a critically important piece of legislation. A good portion of that was advanced in the context of the interior bill, which we passed here just recently and which was signed by the President just the other day.

Now, the reason that that provision advanced in the interior bill was in large measure a result of the leadership provided by the administration, both the President and Vice President GORE. That interior bill contained a landmark preservation, if I am not mistaken the amount was $12 billion, over a period of time for open space protection, preservation, and also for recreational activities, again in rural but also in urban settings in association with urban parks and things of that nature.

One of the issues that I think that we really need to address, and which has not gotten enough attention, is the issue of water resources, particularly fresh water resources. It is true, and many people have observed fairly recently, that fresh water resources around the world, including those fresh water resources here in the United States, are being depleted, particularly those resources that lie in aquifers underground. We know that, for example, in the great Midwestern section of our country there is a huge underground reservoir known as the Ogallala, which runs from northern Texas up to the Dakotas, and covers a huge vast area, or at least underlies a huge vast area of the central plains.

That water resource contained in that Ogallala underground reservoir is being depleted at a rather alarming rate. This is fossil water. In other words, it is water that has lain underground for centuries and there is no visible source of rejuvenation for this aquifer. The fact that we are depleting it at such a rapid rate is something that ought to be of increasing concern.

Now, the depletion is primarily for agricultural purposes, for applications of an agricultural nature throughout that area, and, of course, good purpose. But the idea that we can continue to drain a resource in the belief that that resource is always going to be there and will not be depleted is a false notion. It is a basic fallacy, and it is one with which we have to come to grips.

So I think that this issue of fresh water resources is an issue that is going to require a great deal of attention from this Congress in the future and from the next administration. And that, of course, raises the question of what kind of administration do we want to have in place here to succeed the Clinton administration which will husband these resources in a reasonable way; in a logical and rational and intelligent way. I think the answer to that question becomes quite apparent when we look at the choices that we have before us.

We have on the one hand Governor Bush, who has a record of depletion and deterioration of resources in the State in which he is the executive; and, on the other hand, we have Vice President GORE, who has a very deep and long record of environmental protection and husbanding of resources going back to the time when he served in this House, and then later in the Senate, and all of which he brought to his position as Vice President of the United States.

So I think as people make decisions with regard to this upcoming election, and I think it is easy to lose track of time around here, but I think it is somewhere in the neighborhood of 3 weeks now until November 7, as people begin to think more closely about the decision they are going to make with regard to who is going to be the leader of our country for the next 4 years, I think one of the issues that they ought to factor into their decision-making is the issue of the environment and who among those who are holding themselves out for this office for President of the United States is best equipped and has the knowledge and the sensitivity and the ability to care about this issue. Who is best equipped, then, in that regard, to assume the responsibility of President of the United States.

□ 1800

So this is one of the issues that is of concern to me as I think about the upcoming election and I think about the kind of leadership that we are going to need to carry us forward into the 21st century at a time when environmental resources are going to be increasingly under adverse pressure and forced into adverse circumstances.

So that is a question which I hope people will be thinking closely about as they make their decision about the President and Members of the Congress and Members of the Senate as they cast their vote on November 7.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I would like if I could, with the indulgence of the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY), yield to our colleague, the gentleman from the State of Maryland (Mr. CARDIN), who has a long and distinguished record as a State legislator, as a private citizen, and as a Member of this Congress for focusing in on many of these concerns that I know my colleague shares.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, let me thank my friend for yielding to me and thank him for bringing this issue before this body.

As he pointed out, in last night's debate, we had a little bit of a discussion about the environment, not enough of a discussion on the environment. There is a clear difference between the Vice President and the Governor on the environmental issues.

The Vice President, as the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY) has pointed out, throughout his entire career has been one of the real leaders on sensible environmental policies, policies that not only help preserve our environment but also deal with economic expansion but not at the cost of destroying our woods or our airs. He understands the importance of smart growth. He understands the issues of being sensitive to our environment.

I particularly appreciate the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) taking this time. Because when we contrast that to the record of Governor Bush and the State of Texas, which has one of the worst environmental records of any State in this Nation, and the Vice President mentioned some statistics yesterday as related to health care, it is very clear that the State of Texas has been at the bottom of our Nation in providing health benefits for its citizens, but it is also at the bottom of our Nation on its record on environment.

They have literally destroyed much of their environment at the cost of trying to do certain types of growth when it was not necessary to do that. It is certainly not the model of leadership that we need in this nation.

This issue is particularly important to the people of Maryland, important to all the States. But the quality of life in Maryland is very much dependent upon the quality of our environment. We pride ourselves on the Chesapeake Bay, the most important natural resource in our State.

I must tell my colleagues, when I was speaker of our State legislature, we took on the challenge to try to reclaim the Chesapeake Bay. Because it was becoming unsafe in many areas for people to swim or for people to use for recreational purposes. If they fell into our harbor, they did not have to worry about drowning, they would worry about whether they could survive the pollution that was coming in from all sectors, from the industrial use, from the farming use, from just not paying attention to our environment.

We made a commitment 25 years ago to do something about it. And we have. We have done a pretty good job in helping to clean up the Chesapeake Bay. But I must tell my colleagues, we need a clean air policy because that affects the quality of the Bay and acid rain. We need a smart growth policy because that affects the quality of the waters leading into the Chesapeake Bay. We need a national policy on environment. We need leadership in the executive branch that will be sensitive to these environmental issues.

Mr. Speaker, there is such a contrast between the two candidates for President on this issue. And I hope that in the remaining 3-plus weeks, less than 4 weeks, before the election that we will focus as a Nation on the environmental issues.

Look at the record of the Vice President and the Governor on the issues that we have been talking about this evening. They are very much related to the quality of life in our community, very much related to our commitment to try to improve the quality of life in each of the districts that we represent.

So I hope that we will take the time to compare the candidates who want to be President of this great Nation as to where do they stand on smart growth, that is placing people near where they work and where they live so that we can put less stress on the commute times in this country, less time on our energy dependency.

We are too dependent upon imported oil. We all know that. Part of the solution, as the Vice President has said, is less use of fossil fuels in our community, more smart growth in our community. That will help the quality of life for people who live in my district and every district in the Nation, and it will also help preserve the Chesapeake Bay and the other great bodies of water in our Nation and our air that we breathe.

I have been disappointed by what we have done in this session not because of the administration but because we have been spending more time trying to beat down some bad action by our colleagues, particularly on the other side of the aisle, when we should be looking at building a record that we can look back at with pride.

I very much hope that as we get into the last weeks of this campaign that we will challenge the leadership of our candidates running for President as to how they stand on these issues. I think there is no comparison here between the Vice President, who in his entire career in Government has shown leadership and sensitivity to the interrelationship between all the environmental issues, and the Governor, who has a record that none of us want to emulate from the State of Texas.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for his comments.

Two observations. One, I appreciate his reference to growing smarter in terms of wiser use of our resources and avoiding unplanned growth and sprawl.

The State of Maryland has recently been cited as another national model for experimenting with this. And I think it is important that, unlike what some of the people who are attempting to be critical of this, there is no effort with smart growth to deny choices to the American public. The notion here is to give them more opportunities in terms of where they live, how they move.

If the only way somebody can get their children to a soccer game or to school is to drive them, if they cannot walk, if they cannot cycle, if they cannot get there on their own, if they have no access to transit, it narrows their choices. If there are neighborhoods that are disposable, hollowed out, it narrows the choices.

One of the things that I am, I guess, most appreciative of for the Vice President is taking the risk that some people will try and turn these concepts on their head and suggest that somehow this is a war on the suburbs or it is trying to deny choices, when nothing could be further from the truth than trying to promote more opportunity.

I am prepared to talk a little further on clean air, but I notice we have been joined by my colleague the gentleman from Southern California (Mr. SHERMAN).

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I just want to associate myself with the comments of my colleagues. I could speak a minute on this issue, but I think I would simply repeat what the rest of them have said. I have some comments about some of the fiscal issues and if the gentleman has time at the end and wants to yield time to me to discuss that point, I will. Otherwise, I thank the gentleman on the other side for agreeing to allow me to have 5 minutes at the end of his remarks.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I continue to yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY).

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Speaker, let me make an observation, if I may, in connection with the comments that were made just a moment ago by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN).

I think that occasionally, if we look at these issues superficially, we fail to recognize the co-relationship between issues that sometimes are taken separately and distinctly and not joined together.

The gentleman mentioned the relationship, for example, between the environment and energy. And there is a clear nexus there, obviously, that needs to be dealt with. And in that regard, it gives another opportunity to talk a little bit about the initiatives of Vice President GORE and his leadership on both environmental and energy issues in a way that addresses the complexities of both.

For example, we know that we are increasingly dependent upon foreign oil. I think we are importing now something in the neighborhood of 56 percent of the oil that we consume here in the United States from outside of our borders. This becomes, at that level, an issue even of national security. We are far too dependent upon outside sources for the fossil fuel that we depend upon for transportation, for heating, and for a variety of other uses.

Now, that is something that we have to deal with. We have to gain energy independence to a greater degree. We have to reduce our reliance on foreign oil. How do we do that? One of the ways in which we do it is to develop alternative sources of energy. And this is an issue on which Vice President GORE has taken a leadership position that in fact was far ahead of its time. He was talking about these things when it was not apparent to most people that it would be necessary to take any action in this area.

For example, he was talking about the need to develop photovoltaic cells, for example, and direct solar energy for the creation of less electricity and, by the way, in so doing, creating a vast new industry for America which will enable us to address other issues, such as our balance of trade, balance of trade deficit.

If we are developing new sources of energy for a world that is going to be crying out for new sources of energy, that enables us to deal with our own energy situation more intelligently, reduce our dependence upon fossil fuel, create energy alternatively, and at the same time produce a product that will be desired by virtually every other country in the world.

We have an opportunity, in other words, to take a leadership position here in a new industrial venture that will enable us to accomplish a variety of objectives in a very concise and particular way. And for that I think Vice President GORE deserves a great deal of credit for stepping out in front on this issue and directing the way toward its solutions.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I say to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY) that I could not agree with him more.

It is rather tragic at a time now when we see the great peril that the Middle East is again embroiled in as the peace negotiations falter and the acts of violence are currently playing themselves out, and we think that if at the end of the Iraqi war if we had made a commitment that we would not ever again put ourselves in a position where we had to send American soldiers in the pursuit of oil or to protect the Kuwaiti fields or to protect the Saudi Arabia fields, or what have you, that we would have pursued this vast array of alternatives that the Vice President has been talking about almost his entire public life, that we could have, in fact, pursued alternatives in energy consumption, in conservation, in technologies that would have, in fact, really made us independent and insulated us in these kinds of situations.

But, in fact, we chose to go another route. And that was massive increases in consumption, the failure to go for the efficiencies, the failure to recognize what was readily available on the market and use that here domestically or to sell it overseas. And yet, even now we continue to see the other side of the aisle and Governor Bush suggesting, if we just had one more drilling of oil.

The fact is we have increased the production of oil in America over the last 10 years rather dramatically. The hottest oil play in the world is the Gulf of Mexico. Oil companies have spent tens of billions of dollars to be able to go in and to drill there, and it has obviously been worth their while. It is a fantastic find because of new technologies in that field. But it has not made us any more independent. It has not made us any more independent. It has continued the addiction that we have had to foreign oil.

And so, rather than get our house in shape here and get our country in shape as the gentleman has suggested and as the Vice President has suggested over the last decade, we have done just the opposite, we have made ourselves more dependent. And like any other addiction, it is very difficult to break. But we ought to stop it at this point and recognize the peril it places us in internationally, the peril it places our economy in, and the unneeded expenditures by Americans for energy that is not necessarily simply because of the waste that is involved.

□ 1815

That was clearly one of the choices that was presented in the debate last night about whether or not we embrace this in terms of the future and in terms of the knowledge that we now have about energy efficiencies, conservations and technologies or whether we just say, ''Let's go back to what we were doing in Pennsylvania at the turn of the century and just put another hole in the ground.'' It is wonderful to get the oil, but it does not relieve the dependence and there is no indication that it ever will relieve the dependence unless, in fact, we go to these new technologies. I just want to thank the gentleman for making that point.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Reclaiming my time briefly, I could not agree more with my distinguished colleague from California. He points out that we are, in fact, extracting more energy from more sources. But if we as a Nation that represents 5 or 6 percent of the world's population continue to use 25, 30 percent of the energy supply and if our primary bets are on fossil fuels that are, in fact, finite no matter what some would hope, we are on a downward path that can only lead to disaster.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. When 70 percent of the import is for transportation, we deny the fact that readily available today at these market prices, with no compromise in safety, speed or technology, a car is available, you can get 35 miles to the gallon. Not a big push from where we are today, but a dramatic change in our consumption pattern and our independence, if you will. That could just be done today with essentially no sacrifice being made. Not a dramatic runup in the price of an automobile, not a dramatic compromise in the safety for you or your families and your comfort or anything else. It is available today.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Could those vehicles, energy-efficient vehicles be made here in the United States by American workers?

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Those vehicles could be made here with no change. The difference is that all the advances that we have made on engine efficiency, the dramatic increases that we have made in efficiencies of the internal combustion engine have been loaded up with weight so that you can drive a bigger and a heavier car rather than returning the benefit to the economy, to the consumer and to the environment. We just decided we would take all the improvement and we would negate it by putting 9,000 pounds on top of it. So here we get what the industry said they could do, what many of us in the Congress wanted them to do, what the environment needs them to do, and then we just larded it up. So rather than driving an ordinary car, we took all those benefits and just put them in, if you will, to style. That is costing the American consumer a huge amount of money, a huge amount of money for no real benefit at all.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Is it possible that if we had at least studied the CAFE standards, that if we would have applied the CAFE standards across all of today's fleet, not having massive exemptions, that we could have actually had the best of both worlds?

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. It is all there. It is there. But obviously when we suggest to them that they can do this voluntarily, just like when George Bush suggested to all those old polluters in Texas to just do it voluntarily, they chose to do it another way. They chose to do it to maximize profit and forget the public interest, forget the needs to clean up the environment, forget the air quality, forget the economy of people who are reaching into their pocket to pay $2 for gasoline in a car that is getting them 20 miles to the gallon when, in fact, they could be getting 35 with none of these trade-offs.

It could be done here, it could be done with American labor. They are the best autoworkers in the world. That is not even a contest. But it is not being done because huge, huge cars now are cash cows for the automobile companies and that is more important to them than the public safety, the environment, household incomes, expenses or our dependency on foreign oil.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Reclaiming my time, I was struck by your comment about the voluntary emission reduction plan in Texas. This is one of the innovations that has been cited by Governor Bush under his leadership. There was legislation that was introduced, he supported, Texas Senate bill 766 that took effect more than a year ago. It has been touted as an approach to voluntarily clean up these 760 old plants that were grandfathered in. I find it fascinating that as a result of this effort, there have been 73 so-called pioneer companies out of the 760 that have taken part, that the majority of these plants, even of the 73 that took part, there are only 28 that even applied for permits, only 19 received them and only five of these volunteers with permits that actually required reductions. So there are actually only five out of 760 plants that are actually producing any result and it is something like 0.3 percent.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. That is the exact point. When you say to these companies, there is going to be voluntary compliance, if you can do it, do it, we would all appreciate it. You are also sending the same signal that says, ''And if by the way you continue to pollute, that's okay, too. If you choose to clean up, that would be nice, but if you choose not to clean up, it's the same.''

Before we had the Clean Air Act and I know the gentleman is very interested in the Clean Water Act, before we had the Clean Air and the Clean Water Act, I do not remember companies walking in and saying, ''I'm going to voluntarily clean up the arsenic in the water,'' or ''I'm going to voluntarily clean up the benzene in the air, the lead in the air or the pollution in the Hudson River.'' I do not remember that happening. It was only because of the Clean Air Act, the Clean Water Act that these companies stepped forward. They did it because it was the law of the land. What we have seen for 6 years in this Congress under a Republican majority and what we have seen in the State of Texas is continued efforts by corporate entities to lean on the political system so it is not the law of the land. And if it is not the law of the land, you will not clean up the Hudson River, you will not clean up the Sacramento River, you will not clean up the Mississippi River, you will not clean up these areas that America holds as treasures.

And so as the gentleman points out, when Governor Bush got all done with his volunteer stepping forward, this is like a bad film of the Army: I need these volunteers, now everybody take one step forward and everybody steps back and one guy is left there as the volunteer. This is like a bad movie. If we work at this rate on cleaning up pollution in America that they are in Texas, we will all be choking to death. It is not happening. The figures point it out. The Governor could sit there last night and say, ''We have a plan and it's working.'' Well, if this is his definition of ''working,'' there is a horror story in store for the American public, because that does not address the needs of the cities and others who have air pollution problems and toxic problems. That is just unacceptable.

We have struggled in this Congress to try to get entities to step forward and be responsible for Superfund sites, for water pollution and air pollution. I think the gentleman makes a very important point about the so-called voluntary program in Texas. You voluntarily get not to obey the law is what you do. That is what you get to volunteer to do.

Mr. HINCHEY. The gentleman from California, I think, makes very important points about it as well. It is even true that after you require it in the law, if you do not have proper enforcement of the law, even then you will find some of these corporations that were responsible for the pollution in the first instance resisting taking the appropriate and responsible action to clean up the mess that they made.

The gentleman mentioned the Hudson River. That is one clear example where you have had PCB contamination now for decades and the responsible parties have not done anything to address that pollution. In fact, what they have done is they have come here to the Congress, they have gotten Members of the Congress to introduce amendments to pieces of legislation which will, in fact, delay any act of responsibility on their part. So not only do voluntary actions not work but in addition to the law we have found in our experience that you also have to have effective enforcement. No, absolutely not, they are not going to do any of these things voluntarily because it costs them money, and it should cost them money because they made enormous profits in creating that pollution in the first place in most instances. But in addition to having good, decent, powerful laws, you also have to have consistent and effective and honest enforcement.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) who has been a leader on a whole host of environmental and energy issues.

Mr. MARKEY. I thank the gentleman very much, and I thank him for holding this very important special order.

Mr. Speaker, on September 29 of this year, Governor Bush of Texas, attempting to reassure the public that there was no choice to make between oil production and preserving wilderness waxed eloquent on the subject of the Arctic Refuge.

''We should open up a small fraction of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge for responsible oil and gas exploration. The Vice President says he would rather protect this refuge than gain the energy. But this is a false choice. We can do both,'' said Mr. Bush, ''taking out the energy and leaving only footprints.'' Leaving only footprints. A wonderful image, is it not, leaving only footprints in the Arctic Refuge? Like Robert Frost and his little cat's feet or Robinson Crusoe discovering he was not alone when he spied the telltale footprints of Friday on the shore of sand before the high tide washed them away.

An image of footprints in the Arctic Refuge that the petroleum industry would leave and would love to have linger in our minds, these footprints of Friday or cat's paws in the sand, children walking along the beach. Footprints.

It is against the law, of course, as we know, to drill for oil in the Arctic Refuge and the only way that will ever change is if the industry manages to get Congress to change the law. They are very resourceful, this industry. They have put together a dream ticket in the person of an oilman for President and an oilman for Vice President. And now they are engaging in industrial strength poetry as they try to win a license to destroy the wilderness of one of the last places on God-created Earth that man has yet to try to improve.

So Governor Bush says his plans would only impact about 8 percent of the refuge. Well, it turns out that what they want to drill is in the biological heart of the refuge, where polar bears den and caribou give birth. Imagine your doctor telling you, ''This won't hurt. We're only going to drill in a small fraction of your body, only about 8 percent, only around the region of your heart, only that 8 percent of your body. That is the only place we're going to operate. Don't worry, we won't touch the rest of you. Only that 8 percent. The heart.'' The heart of this refuge.

Now, let us take a look at the industrial footprints that have already been left on the North Slope by environmentally sensitive oil companies which want to drill in the heart of the refuge. These pictures are from Dead Horse and from Prudhoe Bay. They are part of a vast industrial complex that generates on average one toxic spill a day of oil or chemicals or industrial waste of some kind. It seeps into the tundra and becomes part of a new and improved North Slope as it is viewed by the oil industry. This energy sacrifice zone already spews more nitrogen oxide pollution into the Arctic each year than the city of Washington, D.C.

□ 1830

That is all of the pollution created in Washington, D.C. is not as great as the pollution created by these sites already in this Arctic North Slope area. As we can see, the drilling for oil takes a huge amount of equipment for roads, for pipes, for wells, for pumping. All the trappings of a massive industrial undertaking have been hauled or flown or barged to the North Slope around Deadhorse and Prudhoe Bay. The companies have been able to afford to bring everything in to such a remote location because today they are making money. But guess what? Tomorrow it will still be there, and tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. All this stuff never leaves. The roads, the pipes, the dry holes, the bulldozers, the spent wells, the gravel pits, it all stays. And together, it makes up a footprint that can only be described as a world-class mess, and it is going to stay that way because once the industry starts making money up there, the last thing they are going to do is to go into debt in order to clean it up.

The industrial footprint extends for miles. When it is overlayed on the refuge, we can see that it would end any notion of this treasured corner of God Almighty's earth remaining wild, untrammeled, and untouched.

Let me finish by noting that this is Federal land that has been set aside for all of the people of the United States. It does not belong to the oil companies. It does not belong to just one State. It is a public wilderness treasure. We are all the trustees. As far as I am concerned, we are going to have to work as hard as we can in order to make sure that this incomparable wilderness is not touched. There are plenty of other places that can be explored in Alaska; and as Joe LIEBERMAN said in his debate, if we just increase fuel efficiency of an automobile three miles a gallon, it would produce more oil than all of this Arctic wilderness.

Let me conclude and compliment the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for holding this important special order. I think all of these issues have to be discussed.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. UDALL) joining us, and I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. UDALL), who has been active in these issues since long before he came to this Chamber.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I wanted to associate myself with the comments of my colleagues and in particular acknowledge the articulate and eloquent comments from the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) about the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. As I think he pointed out, the geologists tell us we have probably something along the order of 6 months' supply in this area, and to me it would be a big mistake for that short-term supply of oil to trample an area that was described in such fashion. It is a trade-off that is not really acceptable, I think.

What is acceptable? Well, if we look at what Vice President Gore has been talking about, what is acceptable is to throw ourselves into all of these opportunities that we have to develop different types of energy production methods that are really exciting technologies out there. One hundred years ago, when petroleum was discovered, there were only two or three obvious uses for it. What did we do as a country? What did we do as a society? We said let us invest in research and development.

The Federal Government stepped in, and now we have almost countless uses for petroleum. In fact, some historians, I think, will tell us that we wasted it in our automobiles in the latter half of the 20th century.

We have very promising technologies in solar, as demonstrated by phototechnologies. We have wind technologies where the price of kilowatts is coming down dramatically. Biogas. We ought to be throwing all of those kinds of technologies into the mix at this time. I think we are going to see some enormously exciting things happen.

It is a false choice: it is going to hurt our economy, or it is going to hurt our environment. It is truly a false choice and the Vice President is saying, look, we have incredible opportunities in the developing world to take these technologies to places like China and Indonesia and India, and in the process do right by our economy, do right by the economic development opportunities. So the Vice President looking ahead, oil is going to be a thing of the past; the geologists tell us that those supplies are limited, that in the next 100 years oil as we know it will not be available to us. Let us look ahead, follow the leadership and the vision of the Vice President.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I am sorry, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time has expired.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I had yielded the gentleman 2 of 3 of my minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Apparently he used more than the 2 minutes. I am sorry if there is a misunderstanding, but the hour is up.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I would ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. I would advise the gentleman that a unanimous consent is not acceptable under a special order for additional time.

TAXATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER).

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the courtesy of the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN). I am sorry, but I thought the Chair would notify me when the time had expired. I apologize.

Mr. Speaker, the Vice President has sometimes been accused of being sort of robotic and wooden. In fact, he has joked about it himself. But there is one thing that that man is passionate about. It is the environment. When I look at the dismal record in the State of Texas with the air quality deteriorating, I look for the passion and the commitment from the governor of that State, but I do not see it. I think there is a huge difference between the two, and I hope that the American public will have the opportunity in the remaining 3½ weeks to focus on this.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to address yesterday's debate and focus on taxation. Why such a dry topic as taxation? After all, one of the candidates seems like a much nicer, more likeable guy. Why do we not just make him President by acclamation? Well, it seems that running the Federal Government is a little bit more complicated than just being a nice and congenial individual.

First, let us talk about the cause for our prosperity. We have the longest expansion in this country's history. It has lasted so long some people take it for granted, but we should not because it arises from the combination of two very important causes; one of which is the ingenuity, the hard work and the inventiveness of the American people working in the private sector. But let us remember, Americans worked hard in the early 1980s, the late 1980s, and the early 1990s; but not until the mid-1990s did our prosperity begin to bear fruit.

Why is that? Because only then was it combined with the other essential element: Federal fiscal responsibility. Responsibility at the Federal level is something this administration achieved when most of us thought it was impossible, and in doing so they have given us lower interest rates, available capital for the private sector, and a lower inflation rate.

The governor of Texas would have us put this all at risk for $1.5 trillion of tax cuts, nearly half of which goes to the richest 1 percent of Americans; plus another $1 trillion in unstated costs as the cost of shifting from our present Social Security system to this new Social Security system he promises with individual accounts funded by a trillion dollars that no one mentions.

Let us talk about taxes. There are basically three taxes that support the Federal Government: the estate tax, which falls chiefly on the richest 1.5 percent of Americans; the income tax which is paid by everyone except the poor; and the FICA tax, the payroll tax that is borne by the poor and the middle class and has only a tiny effect on the rich.

The governor said last night, I believe everyone who pays taxes ought to get relief; but what he did not mention was that there are over 15 million Americans who pay that FICA tax, that payroll tax, and do not pay an income tax and do not get a penny of relief under his program. There are, in fact, 30 million Americans who pay a FICA tax with no net income tax liability, and over half of them, 15 million Americans, pay a net FICA tax even adjusted for the earned income tax credit which they receive; 15 million Americans that the governor from Texas cannot see apparently because they are poor. They are the janitors; they are the men and women who pick up at restaurants; they are people working hard every day to support families on incomes of $10,000 or $15,000 and they do not get a penny. But 43 percent of George Bush's tax benefits go to the top 1 percent of Americans; and that is more than he spends on health, Medicare, education and the military.

Last night, Governor Bush told us that only $223 billion goes to the richest 1 percent. He is right, if we only look at the income tax. But if we look at the estate tax, we see another $500 billion going to the wealthiest 1 to 1½ percent of Americans. So we look at the estate tax and the income tax combined and we see roughly $700 billion going to the wealthiest Americans.

But Mr. Bush cannot see half a trillion dollars in tax reduction, cannot notice it and denies that it exists because, after all, it is estate tax relief for the very wealthiest Americans. He cannot see 15 million poor Americans. He cannot see half a trillion dollars going to the wealthy. I think we could only describe this as fuzzy fiscal facts; and we need instead, as our President, someone who will provide tax relief to working Americans and preserve our fiscal responsibility.

TRIBUTE TO CONGRESSMAN TOM BLILEY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, before I get on with the business at hand, I would like to make some comments about the hour or so that we have just heard of facts that just simply do not bear up under the reality of what has happened in Texas in the last few years.

Since 1995, Texas has led the country in reducing the release of disposal of toxic pollution and has led it by 43 million pounds of reduction.

Since 1994, industrial air emissions in Texas have fallen by 11 percent. The EPA says that that is the fact. Under legislation signed by Governor Bush, Texas became the third State in the Nation to require pollution reductions and permits from grandfathered utilities, utilities that would not have had to meet these new standards. Governor Bush said they would have to meet these new standards. Under that plan, they will reduce nitrogen oxide pollution by 50 percent and sulfur dioxide emissions by 25 percent by 2003. Governor Bush has been praised for his leadership in requiring air pollution reductions from these utilities, and the record is clear on that.

The Wall Street Journal in September of this year said that no one in the Clinton administration has been willing to face this issue separately.

I think what we see happening on the floor is a willingness to distort the facts. We see a willingness to talk about an America that Americans would not want to see happen in our country in terms of the kinds of solutions that have been proposed, but even those solutions, the gentleman from California talking to the gentleman from Oregon a minute ago, talking about electric cars, said that all this could be done today. Well, if it could have been done today, why has it not been done for the last 8 years? That was maybe the greatest condemnation of the point they were trying to make that was made on the floor today, but that is not the purpose of our order here tonight.

The purpose of the order tonight is to talk about the 5 decades of service of the chairman of the Committee on Commerce, the oldest committee in the House, a committee that has such jurisdiction that approximately half of all the legislation that comes to the House comes through the Committee on Commerce, a committee for the last 6 years that has been chaired by the gentleman from Virginia (TOM BLILEY).

□ 1845

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) began his political career, as others will talk about in a few minutes, when he was elected to the city council in Richmond, Virginia. He served as vice mayor, he served as mayor, and then in 1980, 20 years ago, he was elected to the Congress. He was elected in 1980.

He had steered Richmond through some of its greatest challenges as the schools were desegregated, despite the unpopularity of the measures that were taken at the time. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) as the mayor said that ''This job will be done,'' and stepped forward and carried the load of seeing that that happened in his city.

As chairman of the Committee on Commerce, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) led the drive to enact mammography quality standards, assuring the safety, accuracy, and overall quality of mammogram services for women.

As chairman, he led the passage of the 1996 Telecommunications Act, which has unleashed many of the innovative forces and gains in efficiency that are driving our economy forward today. He spearheaded enactment of securities litigation reform, and a host of other reforms that my colleagues will talk about.

They will also talk about their pride in being able to serve with him, a person who served 3 years in the Navy and left the Navy as a lieutenant; a person who the National Journal in a front page feature called ''Mr. Smooth'' because of the way he gets his job done.

We will talk about his family: his wonderful wife, Mary Virginia, his two children, his grandchildren; about his commitment in his whole political career to always be sure that Sunday was reserved for family, a commitment that my wife has pointed out to me is something that I should emulate, and the absolute dedication of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) to preserving that time for church and family.

He has done a great job. He has made many friends. His leadership will be missed on our committee. I do not know how his teammate on the tennis court will deal with that, or whether they have made plans about their continued competition. But I am glad to yield to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE).

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Missouri for yielding to me.

Before I talk about the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), I want to commend the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) for his comments regarding the previous hour. Much of that rhetoric was reckless, and it was obviously designed to trash George Bush of Texas, and I thank the gentleman for responding to that.

Mr. Speaker, I met the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) primarily through tennis. Mr. Speaker, as we know, many Members of Congress or most Members of Congress who are involved in recreation do so in golf. Hunting and fishing would come next. My friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY), is a good basketball player in his own right.

I see my friends, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON), and we enjoy tennis. I met the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) on the tennis court. What struck me initially was his James River-Virginia dialect. My staffers will say to me when I leave work in the evening, ''Take Cah,'' meaning to take care. That is the way the gentleman from Virginia says it. They emulate him almost precisely accurately.

As Members may know, before he came to the Congress, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) was an embalmer, a funeral home operator. When I first came to the Congress, my mayor back home is an embalmer, a funeral home operator, and the gentleman from Virginia knew him as mayor.

He came to me one day and in his James River dialect, he says, ''How do you get along with your mayuh?'' I said, ''I get along fine with my mayor.'' He said, ''Well, if you have any trouble with him, I will talk to him mayor to mayor, gravedigger to gravedigger.''

I did not have to call him in because my mayor and I did get along very well.

I would be remiss if I did not mention the turf battles that go on up here between the prestigious Committee on Commerce members here who have flanked me on either end here and the Committee on the Judiciary here on which I served. We have had turf battles when the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL) was chairman, and when the Republicans became the majority party in 1994, I said, ''Finally we will get rid of these turf battles.''

Mr. Speaker, it must be the water they drink over there in the Committee on Commerce, because the turf battles would continue. Someone said to me, how I would respond to the turf battles. I said, ''Have the Committee on Commerce people keep their grubby paws off the Committee on the Judiciary issues and it will be resolved.'' But we will hear more about that later.

Mr. Speaker, finally, in closing, I want to say that the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), and the gentleman from Missouri has already said it very accurately, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), a former Democrat converted to Republican; the gentleman from Virginia, mayor; the gentleman from Virginia, Congressman; the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Chairman, and has served very well, following the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), who also served as a very able chairman; the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), tennis player; the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), a sailor, and in fact, maybe sailor par excellence. I am told his sailing skills have been refined to almost a sophisticated element now.

My staffers refer to him as the distinguished Virginia gentleman. I say to him tonight, to the distinguished Virginia gentleman, we will miss him here. Best wishes to him and Mary Virginia, the two children, and the grandchildren.

I want to commend my friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) for having taken out this special order in honor of his chairman and our friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I am certainly grateful to be joined by the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE).

In spite of his totally erroneous perception of what happens in our conflict between the two committees, we all know who is truly at fault. The gentleman is outnumbered here today in a significant way, Mr. Chairman. He is a great friend of our chairman and he appreciates us.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I see the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) has already gotten into the gentleman's head, when the gentleman from Missouri calls my charges erroneous.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, in spite of the great accent that the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE) after all those years on the tennis court has managed to be able to emulate from our great chairman, the gentleman from Virginia, I saw a video the other night. I do not know that I ever saw a more accurate performance of the chairman than that of the great member of our committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY). It was an odd combination of a Bostonian reserve and southern charm when he had that bow tie on and was talking about our chairman.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY).

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I over the last 20 years have come to know the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) very well. Yes, we do share several things in common. He is Irish Catholic, as am I. Mary Virginia, his wife, is Irish Catholic. What are the odds of two Irish Catholics being in Richmond? I think it is pretty slight.

So his good fortune on this planet has obviously been marked by that greatest of all achievements in his life, his marriage to Mary Virginia, and the family which they created.

I know that he in his public life is animated by the values that his mother and father instilled in him. I know that he tries every day in our committee to ensure that those principles are in fact fulfilled. I know that those values are animated by the Jesuit education which he was able to obtain at Georgetown University, the same Jesuit education which I have.

As we know, the Jesuits can educate in a way in which liberal Democrats and conservative Republicans can both be proud. That is the greatness of the Jesuit tradition. I appreciate that.

If there were two incidents that come to mind when I think of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), they are these.

When Richmond was under a desegregation order in the 1970s, it would be almost impossible to find a more difficult situation in a more difficult State to effectuate the desegregation of a school system.

If I was going to pick one person who could preside over the delicate job of implementing a desegregation order in a southern city, I would pick the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), because I am sure that then, as we all know now, he is the one person who, with fairness and honesty, can deal with all sides in a deliberation. We know that the Richmond story turned out to be a success, a model.

In my own career, I think that while less sensitive, from the perspective of the 1990s in this Congress, when history looks back, they will say that the most important piece of legislation which passed was the 1996 Telecommunications Act. It was not just one piece of legislation, it was 20 pieces of legislation in one. It dealt with every aspect of telecommunications, computer, Internet, satellite, cable, in our country. It rewrote all the laws.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) presided over that in the Committee on Commerce on this House floor and in the conference committee with the Senate. The bill is not perfect, we all know that. Nothing is. But a lot of times when people are doing comparisons, they let the perfect be the enemy of the very good. This is a very good bill.

By the year 2000, we have something which stands in testament to the success of that bill. We call it today the NASDAQ. The NASDAQ is nothing more now than the compilation of all the companies that have been the product of that 1996 Telecommunications Act, and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) stand at the front of the line of those who deserve the credit for that becoming a new blueprint for our country.

The rest of the world has not caught up. It is difficult to change laws in a way that creates a competitive climate that allows for any entrepreneur or any company to believe that if they can raise the money and they have a good idea, that they can successfully compete in a modern telecommunications environment.

That is why we right now are number one looking over our shoulder at number two, three, and four in the world in all of these areas. It is not that we are number one necessarily in every area, but in totality we clearly are the world leader.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) was the principal author of that piece of legislation. I stand in admiration for his great contribution to the only on that issue. I mention it because it stands first among all, but it does not mean that there were not dozens of others that we could go down the litany and talk about here this evening.

It is only to serve as an example of the type of historic leadership which he has given in his hometown and here in Washington throughout his lifetime, and again, as I say, always animated by the values of his parents, his wife, Mary Virginia, and the Jesuits.

As he leaves, this place, having been enriched by his presence, will be able to I think congratulate him on a successful career of historic proportions, and know that we will not see his like again.

I thank the gentleman for holding this special order.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for taking the time to come tonight. I also mention that we have a number of members of our committee and Members of Congress, Members from Virginia, who have left for the RECORD the comments they want to insert in the RECORD tonight from both sides of the aisle, and certainly I am grateful for the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) taking his time to be here.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations of the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Missouri for reserving this special order.

I rise to pay special tribute to my friend and colleague and leader of our committee, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), our chairman.

There is not a finer committee in the Congress than the Committee on Commerce. I wish my colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE), was still here for me to rib him, because he knows in fact that it is the best committee in the Congress for a lot of reasons: the jurisdiction, whether it be health care, trade, commerce, telecommunications, you name it, it comes under the authority of our committee.

If we look at the legislation that passes through here in the House on a weekly basis, really about one-third to 40 percent of the major bills that pass through this Congress originate in the Committee on Commerce.

It is a terrific committee to serve on. We have wonderful Members. We have terrific staff, hard-working. We have had a wonderful leader in the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) the last 6 years.

□ 1900

Mr. Speaker, I was fortunate when I was first placed on the Committee on Commerce to serve under then ranking member of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY). He was always fair, and he has always been fair, certainly in his 6 years as he led this committee in so many ways that will impact all of America for many years to come.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) is a straight shooter. Yes, we knew when we were in his doghouse, but there was always a way to get out. He wanted an answer, he usually had the votes, and if you were straight up with him, your reputation stayed honest and strong, and he was able and willing to help you on a whole host of issues as legislation moved through the Congress.

I am only sorry tonight that the hour is late. We are all trying to get home, back to our districts. Congress will not be in session tomorrow. I have had the wonderful opportunity of serving with him also on the tennis court, opponent, as well as partner. He plays on the court just as hard as he plays in committee. This Congress would be far better off to have more gentlemen like the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

There is not a day that he has not been able to go home or he has not been able to have his head high in the issues that he helped lead knowing he has done the right thing. His impact will be felt not only on this body, but across the country for generations to come.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) for reserving this special hour for a really very special guy, a real gentleman in every respect of the word. I thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON) for all he has done for us taking the time and also for the great leadership he has shown on the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations and congratulate him on the legislation that was passed this week to deal with a significant problem of public safety that we have seen develop over the issues of tires and automobile safety in the last few months. I appreciate the gentleman's great leadership on this, bringing this bill to the floor and having it overwhelmingly adopted here on the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I yield now to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN), my good friend, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications, Trade and Consumer Protection, a person who is knowledgeable in the intricacies of the many things we deal with in the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), for yielding to me. Let me thank the gentleman for leading us in this special order.

Before I begin my contribution to it, I wanted to thank the gentleman also for taking a few minutes to respond to the hour that preceded it, because America was treated with some incredible, I think, manipulations of the truth. The truth of the matter is that in the States of Texas and Louisiana, men and women are working every day, not only to produce the energy that America needs, but to process it in the plants that are required to refine it, make fuel oil for the homes of the Northeast, for Massachusetts and for Michigan and for other States across the colder regions of our country, to make the gasoline that powers our cars and the diesel that powers the trucks that deliver the products across this country even in this dot-com age, and to make the jet fuel that powers the jets, not only across our country but around the world.

It is States like Texas and Louisiana that are making the contributions. I am not sure Americans are aware of it, but the last refinery in America was built in my home district in Louisiana 20 years ago. We have not had a refinery built since then. In fact, 36 refineries closed during that period, and America is dependent not only on oil and gas more and more from places that are very unstable like the Middle East, but more and more on refined products produced in other countries.

When the price goes up in the Northeast and the Members who appeared on this floor complain about Texas and Governor Bush and our policy on promoting independence in production and supplies for this country, I hope they remember that the prices are not set in Texas any more. They are being set somewhere in the Middle East and somewhere in councils that we do not control.

Then when short supplies arrive in the wintertime, it could well be that we have had an anti-energy policy in this country for the last years of this administration that has not, in fact, licensed a new refinery for America, and that has shut down areas to production and development.

It ought to be opened up, if we are going to be an independent and free and stable economy and if our people are going to be warm in the winter and if our cars are going to be powered and our jet planes are going to continue to fly. There is another story. I hope one day we get to tell it all about why this administration has put this country into such jeopardy now as we face another energy crisis; 58 percent dependent on foreigners to supply us with the fuel we need.

And when the Strategic Petroleum Reserve was started in 1975, we were a mere 36 percent dependent. Think how much more vulnerable we are today with fewer refineries and more foreign oil dependence. That has been the story of this administration and why I hope the next administration under George Bush will change it.

But I came tonight to honor the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY). I came tonight to join my colleagues on the Committee on Commerce, and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE), my friend from the Committee on the Judiciary, to remind this House what a contribution the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) has made to this institution and what an incredible personal contribution he has made to this body in the person, the man that he is.

The gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY), as my colleagues know, has chaired what I consider to be the most important committee in this Congress, the Committee on Commerce, formerly the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and hopefully Committee on Energy and Commerce again next year is the oldest committee of this House. As my colleagues know commerce and interstate commerce was one of the first assignments given to the national government when this country was started, and the Committee on Commerce represents jurisdiction over the commerce of the country, and that includes an incredible array of items, including telecommunications, indeed, and transportation and environmental issues and health care issues, and issues dealing with such complex combinations as to how to make sure our health care system stays solvent and how to make sure Medicaid is available to the poor and needy of our society, how to make sure that prescription drugs hopefully will be available to our seniors.

It is an incredible mix of jurisdictions as we debate matters as complicated as this awful tire recall. And I want to commend the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. UPTON), my friend who just appeared, for his incredible work in finding out what went wrong over these years with that horrible mess in auto safety and how expeditiously our committee produced a bill for this floor to consider and for the Senate to consider, and it is now on the way to the President for his signature.

Mr. Speaker, I think that effort alone tells a story about the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY). The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) chairs this incredible important committee, and he literally is the leader under whom we have worked for these past years to develop, not only hearings like we produced on the Firestone tire recall, but the legislation that followed it.

I do not know if my colleagues remember, but there was another recall in 1978 with Firestone 500 tires. Following that, there were hearings; but there was no legislation. This year, in 3 short weeks, the Congress and under the leadership of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) and the Committee on Commerce produced the most significant reform of tire and auto safety in 30 years.

And that has been the history of his leadership: telecommunications reform, the first rewrite of the Telecommunications Act since 1934; financial securities modernization, the first real modernization of our Securities Act in years and decades; the Food and Drug Modernization Act, to make sure that Americans have safe and quality drugs and pharmaceuticals in our country.

The work he has done in safe drinking water to make sure that Americans have good safe water to drink. The last hearing he chaired today was on safe water, not only here in America, but the global concerns of safe water and the pollution of global water supplies that are critical as nations and ethnic groups are fighting now around the world over water supplies, and people are dying because of the lack of good potable water and clean and healthy sanitary conditions.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) has led those efforts for the last 6 years, and he has produced remarkable legislation from our committee that has literally broken up the monopolies in this country in telecommunications and transportation. He has been a huge, literally a ''trustbuster'' in this Nation. He has done more to back off unnecessary Federal regulations in many areas of our economy and to open it up to consumer choice and competition. That has been the history of his tenure as chairman of our Committee on Commerce.

I want to tell my colleagues something about him personally that my colleagues may not know. He spent his 20 years here in Congress also dedicated to women and children's issues. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) has been a leader in adoptive services and making sure that adoption was a real and viable option for children in America, and to make sure not only here in this country but around the world that adoption was available to kids and to parents who wanted to love them.

He has been a stalwart defender of adoptive services all of these years and a promoter of that as a means of protecting and preserving young life in America and around the world. And he has been a real champion for mammography services to make sure, in fact, that mammograms were available to poor people, and that women could, in fact, get the benefits of health care and early warnings of breast cancer and other diseases. He has been a champion of women health issues. I am not sure if Members really know of his extraordinary service in this area.

Lest we forget, for 20 years he has served on NATO's parliamentary assembly, the assembly of NATO countries, the parliamentarians who try to keep the strength and the unity and the bonds that have held NATO together and been important not only in winning but preserving world peace. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) now serves as president of that body and will serve through the month of November until his retirement from the Congress. But he leaves us as we end this session to go back to Richmond, Virginia, a place where his career started, where he began serving the people of America on the city council and later on as mayor.

The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) talked about his incredible service to our Nation and to Richmond during those awful days when our Nation was coming to grips with the horror and the history of segregation and bigotry in our country. He came to grips with it and dealt with it in a humane and positive and effective way that was a model for other country communities across America. I hope we remember him and his service for that great effort.

Finally, I want to talk about the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) the man, the father, the grandfather, the husband, the man who has always been the gentle man from Virginia.

We get into some awful fights around here. We get into some bitter arguments sometime, and we forget to remind ourselves that all of us come here representing people back home, and all of us come here with a mandate to speak for those people back home. We sometimes forget our own humanity. We forget to remember to treat each other as human beings and as gentlemen and ladies in this body; and incivility sometimes reigns, but it never reigns under the leadership of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) on the Committee on Commerce.

The gentleman reminded us all to be gentlemen and ladies. He reminded us all to differ and to argue and disagree but to do so agreeably, and to remember we all have indeed a special honor to be in this body representing this great Nation, and that honor means that we ought to respect one another as much as we respect this institution.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) was truly a man of the House, a man this Nation can be proud of, a man our Committee on Commerce is certainly proud of and a leader and a chairman we are going to miss a great deal. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), on behalf of all the Members of the Committee on Commerce we miss you, bon voyage, happy sailing, great tennis games. And remember the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE) still can be beat. There is a way to do it. Come around and we will have some great games together and some great times.

To the gentleman and your family, we want to wish the gentleman the best in retirement and the best that our Nation has to offer, a true servant of the American people, the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) for joining this special order and all he does to make our committee work, the way it works under the leadership of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY). Mr. Speaker, three Virginians decided to leave the Congress this year, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), his good friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Bateman), who last month we stood here on the floor in memorial remarks about the gentleman, we remembered his life and his great service, and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. PICKETT), who left a statement today, planned to be here today, but because of what appears to be the cowardly attack on our ship, the U.S.S. Cole, went back to his district, where that ship is based, to be with the families of the sailors who were on that destroyer as it was attacked in a terrorist manner today.

And my colleagues know, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Bateman), and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. PICKETT) all have served with the NATO parliament. And as the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) just mentioned, a group that the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) was chosen to be the president of this year, the president of the parliament organization of all of the NATO countries, maybe that in and of itself should suggest the esteem that the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) has held not only here on the floor of the Congress, not only here in the halls of the Congress, not only here in the Nation's capital, but in the capitals of our allies, in Europe, as he is now leading that organization, and will continue to lead it until the November meeting of parliamentarians from the NATO countries, and has brought honor to the United States in the way that he has led that group of parliamentarians.

Here are just a few of the accomplishments during the watch of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) while on the Committee on Commerce, if I can mention them: the telecommunications reform, financial services modernization, FDA reform, modernizing securities law, securities litigation reform, the Safe Drinking Water Act, Internet tax freedom, Satellite Home Viewer Improvement Act, the Child On-line Protection Act, Digital Millennium Copyright Act, Improving the Food Quality Act, the Open Market Reorganization for the Betterment of International Telecommunications Act, also known as ORBIT, the Balanced Budget Act, Medicare part B and Medicaid and Kids Care were refined and improved through the work of the Committee on Commerce, the necessary improvements on our efforts to balance the budget and the effects that it had on Medicare.

Legislation that, maybe, made a difference for availability of mammography. Biomaterials Access Assurance Act, the Health Insurance Act, the Health Insurance Portability Act, the Assistive Suicide Restriction Act, the Nursing Home Resident Protection Amendments, the Year 2000 Readiness and Responsibility Act, the list goes on, the Wireless Communication and Public Safety Act, the Wireless Privacy Enhancement Act, the Chemical Safety Information Act, the Clean Air Act and its amendments, the Animal Drug Availability Act, the Electronic Signature Act.

The breadth of what the Committee on Commerce deals with as well as the accomplishments in these many areas I think create a sense of just how big a job the job of the chairman of the Committee on Commerce is, and the accomplishments suggest how well that job has been done.

Another area I want to mention as we draw to conclusion here is the chairman's efforts on behalf of adoption. The Blileys' children, Tom and Mary Virginia's children were adopted. He is a leader on adoption issues in the House of Representatives. He testifies before other committees. He testified just this year before the Committee on Ways and Means and in favor of adoption legislation.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) said ''I have been blessed'', and when he gave his testimony, ''I have been blessed by my experiences with adoption. So now I am doing what I can to help thousands of innocent children find a mom and a dad.'' He added that mom and dad are the greatest titles in the world.

He led efforts to increase adoption counseling and to make the adoption tax credit permanent, and increased the cap for that tax credit from $5,000 to $10,000.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) is a man who has cared about the issues we deal with. He has cared about the jurisdiction of his committee, the efforts that that committee needed to make to see that the United States was at the forefront in commerce, the efforts that we need to see that Medicare works properly, the efforts that we need to make to see that we have safety in transportation and in commerce, that we have security over the Internet and in the changes in telecommunications.

The gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY) has done a tremendous job, a job that people in this Congress will remember and talk about for a long time. While people all over America may not talk about the legislation that has been passed for a long time, they will benefit from the legislation that has been passed and the leadership that has been shown for years to come, for decades to come, as we enter this new century, a century with limitless opportunity and a century that really defies the old definition of what was possible.

The Committee on Commerce under the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) has been at the forefront of making it possible for us to be the incredibly competitive society that we are in America today.

Mr. Speaker, it would be easy to overlook many of the accomplishments in this life and career. I am glad we had a chance to share some of those tonight. Others will be shared in the official RECORD of the proceedings today. But I am glad that we were able to be here, Members of the Committee on Commerce, the gentleman from North Carolina (Chairman COBLE), and others who have submitted their remarks from many committees and from both parties, both parties here on the floor tonight, remembering the great work, the great leadership of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, It would be easy to overlook many of the accomplishments of his life and career—I'd like to share some of the highlights of a lifetime of accomplishment. TOM BLILEY represents the Seventh Congressional District of the Commonwealth of Virginia in the United States House of Representatives. The Seventh District includes the western part of the City of Richmond as well as sections of Albemarle, Chesterfield, and Henrico Counties; it includes all of Culpeper, Goochland, Greene, Hanover, Louisa, Madison, Orange, and Powhatan Counties.

TOM BLILEY began his political career in 1968 when he was first elected to the City Council of Richmond, Virginia. He served as Vice-Mayor from 1968 to 1970, and then as Mayor from 1970 to 1977. He was first elected to Congress in 1980 and has been elected to each succeeding Congress. As a former President of Joseph W. Bliley Funeral Homes, he gained important business experience that has shaped his attitude towards problems facing small business owners.

In Washington, Mr. BLILEY is serving his third term as Chairman of the House Committee on Commerce, the oldest committee in the House. As Chairman, he is an ex officio member of the five Commerce Committee subcommittees: Telecommunications, Trade, and Consumer Protection; Finance and Hazardous Materials; Health and Environment; Energy and Power; and Oversight and Investigation.

As Mr. BLILEY plans the committee agenda and schedule hearings and legislation for the 106th Congress, he follows the same, time-tested principles that have made his committee one of the most constructive and successful in Congress: Promoting free and fair markets, standing up for consumer choice and common sense safeguards for our health and the environment, keeping an eye on the federal bureaucracy.

In the 105th Congress, Mr. BLILEY was instrumental in the enactment of the Food and Drug Administration and Modernization Act. New treatments will be available sooner for the seriously ill while expanding access to safe and effective drugs, devices, and food because of Mr. BLILEY's efforts. Electronic commerce is the newest, fastest growing form of interstate and foreign commerce. Mr. BLILEY was a leader in the enactment of a new law setting a three-year moratorium on certain taxes for Internet access or consumer purchases made via the Internet.

Mr. BLILEY also led the drive to enact the Mammography Quality Standards Act of 1998. This legislation will assure the safety, accuracy, and overall quality of mammography services for women. This bill will help save lives by ensuring for the first time that all patients are directly notified of their mammogram results in terms they can understand.

In the 104th Congress, Mr. BLILEY broke up bigger monopolies than President Theodore Roosevelt. He tore up more federal regulations over American businesses than President Reagan. Mr. BLILEY led passage of the Telecommunications Act and opened a trillion-dollar a year industry to fair, free, and open trade. He gave Americans peace-of-mind about the chemicals in the foods we eat, and about the purity of the water we drink when he successfully led bipartisan efforts to enact Food Safety and Safe Drinking Water legislation into law.

Mr. BLILEY also spearheaded enactment of Securities Litigation Reform, part of the ''Contract with America.'' When President Clinton vetoed that measure, Mr. BLILEY led the House in the first—and only—successful veto override of the Clinton Presidency. Under Mr. BLILEY's leadership, the most comprehensive overhaul of the nation's securities laws in more than 60 years was achieved upon enactment of the Capital Markets legislation.

Since his first election to Congress, Mr. BLILEY has been recognized by many organizations for his work. He has served in various roles with the NATO Parliamentary Assembly—from November 1994–October 1998, he was Chairman of the Economic Committee, in November 1998, he became one of the four Vice Presidents; and, with the resignation of its President in May 2000, Mr. BLILEY became the Acting President and will serve in this capacity until November 2000. His commitment to balancing the federal budget has earned him the National Watchdog of the Treasury's ''Golden Bulldog Award'' every year since 1981. He has been named a ''Guardian of Small Business'' by the National Federation of Independent Business. The Louisville Courier Journal called him ''the most powerful Virginian since Harry Byrd'' and the National Journal, in a front page feature, called him ''Mr. Smooth.''

Mr. BLILEY has served on a number of boards and commissions including: National League of Cities; Children's Hospital; and, Metropolitan Richmond Chamber of Commerce. Mr. BLILEY is a member of the Richmond Rotary Club and he currently serves on the Virginia Biotechnology Research Park Authority. In 1996, Mr. BLILEY was named to the Board of Governors of the Virginia Home for Boys.

Born in Chesterfield County, Virginia, Mr. BLILEY is a lifelong resident of the Richmond area. He earned his B.A. in History from Georgetown University and immediately following served three years in the United States Navy rising to the rank of Lieutenant. He has recently received honorary doctorate degrees from Georgetown University, Virginia Commonwealth University, Christopher Newport College, Belmont Abbey College and University of Richmond. Mr. BLILEY received the Beta Gamma Sigma Leadership Award from the University of Richmond's Robins School of Business.

Mr. BLILEY is married to the former Mary Virginia Kelley and is the father of two, Thomas J. Bliley III and Mary Vaughan (Bliley) Davies. The Blileys have two granddaughters, Jenny and Kathy Davies and two grandsons, Thomas J. Bliley IV and Shawn Bliley.

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, we come together today to honor my distinguished colleague and friend, Chairman TOM BLILEY. I have had the pleasure of working with TOM during my entire career in the U.S. House of Representatives. As dean of the Virginia delegation, I have come to know him as a gentleman and a tireless servant to the people of the seventh district of Virginia and the nation as a whole.

As Chairman of the House Committee on Commerce, TOM oversaw the passage of the landmark Telecommunications Act, which opened up the industry to free and open competition. During his tenure, he has striven to support common sense safety standards, to reduce the regulatory burden on our nation's small businesses, and to overhaul the nation's securities laws.

I have traveled with TOM many times over the years to attend NATO Parliamentary Assembly sessions. TOM has served a number of roles in the Assembly since 1994; currently, he is serving as the Acting President. His dedication to maintaining a strong trans-Atlantic relationship and strong support for the NATO alliance will leave its mark for years to come.

With his retirement, the Commonwealth of Virginia and the nation will lose one of its most dedicated and conscientious servants. As a fellow ''rag boater,'' I want to wish TOM and his wife, Mary Virginia, the best for the years to come.

Mr. SISISKY. Mr. Speaker, what can I say about TOM BLILEY that has not already been said?

He has been an effective Member of Congress, looking out for our national interests as chairman of the House Commerce Committee.

He has effectively represented his constituents in Virginia's seventh district—as well as the rest of the commonwealth.

But he's been around longer than that—serving as mayor, vice-mayor, and as a member of the city council of Richmond.

Prior to that, TOM's business background and experience gave him special insight about the problems and challenges faced by small business.

Obviously, that background and experience is similar to mine.

But that is not the only thing that endears TOM BLILEY to me.

I can truly say, "I knew him when."

He has been a friend for so many years that I'm not sure I even like to think about how long it's been.

As I look back on all the things he's done, I realized I first knew him when he was mayor of Richmond.

That was 30 years ago. Then he was elected to Congress in 1980.

I was elected just a couple of years later.

And I can assure you: One of the most rewarding parts of this job has been serving and working with TOM.

We've worked on issues ranging from those that impacted Virginia to those that impacted NATO.

For a couple of young men from Richmond, I'd say we've come a long way.

But TOM's greatest strength, and I hope one I share, is he never forgot where he came from.

Serving the people at home was his strong point, equaled only by being such a great Virginia gentleman.

I am honored that he is my friend.

INVESTIGATION AND TREATMENT OF WEN HO LEE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MICA). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to express my deep concerns about the overall unfortunate circumstances that have revolved around Wen Ho Lee.

On March 6 of 1999, the New York Times reported that government investigators believed that China had accelerated its nuclear weapons program with the aid of stolen American secrets. This report, along with other reports that came subsequently, led to a frenzy of activity. In fact, 2 days after the March 6, 1999 New York Times report, Wen Ho Lee, who was identified, was then fired from the laboratory; and soon after that, he was charged with the various offenses.

In September of this year, September 26, 2000, the New York Times took the very exceptional opportunity to explain the backup of their reporting, going back to March 6, 1999. Although they really made no overt apologies for the conclusions that they drew in their March 6, 1999 article, it is interesting to note that they made various observations.

First, they said looking back, and I quote from this article of New York Times Tuesday September 26: ''But looking back, we also found some things that we wish we had done differently in the course of the coverage to give Dr. Lee the full benefit of the doubt. In those months, we could have pushed harder to uncover weaknesses in the FBI case against Dr. Lee. Our coverage would have been strengthened had we moved faster to assess the scientific, technical and investigative assumptions that led the FBI and the Department of Energy to connect Dr. Lee to what is still widely acknowledged to have been a major security breach.''

The Times neither imagined the security breach, as they go on to say, nor did they initiate the case against Dr. Wen Ho Lee. But, however, it was the March 6 article that set the tone for the coverage against this individual in the ensuing months.

The New York Times editorial of September 26, 2000 goes on to say, ''The article, however, had flaws that are more apparent now that the weaknesses of the FBI case against Dr. Lee have surfaced. It did not pay enough attention to the possibility that there had been a major intelligence loss in which the Los Alamos scientist was a minor player,'' and perhaps maybe even uninvolved.

''The Times should have moved more quickly'', it said in this article, ''to open a second line of reporting, particularly among scientists inside and outside the government.''

This article is a very unique and interesting attempt on the part of the New York Times to respond to severe criticism that other journalists had leveled against the New York Times for its March 6, 1999 article.

But in any event, the ensuing events that evolved around Dr. Wen Ho Lee is what prompts me to come to the floor tonight to speak about this incident. It is very strange that, if there was such an egregious breach of national security presumably organized and conducted by Dr. Wen Ho Lee, that it took 9 months to obtain an indictment against him, during which time he was completely free.

At that time, 9 months later, they charged him with 59 separate felony offenses. Thirty-nine counts alleged that Dr. Lee violated the Atomic Energy Act because he mishandled material containing restricted data with the intent to injure the United States and with the intent to secure an advantage to a foreign Nation. Ten counts alleged that Dr. Lee unlawfully obtained defense information in violation of the law, ten counts of willfully retaining national defense information in violation of the law.

What safeguards did the government take to make sure that Dr. Wen Ho Lee did not flee or transfer the tapes to some individual during those 9 months? Nothing that I am aware of. He was certainly a security risk from the time that he was fired from the Los Alamos laboratory until he was finally charged on December 10, 1999.

Now suddenly we read in the newspapers in September of the year 2000 that 58 charges leveled against Dr. Wen Ho Lee were dropped under a plea bargain involving the plea of guilty on one count only and a pledge to cooperate with the government to disclose why he did it and how he disposed of the tapes that he has pled guilty to having taken. It is very strange.

The reason I take this floor to raise this issue is not to discuss the innocence or guilt of this man. He has already pleaded guilty. But the one thing that has concerned the Asian American community tremendously is the way that he was treated after he was finally charged with these various 59 crimes and incarcerated.

Suddenly, after he was picked up, he became a huge national security risk. Yet, for 9 months, he was allowed to come and go as a free citizen. Only upon his indictment in December of 1999 did he become a security risk.

In his plea for bail, release on bail and other things that came up at that hearing, it was pointed out by the prosecutors that he constituted a real risk and that he might transfer the tapes to unauthorized individuals. The whole matter lay in a situation in which, as one reporter said, that, short of the charges of espionage and naming him a spy, that he was incarcerated under arraignment under very, very serious conditions.

It is that level of concern that the Asian community has raised many, many questions. They have met with the Attorney General to discuss it and other officials that will listen to him.

My reason for rising here tonight is that we believe that there was a serious mistake made by the government in the way that they dealt with Dr. Wen Ho Lee. There is absolutely no justification that he was allowed to be a free person for 9 months if, in fact, the government had suspicion for at least 3 or 4 years that something was awry, that the tapes had been missing and he was under surveillance.

In fact, they had gone to the Justice Department asking for permission to look at his computer and to make determinations as to whether something was done that violated the security restrictions of the laboratory, and the Justice Department denied the request of the investigators.

Yet, here on December 10, he was denied bail. Out of that denial came this extraordinary disclosure through the family and through his lawyers and through others who became acquainted with the nature of his confinement, that he was kept in a cell, completely enclosed, maybe 4 feet by 16 feet in dimension. The entrance to his cell was not the regular bars, but it was a door with a little window. He was kept in there virtually, except for meals, the complete time that he was incarcerated, from December 10 until he was released on September 20.

The other egregious thing, besides being kept in such solitary confinement for this length of time, because he constituted a serious security risk to this Nation, he was kept in chains whenever he was allowed to go out to exercise, which was only 1 hour a day. He was required to be in chains. His ankles were chained. His wrists were chained. His wrists were chained, They were connected to his waist chains. He was expected to go out into the open air and exercise under those circumstances.

It is an absolutely inexplicable situation that they had leveled upon him. Many of the people who have looked at this situation, and, indeed, those who testified over on the Senate side indicated that this was probably done to him in an effort to try to force him to disclose information that led him to make the tapes and to disclose where these tapes were in fact placed. So it was all a matter of trying to intimidate this individual prior to going to trial, prior to any particular finding of specific guilt.

Probably most of the Asians were reluctant to speak up, including myself, during this whole tragic event, because we did not quite know exactly the extent to which this individual was actually guilty of the 59 charges.

Then out of the clear blue, we find that a judge has, not only condemned the Justice Department and the Attorney General for the mishandling of his incarceration, but by a plea bargain with the Justice Department, he is totally exonerated of 58 of the charges, pleads guilty to one, and he is a free person, no longer a security threat to the United States, and they still do not know where the tapes are as far as I know.

□ 1930

This is an incredible situation that we find ourselves in, with one person being put under such severe personal jeopardy before trial, before an absolute finding of guilt, and to know that in the end he was allowed to be a free person.

So the questions have to be raised, I think. And many of the people from the Asian community are asking these questions: Was his apprehension in the first place triggered because he was an Asian? Many people are suggesting that others at the Los Alamos laboratory committed even more serious violations with respect to secret, classified documents, and with respect to the procedures that had been in place as to how individuals were supposed to deal with security items; yet these people were not investigated, were not put through the same extent of inquiry as Dr. Lee was. So we are troubled with his selective prosecution.

Many people are alleging that this was a racial profiling situation, and they are raising all sorts of questions with respect to why Dr. Lee and not all the other individuals. We know about some very, very difficult cases that are involving high-ranking officials, with extremely important information, and who took classified information, put that on tapes, and are still, for all that I know, not under any particular arrest warrants or incarcerated or charged for their conduct.

So the people are very, very concerned. They want to know why his bail was denied. Was there really an intent here to pressure this particular person to come forward with information? Was there a deliberate intent to make his detention so severe that he would be forced to cooperate?

The reason why this case really came to its final conclusion, with Wen Ho Lee being released, was that the judge had been told at the final bail hearing that came up in August that the information that the FBI had presented to the judge back in December was not all true. As a matter of fact, it came out in the testimony to the judge in August that Wen Ho Lee had been told by the FBI agents that he had flunked the polygraph test when in fact he had passed it. This was another incident of the government's deliberate attempt to try to force a confession from someone who was constantly saying that he had not breached the national security of the United States. What he had done was probably wrong and contrary to the rules, but certainly not anything that constituted a breach of national security.

Nowhere in the investigation was the FBI able to show in any context whatsoever that he had passed any information on to fellow scientists or to foreign scientists, or that in his travels to China he had breached the security requirements of his occupation. They charged him for failure to report contacts that he had made in his trips, which were all authorized trips that he made to China. He was accused of not having filed reports; yet in the August hearing, before the judge, it came out that he had indeed filed the reports and that all of those arguments that had been made in December were simply not true.

The judge had gone along in December with this harsh treatment of solitary confinement because he believed that there was here a defendant who was deliberately trying to obfuscate his actions, had failed to file the necessary reports that he was required to file as an employee of Los Alamos laboratory. And when all of this exploded in the face of the truth at the August hearing, even the judge made the statement in his final recommendation for release of Dr. Lee that he was astounded that this sort of situation could be tolerated, and he was absolutely shocked at what had happened to this individual. So he ordered the release.

The release was appealed by the government. The other courts simply dismissed the appeal and shortly thereafter Dr. Lee was released a free man. The only requirement is that he not leave the country for a year, I believe, and that he cooperate in a debriefing type of contact with the Justice Department in an effort to try to find out where the tapes are located and what has happened to them.

So we have to look back on this situation and say, okay, the FBI agents erred in their anxiety to find this person guilty of egregious violations against the government and to show that this individual was a deliberate liar and trying to withhold information from the government. But what happens to the FBI agents who perpetrated this misstatement to the courts? I hate to say that these were specific deliberate lies. They claimed that they were simply mistakes. But what happens to these agents that misled the court and caused this grievous harm against this individual insofar as how he was treated? He was shackled as an animal. Even when he was allowed to go to see his lawyers, he was still shackled. It is an incredible, unbelievable story of inhumane treatment of an individual under these circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, I have letters that have been sent to the U.S. Attorney in New Mexico, Norman C. Bay, making an inquiry about the conditions of his confinement and the responses that were received. Many, many individuals wrote to the Justice Department: the American Association for the Advancement of Science sent a letter; the New York Academy of Science wrote to the Attorney General protesting the harsh treatment of Wen Ho Lee; the Human Rights Committee of Scientists; the Episcopal Church of the United States wrote in protest of his harsh treatment; the National Academy of Sciences; the National Academy of Engineering and the Institute of Medicine sent a joint letter on June 26 to the Attorney General protesting the severity of his confinement; and the Amnesty International on August 16 also sent a letter. On August 31, the National Academies protested that in all the letters they had written, they had failed to get any responses from the Justice Department.

Mr. Speaker, I will be submitting the letters that I have just mentioned for inclusion in the RECORD. I also will put in the RECORD letters that are dated way back in January of this year from the National Asian Pacific American Legal Consortium, writing to the Attorney General and expressing their concerns about his detention; as well as the Organization of Chinese Americans and their letters; the National Asian Pacific American Bar Association, also writing to the Attorney General about his treatment; and the comments of Robert S. Vrooman, the former chief of counterintelligence at Los Alamos regarding specifically his being targeted for confinement.

Mr. Speaker, I note that my colleague from California is here with me, and I yield to him at this time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me, and thank her very much for taking this time and this special order to raise the concerns that she has. I have been watching the special order, and I want to tell her how much I appreciate it, because I think that the treatment and the prosecution of Wen Ho Lee and the manner in which it was handled raises serious concerns for every American.

Once again we see that when the incredible power of the government comes down on a single individual, all too often that individual's rights are crushed under the full force. And in this case we saw almost a hysteria that ran through the government, through committees of Congress, within the Department of Energy and Justice and Defense, in a frenzy to try to prove something that they may, in fact, not have had the evidence to prove. And in doing so, they focused on this individual, Wen Ho Lee, and then proceeded over the next 9 months to treat him in a manner that no American would want to be treated or have a member of their family treated.

The gentlewoman has recited the litany of harsh treatments to this elderly man during his time in solitary confinement, when in fact at the same time the evidence was starting to suggest that maybe he was not guilty of all that he was charged. This is not to suggest that perhaps that Wen Ho Lee did not violate rules of protocol and perhaps even security rules. But the jump from that to that he was one of the most dangerous men in the United States; that he had transferred the crown jewels, we now find that what this was was a lot of prosecutorial hyperbole. They were trying to make their case. They were trying to push the public to focus in on this individual because they felt it would solve a problem.

We know that one of the major mistakes that law enforcement can make is to focus on a single individual too early in an investigation. So now we find out 9 months later that not only have they dropped all of the charges with respect to Wen Ho Lee, except for one out of 79 counts, but we are no further along in knowing what happened to this information and how it got into the hands of the person who walked into our embassy and dropped it on to a table. So in fact not only were his rights compromised, but in fact maybe the very investigation has been compromised because so much energy and effort was put on to the focus of Wen Ho Lee.

I just want to again thank the gentlewoman for taking this time. People should not look at this case as a case against a Chinese American or an Asian or a person who is a threat to the United States. They ought to think of this in terms of every American. We understand that this Congress has taken action against prosecutors who have exceeded their authority way beyond what can be justified, or the Internal Revenue Service. And what we really ought to have, and what I have asked for and written the President and spoken out on this floor for, is somehow we need a truly independent investigation.

I am afraid that investigation will have to come from outside of the government, because the government is so compromised in the manner in which the investigation was handled by the various agencies and by the committees of this Congress in their rush to judgment, in their frenzy and their hysteria over this issue. But I would hope that this administration would in fact appoint an outside panel of experts who can have that security clearance, who can determine what in fact happened here, because the damage runs to our civil liberties. The damage runs to Wen Ho Lee and his family, his reputation; and it also runs to the integrity of this body, to our agencies that participated in that. The American public needs to know what happened there.

Unfortunately, I think the damage also runs to the labs and to our ability to recruit. The gentlewoman is aware, as I am aware, of what has happened in the Asian community with scientists and others who wonder now if they go to work for these labs whether they will be profiled; whether they will be treated differently; are they suspect because of their travels, because of their family, because of their heritage, because of their culture?

□ 1945

And when you see the treatment of this individual, you would be asking the same question of yourself if you wanted to determine. And yet, because of this action, we may be denying this country some of the very best scientists, mathematicians, engineers and others that are available in the world today who would love to come to work for the United States and in fact are not any of those suspected things.

So I think it has been a real cost to us, to the labs and to our resources available to work on the kinds of scientific endeavors that so many at the lab do on a day-to-day basis. So people ought to understand, this is not just about Wen Ho Lee. This is the ripples of this case, and how it has been handled go far beyond far beyond this individual and his treatment.

But we ought to make sure that we do not forget nor can an agency simply not answer for their actions. That is what has to be done. But I do not think that they can investigate themselves because in fact they were part of the frenzy that took place around the arrest and prosecution and detainment of Wen Ho Lee.

So we owe the gentlewoman a debt of gratitude for taking this time for putting these documents in the RECORD so that the broader public will have access to them. I want to thank the gentlewoman very much for doing so.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for giving a larger perspective on this. I came to the floor because so many Asians have expressed a dismay that a situation like this could happen in America and many of them expressed the belief that it could only happen to an Asian. That to me is a very damaging aspect to have this country, so great and so wonderful in terms of its definition of democracy, to have a segment of our community believe that this occurred to this one gentleman because he was Asian and that the outcry did not come until after he was more or less exonerated.

The outcry should have been there, as many of the organizations did, but it was sort of scuffled. Nobody really paid much attention to it. I agree absolutely that we have to call for an investigation, and it cannot be the one that the Attorney General has told the community that she would do. It is simply not adequate. It has to be taken to a different level and a situation where this whole matter can be reviewed.

But it is a terrible thing. The Asian community feels burdened with this suspicion, and the wreckage of this whole incident has sort of fallen on all Asians, not just the Chinese-Americans, but all Asians. And so, I truly believe that the Congress has to take some responsibility in this matter and look at it.

The Senate has investigated it, has called several hearings. And I applaud them for it. I hope that when we return here next year that we will take the time to make sure that this kind of treatment of a human being can never again occur to anyone under our judicial system. I plead with the Members of this House to look at this situation carefully and dispassionately. And if they do, I believe they will come to the same conclusion that the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) and I have come to.

Mr. Speaker, on March 6, 1999 New York Times reported that Government investigators believes China had accelerated its nuclear weapons program with the aid of stolen American secrets.

Two days later, Wen Ho Lee was identified and fired.

[From the New York Times, Sept. 26, 2000]

THE TIMES AND WEN HO LEE

On March 6, 1999, The New York Times reported that Government investigators believed China had accelerated its nuclear weapons program with the aid of stolen American secrets. The article said the Federal Bureau of Investigation had focused its suspicions on a Chinese-American scientist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory. Two days later, the government announced that it had fired a Los Alamos scientist for ''serious security violations.'' Officials identified the man as Wen Ho Lee.

Dr. Lee was indicted nine months later on charges that he had transferred huge amounts of restricted information to an easily accessible computer. Justice Department prosecutors persuaded a judge to hold him in solitary confinement without bail, saying his release would pose a grave threat to the nuclear balance.

This month the Justice Department settled for a guilty plea to a single count of mishandling secret information. The judge accused prosecutors of having misled him on the national security threat and having provided inaccurate testimony. Dr. Lee was released on the condition that he cooperate with the authorities to explain why he downloaded the weapons data and what he did with it.

The Times's coverage of this case, especially the articles published in the first few months, attracted criticism from competing journalists and media critics and from defenders of Dr. Lee, who contended that our reporting had stimulated a political frenzy amounting to a witch hunt. After Dr. Lee's release, the White House, too, blamed the pressure of coverage in the media, and specifically The Times, for having propelled an overzealous prosecution by the administration's own Justice Department.

As a rule, we prefer to let out reporting speak for itself. In this extraordinary case, the outcome of the prosecution and the accusations leveled at this newspaper may have left many readers with questions about our coverage. That confusion—and the stakes involved, a man's liberty and reputation—convince us that a public accounting is warranted.

In the days since the prosecution ended, the paper has looked back at the coverage. On the whole, we remain proud of work that brought into the open a major national security problem of which officials had been aware for months, even years. Our review found careful reporting that included extensive cross-checking and vetting of multiple sources, despite enormous obstacles of official secrecy and government efforts to identify The Times's sources. We found articles that accurately portrayed a debate behind the scenes on the extent and importance of Chinese espionage—a debate that now, a year and a half later, is still going on. We found clear, precise explanations of complex science.

But looking back, we also found some things we wish we had done differently in the course of the coverage to give Dr. Lee the full benefit of the doubt. In those months, we could have pushed harder to uncover weaknesses in the F.B.I. case against Dr. Lee. Our coverage would have been strengthened had we moved faster to assess the scientific, technical and investigative assumptions that led the F.B.I. and the Department of Energy to connect Dr. Lee to what is still widely acknowledged to have been a major security breach.

The Times neither imagined the security breach nor initiated the case against Wen Ho Lee. By the time our March 6 article appeared, F.B.I. agents had been looking closely into Dr. Lee's activities for more than three years. A bipartisan congressional committee had already conducted closed hearings and written a secret report unanimously concluding that Chinese nuclear espionage had harmed American national security, and questioning the administration's vigilance. The White House had been briefed repeatedly on these issues, and the secretary of energy had begun prodding the F.B.I. Dr. Lee had already taken a lie detector test; F.B.I. investigators believed that it showed deception when he was asked whether he had leaked secrets.

The Times's stories—echoed and often oversimplified by politicians and other news organizations—touched off a fierce public debate. At a time when the Clinton administration was defending a policy of increased engagement with China, any suggestion that the White House had not moved swiftly against a major Chinese espionage operation was politically explosive.

But the investigative and political forces were converging on Dr. Lee long before The Times began looking into this story.

The assertion in our March 6 article that the Chinese made a surprising leap in the miniaturization of nuclear weapons remains unchallenged. That concern had previously been reported in The Wall Street Journal, but without the details provided by The Times in a painstaking narrative that showed how various agencies and the White House itself had responded to the reported security breach.

The prevailing view within the government is still that China made its gains with access to valuable information about American nuclear weaponry, although the extent to which this espionage helped China is disputed. And while the circle of suspicion has widened greatly, Los Alamos has not been ruled out as the source of the leak.

The article, however, had flaws that are more apparent now that the weaknesses of the F.B.I. case against Dr. Lee have surfaced. It did not pay enough attention to the possibility that there had been a major intelligence loss in which the Los Alamos scientist was a minor player, or completely uninvolved.

The Times should have moved more quickly to open a second line of reporting, particularly among scientists inside and outside the government. The paper did this in the early summer, and published a comprehensive article on Sept. 7, 1999. The article laid out even more extensively the evidence that Chinese espionage had secured the key design elements of an American warhead called the W–88 while showing at the same time that this secret material was available not only at Los Alamos but ''to hundreds and perhaps thousands of individuals scattered throughout the nation's arms complex.''

That article, which helped put the charges against Dr. Lee in a new perspective, appeared a full three months before the scientist was indicted.

Early on, our reporting turned up cautions that might have led us to that perspective sooner. For example, the March 6 article noted, deep in the text, that the Justice Department prosecutors did not think they had enough evidence against the Los Alamos scientist to justify a wiretap on his telephone. At the time, the Justice Department refused to discuss its decision, but the fact that the evidence available to the F.B.I. could not overcome the relatively permissive standards for a wiretap in a case of such potential gravity should have been more prominent in the article and in our thinking.

Passages of some articles also posed a problem of tone. In place of a tone of journalistic detachment from our sources, we occasionally used language that adopted the sense of alarm that was contained in official reports that was being voiced to us by investigators, members of Congress and administration officials with knowledge of the case.

This happened even in an otherwise farseeing article on June 14, 1999, that laid out—a half year before the indictment—the reasons the Justice Department might never be able to prove that Dr. Lee had spied for China. The article said Dr. Lee ''may be responsible for the most damaging espionage of the post-cold war era.'' Though it accurately attributed this characterization to ''officials and lawmakers, primarily Republicans,'' such remarks should have been, at a minimum, balanced with the more skeptical views of those who had doubts about the charges against Dr. Lee.

Nevertheless, far from stimulating a witch hunt, The Times had clearly shown before Dr. Lee was even charged that the case against him was circumstantial and therefore weak, and that there were numerous other potential sources for the design of the warhead.

There are articles we should have assigned but did not. We never prepared a full-scale profile of Dr. Lee, which might have humanized him and provided some balance.

Some other stories we wish we had assigned in those early months include a more thorough look at the political context of the Chinese weapons debate, in which Republicans were eager to score points against the White House on China; an examination of how Dr. Lee's handling of classified information compared with the usual practices in the laboratories; a closer look at Notra Trulock, the intelligence official at the Department of Energy who sounded some of the loudest alarms about Chinese espionage; and an exploration of the various suspects and leads that federal investigators passed up in favor of Dr. Lee.

In those instances where we fell short of our standards in our coverage of this story, the blame lies principally with those who directed the coverage, for not raising questions that occurred to us only later. Nothing in this experience undermines our faith in any of our reporters, who remained persistent and fair-minded in their newsgathering in the face of some fierce attacks.

An enormous amount remains unknown or disputed about the case of Dr. Lee and the larger issue of Chinese espionage, including why the scientist transferred classified computer code to an easily accessible computer and then tried to hide the fact (a development first reported in The Times), and how the government case evolved. Even the best investigative reporting is performed under deadline pressure, with the best assessment of information available at the time. We have dispatched a team of reporters, including the reporters who broke our first stories, to go back to the beginning of these controversies and do more reporting, drawing on sources and documents that were not previously available. Our coverage of this case is not over.

It took 9 months later to obtain an indictment against Wen Ho Lee. It charged him with 59 separate felony offenses; 39 counts allege that Dr. Lee violated the Atomic Energy Act because he purportedly mishandled material containing restricted data, with the intent to injure the United States, and with the intent to secure an advantage to a foreign nation; ten counts allege that Dr. Lee unlawfully obtained defense information in violation of 18 U.S.C. & 793(c); and ten counts of willfully retaining national defense information in violation of 18 U.S.C. & 793(e).

What safeguards did the Government take to make sure Wen Ho Lee didn't flee or transfer the tapes?

Why wasn't he a security risk prior to December 10, 1999?

Why now in September 2000, 58 charges are dropped for a plea bargain involving only one plea of guilty and a pledge to cooperate.

Suddenly Wen Ho Lee is no longer a risk. Today Wen Ho Lee is a free man. The tapes are still missing.

I rise tonight to express my great concern that hysteria and cover-up were the real reasons for Wen Ho Lee's indictment.

The managers of our national nuclear labs had mismanaged the security of these institutions. Access to these secrets was not monitored and vast numbers of people could easily obtain access without signing in or out.

Wen Ho Lee was queried about this contacts in the People's Republic of China.

In 1993–94—Wen Ho Lee was under investigation—for knowingly assembling 19 collections of files, called tape archive (TAR) files, containing secret and confidential restricted data relating to atomic weapons research, design, construction, and testing.

The FBI had Wen Ho Lee under investigation for 3 years.

In 1997, the FBI asked for authority to search Wen Ho Lee's computer. The Attorney General Janet Reno denied this request as not justified based on the facts.

The issue is not the prosecution.

The issue is why was Wen Ho Lee singled out for this witch hunt.

After he was indicted, why was he treated as though he was already convicted?

Why was his request for bail denied?

Why was his detention so severe?

Was it designed to coerce his cooperation?

Why did the FBI lie to Wen Ho Lee ''telling him'' he had failed the polygraph test when in fact he had passed? A polygraph test was administered on December 23, 1998, by the Department of Energy in New Mexico. DOE said he unequivocally passed, FBI said failed. The FBI then did its own testing of Dr. Lee, and again claimed he failed, but didn't tell him that he failed. CBS News Correspondent Sharyl Attkisson for CBSNews.com.

WEN HO LEE'S PROBLEMATIC POLYGRAPH

Three Experts Gave The Nuclear Scientist Passing Scores

But The FBI Later Reversed The Findings

CBS Investigation Fuels Argument That He Was A Scapegoat

(CBS) Wen Ho Lee either passed—or failed—his first spy-related polygraph, depending upon who was interpreting the results.

As CBS News Correspondent Sharyl Attkisson reports for CBSNews.com, the test was given December 23, 1998 by a Department of Energy (DOE) polygrapher in Albuqerque, N.M., where Wen Ho Lee worked as a top secret nuclear scientist. Because Lee, a Taiwanese-American, had recently been to Taiwan, had visited China in the past, and purportedly had access to America's top nuclear secrets, the FBI focused on him as the prime suspect in the emerging case of alleged Chinese espionage.

The FBI still wasn't close to making an arrest or even beginning an interrogation, but the DOE's head of counterintelligence, Ed Curran, was reluctant to leave Lee in his highly sensitive job in the lab's X-Division, so he ordered the polygraph test. FBI agents were standing by during the DOE test, ready to interrogate Lee if his polygraph answers proved to be deceptive.

Lee was asked four espionage-related questions:

''Have you ever committed espionage against the United States?''

Lee's response: ''No.''

''Have you ever provided any classified weapons data to any unauthorized person?

Lee's response: ''No.''

''Here you had any contact with anyone to commit espionage against the United States?''

Lee's response: ''No.''

''Have you ever had personal contact with anyone you know who has committed espionage against the United States?''

Lee's response: ''No.''

The polygrapher concluded that Lee was not deceptive. Two other polygraphers in the DOE's Albuquerque test center, including the manager, reviewed the charts and concurred: Lee wasn't lying.

The polygraph results were so convincing and unequivocal, that sources say the deputy director of the Los Alamos lab issued an apology to Lee, and work began to get him reinstated in the X-Division. Furthermore, sources confirm to CBS News that the local Albuquerque FBI office sent a memo to headquarters in Washington saying it appeared that Lee was not their spy.

But key decision-makers in Washington remained unconvinced.

Several weeks after the polygraph, the DOE decided to assign it the unusual designation of ''incomplete.'' Officials in Washington also ordered a halt to Lee's reinstatement of the X-Division.

When FBI headquarters in Washington finally obtained the DOE polygraph results yet another interpretation was offered: that Lee had failed the polygraph.

The FBI then did its own testing of Lee, and again claimed that he failed. Yet sources say the FBI didn't interrogate Lee at this time, or even tell him he had failed the polygraph—an odd deviation from procedure for agents who are taught to immediately question anyone who is deceptive in a polygraph.

In early March 1999, the FBI did interrogate Lee. It was the day CBS News broke the story of a soon-to-be-released congressional report on alleged Chinese espionage at the labs, and the day before The New York Times printed an article that described Lee as a suspect, without using his name. One investigative source tells CBS News that after this particular day of questioning, the lead FBI agent verbalized that she thought Lee was not the right man.

But others still remained unconvinced.

So on March 7, 1999, the day after the New York Times article, the FBI ordered another interrogation of Lee, this time a ''confrontational'' style interview.

One special agent doing the questioning told Lee no fewer than 30 times that he had failed his polygraphs, and repeatedly demanded to know why. Here are some selected excerpts:

FBI special agent: ''You're never going to pass a polygraph. And you're never going to have a clearance. And you're not going to have a job. And if you get arrested you're not going to have a retirement . . . If I don't have something that I can tell Washington as to why you're failing those polygraphs, I can't do a thing.''

Lee: ''Well I don't understand.''

FBI special agent: ''I can't get you your job. I can't do anything for you, Wen Ho. I can't stop the newspapers from knocking on your door. I can't stop the newspapers from calling your son. I can't stop the people from polygraphing your wife. I can't stop somebody from coming and knocking on your door and putting handcuffs on you.''

Lee: ''I don't know how to handle this case, I'm an honest person and I'm telling you all the truth and you don't believe it. I, that's it.''

FBI special agent: ''Do you want to go down in history whether you're professing your innocence like the Rosenbergs to the day that they take you to the electric chair?''

Lee: ''I believe eventually, and I think God, God will make it his judgement.''

During this time period, Washington officials began leaking to the media that Lee had failed his polygraphs, and that he was ''the one'' who had given to China information on America's most advanced thermo-nuclear warhead, the W–88. A stunning charge that, in the end, investigators were unable to back up.

One question at hand is how could the exact same polygraph charts be legitimately interpreted as ''passing'' and also ''failing?'' CBS News spoke to Richard Keifer, the current chairman of the American Polygraph Association, who's a former FBI agent and used to run the FBI's polygraph program.

Keifer says, ''There are never enough variables to cause one person to say (a polygraph subject is) deceptive, and one to say he's non-deceptive . . . there should never be that kind of discrepancy of the evaluation of the same chart.''

As to how it happened in the Wen Ho Lee case, Keifer thinks, ''then somebody is making an error.''

We asked Keifer to look at Lee's polygraph scores. He said the scores are ''crystal clear.'' In fact, Keifer says, in all his years as a polygrapher, he had never been able to score anyone so high on the non-deceptive scale. He was at a loss to find any explanation for how the FBI could deem the polygraph scores as ''failing.''

The FBI has not explained how or why it interpreted Lee's polygraph as deceptive. When asked for an interview, the FBI simply said it would be ''bad'' to talk about Lee's polygraph, and that the case will be handled in the courts. The prosecution has not turned over the charts and many other polygraph documents to Lee's defense team. And so far, the prosecution has withheld other key documents, including the actual charts from the DOE polygraph.

Since Lee was never charged with espionage (only computer security violations), the content of the polygraph may be unimportant to his case. But the fact that his scores apparently morphed from passing to failing fuels the argument of those who claim the government was looking for a scapegoat—someone to blame for the alleged theft of masses of American top secret nuclear weapons information by China—and that Lee conveniently filled that role.

Why did FBI Agent Robert A. Messemer lie? What penalty has he been given? Was his lie perjured testimony? Is he still working for the FBI? Was this a conspiracy within the FBI?

Why didn't the court give Wen Ho Lee the benefit of the doubt?

Why was he locked in a secure enclosed cell? Why was he required to wear ankle and wrist shackles when allowed out for his daily one hour exercise?

Whose idea of ''exercise'' includes the words ''while shackled''? I am told that at the court house while meeting with his lawyers, even when escorted to the toilet, he was shackled.

We are told that the Justice Department approved this severe treatment—that the Department of Energy requested it—

Attorney General Reno testified on September 28 in the Senate that she was unaware that Wen Ho Lee was shackled and was not in receipt of any complaints. A petition dated January 4, 2000 was signed by 3,000 people and forwarded to the Attorney General on March 8, and again on June 8, 2000.

LOS ALAMOS, NM, March 8, 2000.

Re: Petition for Independent Polygraph Test for Dr. Wen Ho Lee and for Improved Conditions of Imprisonment for Dr. Lee

NORMAN C. BAY,
Interim United States Attorney for the District of New Mexico, Albuquerque, NM.

DEAR MR. BAY: Copies are enclosed of petition signatures of over 2000 people seeking your agreement to an independent, qualified polygraph test for Dr. Wen Ho Lee to confirm that the tapes at issue in the bail proceeding were destroyed and not copied.

It is unconscionable that your office has refused to agree to an independent polygraph, which was offered by Dr. Lee and his counsel. The federal Judge who presided at the bail hearing indicated the Court welcomes such a polygraph to address the alleged concern of your office that the tapes which Dr. Lee swore he destroyed were indeed destroyed and not copied. The Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals recently upheld the Judge's reasoning. Confirmation that the tapes do not exist would verify that concern over transfer of the tapes is not a roadblock to the pre-trial release of Dr. Lee. An independent polygraph on the status of the tapes presents a straightforward means to allay the government's alleged fear about Dr. Lee's release on reasonable bail pending trial. The right to reasonable bail is guaranteed by Amendment VIII of the United States Constitution to all American citizens, including Dr. Lee.

It is not acceptable for the United States Attorney's office to deny any American the opportunity of reasonable bail due to the possibility that the outcome of the independent polygraph would weaken the government's case. Every prosecutor's first duty is to achieve justice and fairness, not to convict at all cost.

The Petitioners also seek improved conditions for Dr. Lee, who continues to be shackled in prison awaiting trial to clear his name. The conditions under which Dr. Lee is imprisoned are shameful. No person should be subject to such arbitrary and harsh conditions, especially one who, like Dr. Lee, is presumed to be innocent.

Your immediate response to the request of the Petitioners is anticipated. All original petition signatures are available for inspection by you or your representative at my office, by appointment.

Sincerely,

PHYLLIS I. HEDGES.

FIGHT UNJUST TREATMENT OF DR. WEN HO LEE!

Dr. Wen Ho Lee continues to be shackled as a prisoner in a Sante Fe jail although his trial is months away. Excessive, punitive restraints have been imposed on Dr. Lee while he waits for the opportunity to clear his name which was smeared by government leaks accusing him of being a spy. When the FBI, DOE, and United States Attorney found no evidence of spying by Dr. Lee they rationalized their botched investigation, laced with racism, by bringing criminal charges against Lee for placing classified information on non-classified computer tapes.

The U.S. Attorney swayed the Albuquerque judge to deny bail by conjuring fear that Lee might somehow spirit the destroyed tapes and himself abroad. The judge indicated Lee should be released pending trial and suggested the U.S. Attorney agree to a polygraph examination offered by Lee's attorneys to verify the tapes were destroyed. The U.S. Attorney insists that Lee must agree to a polygraph administered by the FBI as well as FBI interrogations before and after the polygraph.

You can do something to fight this injustice. Below is a petition to the U.S. Attorney for New Mexico to agree to an independent polygraph as well as more humane conditions for Dr. Wen Ho Lee during his incarceration.

Please clip, sign, and return the petition to me at P.O. Box 1288, Los Alamos, NM. I will send the petition to the U.S. Attorney for New Mexico, listing your name with many others who have signed. Or, call me at 662–7400, to obtain a copy of the petition. For further information see www.wenholee.org.

PETITION

Petitioners request that the United States Attorney for the District of New Mexico agree to an independent polygraph examination of Dr. Wen Ho Lee, to be administered by a reputable organization not associated with the defense or the prosecution in the proceeding by the United States against Dr. Lee, to confirm the status of the seven ''missing'' tapes at issue in that proceeding.

Pending resolution of Dr. Lee's pre-trial release, Petitioners request that the United States Attorney for New Mexico institute improved conditions for Dr. Lee during his confinement, including increased recreation and visiting opportunities.

Re: Review of Special Restrictions Imposed on Dr. Wen Ho Lee

Hon. JANET RENO,
U.S. Attorney General,
U.S. Department of Justice, Washington DC.

DEAR MS. RENO: The enclosed petition was signed on behalf of Dr. Wen Ho Lee by 1,288 of Dr. Lee's fellow American citizens, urging that you exercise your authority to release Dr. Lee from the harsh detention conditions imposed at your direction under 28 CFR Sec. 501.2. This petition, sponsored by WenHoLee.Org, also has been endorsed by organizations with combined membership of over 100,000, 106-faculty members from 64 colleges and universities, and many community leaders, scientists and elected officials.

Dr. Lee has spent the past 120 days shackled in jail in Santa Fe, New Mexico, awaiting trial to clear his name. The conditions under which Dr. Lee is imprisoned are shameful. Such arbitrary and harsh detention conditions are unjustified and should not be extended. there is no factual basis to infer any threat of disclosure by Dr. Lee, and his treatment is not regular, particularly in contrast with the treatment of others for classified information lapses.

In national security cases the guide for implementing special detention restrictions under Sec. 501.2 is the prevention of disclosure of classified information. The restrictions must serve that goal.

Dr. Lee is charged with transferring classified information to non-classified tapes at his workplace, with the illegal intent to harm the United States or to secure an advantage to a foreign country. He is not charged with any espionage or spy activity and there exists no allegation that Dr. Lee transferred or ever attempted to transfer any sensitive information to any unauthorized recipient. The only ''evidence'' of the alleged criminal intent to harm the U.S. or assist another country is his transferring classified information to a non-classified system at his workplace.

Although there are several possible innocent explanations for such a transfer, your prosecutors chose to assume mal intent from Dr. Lee's transfer of work files that included some classified material. Their assumption is not well founded. Los Alamos National Laboratory has thrived as an exemplary scientific institution because of its university atmosphere, including its long history of tacitly disregarding security restrictions that impede efforts to achieve scientific and work-related goals.

It is imperative to seek accuracy in the national security justifications for causing Dr. Lee to suffer the demeaning and cruel conditions imposed on him. The original harsh detention conditions were imposed on the basis of conjecture rather than any reality of threats to national security. At the bail hearing for Dr. Lee, government witnesses and prosecutors engaged in preposterous rhetoric that distorted the nature of the classified information involved and its value to foreign entities. You have previously received letters sent by premiere scientific organizations, such as the American Physical Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Federation of American Scientists, New York Academy of Sciences, The Committee of Concerned Scientists, American Chemical Society, Overseas Chinese Physical Society, and others, protesting Dr. Lee's treatment and the voodoo science used to alarm the public. We ask that you consider these letters in arriving at your decision about Dr. Lee's detention.

Of particular note is the contrast of Dr. Lee's treatment with that of former CIA Director John Deutch. Handling of the Deutch and Lee cases reveals the irregular treatment of Dr. Lee. Mr. Deutch's security violations, which went uninvestigated for years, exposed the United States to far greater harm than the security lapses by Dr. Lee. Mr. Deutch made accessible at his home, current and top secret information significantly more important to national security than the information transferred by Dr. Lee, which was not top secret and in fact can be found in the open or developed by other countries such as China on their own. The actions of Mr. Deutch posed a clear and present threat to national security whereas Dr. Lee's actions did not.

Nevertheless the only consequence to Mr. Deutch was loss of a no longer required security clearance. Last year Dr. Lee lost his security clearance and with it the ability to continue his work at LANL to which he had dedicated the past 20 years. Then in March 1999 Dr. Lee lost his job and his retirement, consequences unheard of for any security violation at the national laboratories. Whereas mishandling of classified information should have been an internal matter for DOE and LANL, on December 10, 1999, the United States Attorney brought federal criminal charges that threaten him with life in prison, made a media display of having him arrested at home, and worked relentlessly to deny bail and any conditions of release. Since December 10, 1999, under your authority, Dr. Lee has been subjected to inhumane conditions during his pre-trial imprisonment.

The conclusion is inescapable that this overblown federal case emerged from the false accusations that Dr. Lee was engaged in espionage. The FBI has publicly stated the ensuing investigation of Dr. Lee was based on racial profiling. The FBI used intimidation, threats of execution, and lying, to try to force a confession during their interrogation of Dr. Lee. It can only be inferred that Dr. Lee's cruel treatment reflects bias against Dr. Lee, which should not have any place in the prosecutorial duty to achieve justice and fairness.

Yours is a critical responsibility to stem the improper treatment of Dr. Lee, who is presumed to be innocent of criminal wrongdoing. Continuing the cruel conditions of his detention would afflict all American citizens by diminishing the rights and freedoms we cherish.

Sincerely,

WENHOLEE, ORG

Petition Sponsored by: Wenholee.org, 3785 Armour Court, Freemont, CA 94536.

TO THE HONORABLE JANET RENO: We, the signers of this petition, urge you to take advantage of the opportunity afforded you under Title 28 of the Code of Federal Regulations to free Dr. Wen Ho Lee from his harsh and unjust confinement in the New Mexico jail.

Section 501.2 of Title 28 requires you to periodically reauthorize Dr. Lee's confinement. Under this law, you have the power to have Dr. Lee be confined to his home, with all necessary security precautions imposed at your discretion. Although Dr. Lee's movement will remain restricted under this arrangement, he will at lest be at home in humane conditions.

If you do not free Dr. Lee from jail, then you must at least order that his conditions of confinement, which have been more fit for a mass murderer, be significantly improved. The use of shackles on Dr. Lee under any circumstances is ridiculous.

As we make these requests of you, we would like to remind you that the government authorities already have conceded that the targeting of Dr. Lee has been entirely racially motivated and that there is no evidence of espionage by Dr. Lee. Yet, the government authorities continue to persecute Dr. Lee, singling him out on the basis of his race. The authorities' behavior and action have angered not just Chinese Americans across the country—but all Americans who believe that no one should be treated on the basis of his or her race or ethnicity, and that discrimination, especially by the government, is simply not acceptable!

Furthermore, the discriminatory persecution of Dr. Lee not only shames the United States of America and its citizens, it also impedes our nation's efforts to improve human rights conditions to the victims of government oppression everywhere else around the world.

Therefore, we, the people of America, ask you to do the right thing and free Dr. Lee!

On February 29, 2000 the American Association for the Advancement of Science sent the Attorney General a letter protesting Wen Ho Lee's inhumane treatment in prison at the Sante Fe County Detention Center.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE, DIRECTORATE FOR SCIENCE AND POLICY PROGRAMS,

Washington, DC, February 29, 2000.

Hon. JANET RENO,

Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

DEAR MADAME ATTORNEY GENERAL: I write on behalf of the Committee on Scientific Freedom and Responsibility of the American Association for the Advancement of Science concerning the matter of the continued denial of bail and the conditions of pre-trial incarceration of Dr. Wen Ho Lee. The AAAS is the world's largest multi-disciplinary scientific organization. The Committee on Scientific Freedom and Responsibility is charged by the Association to, among other things, address issues related to the human rights of scientists.

Our purpose is to inquire into the reasons for the extraordinarily restrictive conditions to which Dr. Lee has been subjected. Our disquiet with the government's treatment of Dr. Lee does not extend to the issue of his guilt or innocence, which will be decided by our courts on the basis of the evidence. Our concern stems from the possibility that Dr. Lee is being maltreated and may have been the target of special scrutiny because of his ethnic background.

This case has had an adverse impact on many of our colleagues and could damage our national labs as a result of the hemorrhaging of skilled scientists through resignation or attrition, falling recruitment and a decline in the international collaboration that are so vital to the success of DoE programs. There is some evidence that such losses are already occurring.

Our concerns relate to the following:

We have been informed that the original conditions of detention were—and remain—harsh in the extreme. He is confined to his cell 23 hours each day and was, until recently, kept completely indoors. When moved about within the confines of the prison, his arms and legs are shackled. His weekly meetings with family members are curtailed and monitored and, early on, he was required to speak English. He has no access to TV and, at first, was denied newspapers. While we understand that these conditions are now slightly modified, we are concerned that continuing restrictions not only serve as intimidation, but may inhibit his ability to prepare his defense and place an enormous emotional and physical burden on him, his family and his attorneys. From our perspective, Dr. Lee's pretrial treatment appears to be exceedingly cruel. Court records and prosecution documents give the distinct impression that many measures were imposed simply because he has Chinese associates and speaks Chinese. AAAS believes very strongly that place of birth or ethnic background should never be used to impugn the loyalty of scientists.

The justification for continued incarceration is that Dr. Lee, if released, is likely to pose a grave threat to our national security. In judging the merits of such a serious contention, we hope that you will consult with a few of the many informed independent weapons specialists and national security experts who no longer serve in government, and who therefore may provide an objective assessment of the risk. Should the Justice Department wish to seek such expert counsel, an appropriate source would be the National Academy of Sciences.

In sum, we believe it important that the scientific community be given some assurances on these issues. Otherwise, we worry that serious damage could be done to the U.S. scientific enterprise and to this nation's future prosperity and security if the government is perceived by scientists as treating Dr. Lee unfairly and relying on unfounded claims regarding threats to national security.

Sincerely,

IRVING A. LERCH,

Chair, AAAS Committee on Scientific Freedom and Responsibility.

On March 14, 2000 the New York Academy of Science wrote to the Attorney General protesting the harsh treatment of Wen Ho Lee.

MARCH 14, 2000.

DEAR ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO: I am writing on behalf of the Committee on Human Rights of Scientists of the New York Academy of Sciences. In this we are joining other prominent scientific organizations such as the American Physical Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Committee of Concerned Scientists regarding the condition of detention and the denial of bail for Dr. Wen Ho Lee accused of mishandling classified information at the Los Alamos National Laboratories. At the outset we emphasize that we do not take a position on Dr. Lee's guilt or innocence which must be determined at trial.

For more than 20 years, this Committee has been deeply concerned about governmental treatment and repression of scientists throughout the world. Among the cases in which we have intervened were those of Professors Andrel Sakharov, Fang Li Zhe, Benjamin Levich, and recently Alexandr Nikitin, to name just a few. Often the scientists named in these cases were accused by their governments of violation of secrecy, treason, and other high crimes. Our Committee has always paid close attention to the conditions under which these and other individuals were held during their detention, as well as related matters such as denial of bail, access to counsel, and openness and fairness of trial.

It has been reported to us that the conditions of Dr. Lee's detention have been harsh. He has been shackled in prison, restricted to his cell in isolation, had his meetings with immediate family curtailed, and been restricted about outside information such as TV and newspapers. These conditions remind us of the abuses that occurred under Communist rule in the former Soviet Union and occur to this day in other totalitarian states such as in China, Iran, and others.

The impression given to the world by the Government's treatment of Dr. Lee is that he has already been found guilty of charges against him. Witness, for example, the statement repeated by CIA Director George Tenet that Lee's actions were taken ''with intent to harm the United States.'' We earnestly call to your attention that Dr. Lee's treatment during his detention has had a seriously chilling effect on the scientific community, especially because of the suspicion that his ethnic background has played some role in this treatment and in the unproven public allegations made about his possible motives for the acts of which he is accused.

In addition, reliable reports reach us that the recruiting and retention of top scientific staff at our major national laboratories, including weapon laboratories, have been damaged by this affair. We urge that you look into the treatment of Dr. Lee and see to it that the physical and psychological conditions of Dr. Lee's detention conform to the highest international standards for the humane treatment of people in detention awaiting trial. Continuation of the harsh treatment of Dr. Lee will expose us to ridicule when we criticize such treatment in other countries around the world.

The New York Academy of Sciences is an independent, non-profit, global membership organization committed to advancing science, technology, and society worldwide. Established in 1817, the Academy is the oldest scientific organization in New York and the third oldest in the nation. It is an international organization with nearly 40,000 members in more than 150 countries.

We respectfully await your response in this matter of importance to this Committee and to the international scientific community.

Sincerely,

JOSEPH L. BIRMAN,
Chairman of the Committee on Human Rights of Scientists.

April 27, 2000 a Resolution passed by the Episcopal Church USA was sent to the Attorney General protesting the harsh treatment of Wen Ho Lee.

To: Executive Council, Episcopal Church, USA.

From: international and National Concerns Committee.

Date: April 27, 2000.

Subject: Incarceration of Dr. Wen Ho Lee (Resolution proposed by Ms. Carole Jan Lee, Member of Executive Council from San Francisco, California).

Resolved, That the Executive Council meeting in the Diocese of Washington, DC, April 27–30, 2000, calls for the humane treatment of Dr. Wen Ho Lee, a U.S. citizen, who has been under arrest without bail in solitary confinement with limited family visits, and that these conditions have created grave concern, particularly among the Asian American community, of being unduly harsh treatment along racial lines, a perception for which the Council has concern given the number of disturbing complex factors in this case, and be it Further

Resolved, That this case moves forward in a manner that assures that Dr. Lee receives due process, and be it Further

Resolved, That this resolution is not intended to speak of the veracity of the very serious charges that have been filed against Dr. Lee.

(Resolution passed, thirty-five members present; six abstentions.)

Note: Copies of this resolution will be sent to Attorney General Janet Reno, and to our Washington Office.

JUNE 26, 2000.

Hon. JANET RENO,
Attorney General, Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

DEAR MADAM ATTORNEY GENERAL: We write with regard to our original March 10 inquiry to you about the case of Dr. Wen Ho Lee (#99–1417) and to express our appreciation for the May 24 response that we received from Mr. John J. Dion.

The information that Mr. Dion provided about Dr. Lee's case was, of course, of interest to us. However, because Mr. Dion did not address many of the questions that we posed in our initial letter of inquiry, we are taking the liberty of requesting, once again, information on the conditions and circumstances under which Dr. Lee is being held. Surely, the answers we seek cannot in any way impinge upon the just prosecution of a pending case.

It is our understanding that Dr. Lee has been held in solitary confinement since his arrest on December 10, 1999, that he has been denied bail, and that he will not be brought to trial until November 6. We would like your personal assurances that his conditions of confinement have been in full accordance with all U.S. and international standards. We have inquired as to what and how much contact Dr. Lee is permitted to have with his family, defense counsel, and lawyers. Although Mr. Dion said in his letter that arrangements have been made to allow Dr. Lee's family to meet with him ''for more than one hour per week,'' he did not say what the new arrangements for Dr. Lee allow nor did he report with whom he is now allowed to meet.

We would also like to know whether, as has been alleged by Dr. Lee's family, instruments of restraint are being applied to him. If so, what instruments are used, when and for how long are they applied, why, and under what circumstances?

With regard to the need for a fair and timely trial, we seek your personal assurances that Dr. Lee's rights not to be coerced into giving a confession and not to be held in a coercive environment are being fully respected. We would also like to know what access Dr. Lee's lawyers are being given to information needed to adequately prepare his defense.

You should know that the above questions are identical to those that our Academies regularly pose to foreign governments when we desire assurances that the rights of our imprisoned colleagues in other countries are being fully respected. Surely, we cannot expect less from our own government.

We are grateful for your attention and look forward to your reply.

Very truly yours,

BRUCE ALBERTS,
President, National Academy of Sciences.
WILLIAM WULF,
President, National Academy of Engineering.
KENNETH SHINE,

Finally by mid-July 2000 his conditions of confinement were eased. By the last week in July he finally was allowed to exercise without ankle shackles. This, his friends conclude, came about because there was another bill hearing scheduled on August 16, 2000. Remember Judge Parker had asked that the confinement restrictions be eased. August 16, 2000 Amnesty International protested to the Justice Department that Wen Ho Lee's confinement was in violation of international law.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL PROTESTS SOLITARY CONFINEMENT, SHACKLING OF DR. WEN HO LEE

WASHINGTON, DC, AUG. 16, 2000.—Amnesty International, the world's largest human rights organization, has written to Attorney General Janet Reno to protest the conditions under which Dr. Wen Ho Lee has been held in pre-trial federal detention since December 1999.

In the Aug. 4 letter, released as Judge James A. Parker hears a renewed application for Dr. Lee's release on bail, Amnesty International expressed concern at reports that Dr. Lee has been held in particularly harsh conditions of solitary confinement, and has been confined to his cell for 23 hours each day. According to reports, Dr. Lee has also been shackled at the wrists, waist, and ankles while taking exercise once or twice a week in a federal enclosure. Amnesty International is insisting that the use of shackles be immediately discontinued.

These conditions are unnecessarily punitive and contravene international human rights standards, said Curt Goering, Senior Deputy Executive Director of Amnesty International USA. The use of shackles is extremely disturbing and is grossly inappropriate in the circumstances.

Rule 33 of the United Nations (UN) Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners provides that restraints should be used only when strictly as a precaution against escape during transfer, on medical grounds on the direction of the medical officer or to prevent damage or injury. The rules also state that restraints should never be applied as punishment and that chains or irons shall not be used as restraints. The rules also provide that every prisoner (including pretrial detainees) should have at least one hour of suitable exercise in the open air daily.

Amnesty International believes that the overall conditions under which Dr. Lee is detained contravene international standards, which require that all persons deprived of their liberty be treated humanely and with respect for their inherent dignity. Amnesty International is urging the Justice Department to urgently review Dr. Lee's conditions of confinement and ensure that he is being treated in accordance with international standards. Such steps should include provision for adequate exercise and out-of-cell time and reasonable contact with the outside world.

August 31, 2000 the National Academies that had previously written (3 letters) to the Attorney General again regarding her failure to respond to their earlier letters.

AUGUST 31, 2000.

An Open Letter to the U.S. Attorney General

Hon. JANET RENO, Attorney General,
U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

DEAR MADAM ATTORNEY GENERAL: We, the presidents of the National Academies, along with our Committee on Human Rights and many of our members, are distressed by several matters which have arisen regarding the case of Dr. Wen Ho Lee and his incarceration during the past eight months. Although we make no claim as to his innocence or guilt, he appears to be a victim of unjust treatment.

We are writing to you, as the chief law officer and legal counsel of our nation, to urge you to rectify any wrongs to which Dr. Lee has been subjected, and to ensure that he receives fair and just treatment from now on. We also urge that those responsible for any injustice that he has suffered be held accountable. Even more importantly, perhaps, we urge that safeguards be put in place to ensure that, in future, others do not suffer the same plight.

We write publicly because our private letters of March 10, April 14, and June 26 of this year with regard to Dr. Lee's plight have been responded to only by a form letter signed by your Acting Chief of the Internal Security Section. (His letter was not a satisfactory response to the questions that we had posed, as we indicated in our follow-up letter of June 26.)

We should perhaps explain that, for more than a century, the National Academy of Sciences has provided independent, objective scientific advice to our nation. By extension of its original congressional charter, it established the National Academy of Engineering, the Institute of Medicine, and the National Research Council. Some 4,800 of our nation's most distinguished leaders in science, engineering, medicine, and related fields have been selected by their peers to be members of the Academies and the Institute.

We are concerned that inaccurate and detrimental testimony by government officials resulted in Dr. Lee needlessly spending eight months in prison under harsh and questionable conditions of confinement. Our assessment appears to have been confirmed by the recent ruling of Judge James Parker in granting bail to Dr. Lee.

The three institutions of which we are presidents have an active Committee on Human Rights. During the last 25 years this committee has intervened in the name of our institutions on behalf of hundreds of scientific colleagues, around the world, who are unjustly detained or imprisoned for nonviolently expressing their opinions. The committee writes inquiries and appeals to offending governments and holds them accountable for their actions. Although Dr. Lee has not been detained for expressing his opinions, the handling of his case reflects poorly on the U.S. justice system. The concerns that we have expressed and the questions that we have posed in our letters are identical to those that our Committee on Human Rights regularly poses to foreign governments, some of which have had the courtesy to respond. Surely, we cannot expect less from our own government.

Very truly yours,

BRUCE ALBERTS,
President, National Academy of Sciences.
WM. A. WULF,
President, National Academy of Engineering.
KENNETH I. SHINE,
President, Institute of Medicine.

TEXT OF THE FIRST LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENTS OF THE 3 NATIONAL ACADEMIES TO JANET RENO

MARCH 10, 2000.

Hon. JANET RENO,
Attorney General,
U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

DEAR MADAM ATTORNEY GENERAL: We write to inquire about the status of the case (#99–1417) of a physicist, former Los Alamos National Laboratory employee Wen Ho Lee. It is our understanding that Mr. Lee is charged with 59 felony counts under statutes 42 USC 2275, 2276 and 18 USC 793 (c&e). He is currently being held without bail in Albuquerque, New Mexico, pending trial.

The purpose of this letter is to inquire about several matters related to Mr. Lees case, as well as to request your assurances that his rights are being full respected.

In view of recent allegations in the press with regard to Mr. Lees treatment, we would appreciate being informed as to the conditions and circumstances under which Mr. Lee is being held. Are his conditions of confinement in accordance with all U.S. and international standards? We would also like to know whether, as has been alleged by Mr. Lee's family, instruments of restraint have been applied to him. If so, what instruments were used, when and for how long were they applied, why, and under what circumstances?

With regard to the need for a fair trial, we would value your assurances that Mr. Lee's rights not to be coerced into giving a confession and not to be held in a coercive environment are being fully respected. What and how much contact is Mr. Lee permitted to have with his family, defense counsel, and lawyers? We would also like to know what access Mr. Lee's lawyers are being given to information needed to adequately prepare his defense.

We very much appreciate your attention to our inquiry and look forward to receiving information that will help to assure us that all reasonable measures are being taken to protect Mr. Lee's rights, in full accordance with U.S. and international law.

Very truly yours,

BRUCE ALBERTS,
President, National Academy of Sciences.
WILLIAM WULF,
President, National Academy of Engineering.

January 30, 2000, the National Asian Pacific American Legal Consortium wrote to the Attorney General expressing concerns about overzealous prosecution and detention.

On April 13, 2000, the Organization of Chinese Americans wrote to Norman Bay, the U.S. Attorney based in Albuquerque, raising questions about his detention.

On August 18, 1999, the National Asian Pacific American Bar Association wrote to the Attorney General noting the fact that the FBI had not investigated the other prime suspects. It noted the comments of Robert S. Vrooman, former Chief of Counter-Intelligence at Los Alamos who said Wen Ho Lee was targeted because he was Chinese.

Re: Dr. Wen Ho Lee

Hon. JANET RENO,
Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

DEAR MADAM ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO: Per our meeting January 12, 2000, I am enclosing a memorandum discussing the Asian Pacific American community's concerns that we raised with you and Deputy Attorney General Eric Holder concerning the prosecution of Dr. Wen Ho Lee. We don't seek to argue about Dr. Lee's guilt or innocence, but instead to focus on his treatment. It appears to the Asian American community, indeed to many concerned about issues of civil liberties and due process, that some of the prosecution's decisions have been overzealous—perhaps out of embarrassment because of the many media reports about how the investigation was handled.

We are concerned that the intense media scrutiny and high political stakes involved in his case may be compromising Dr. Lee's due process rights and civil liberties as an American citizen and bringing the loyalties of the nation's Asian Pacific Americans under a cloud of suspicion. Our analysis takes into careful consideration of U.S. District Judge James Parker's Memorandum Opinion and Order and the voluminous bail hearing transcripts.

I thank you for taking the time to meet with us, and for the sensitive manner in which you handled and continue to give attention to our concerns. I look forward to your reply.

Sincerely,

KAREN K. NARASAKI,
Executive Director.

MEMORANDUM

To: Attorney General Janet Reno.
From: Karen Narasaki, Executive Director, NAPALC; Aryani Ong, Staff Attorney.
Date: January 30, 2000.
Re: Dr. Wen Ho Lee's Pretrial Detention.

Currently, Dr. Lee is being held in prison pending trial, having been denied pretrial release. He has been charged with 59 separate counts involving 19 computer files—29 counts of removing and tampering with restricted data, 10 counts of receiving restricted data, 10 counts of gathering national defense information and 10 counts of retaining national defense information. We understand that he is being held in custody under solitary confinement. He cannot see his family except for four hours per month nor receive any mail. We've also heard reports that he is not being allowed to speak Chinese to his visitors.

I. DR. LEE HAS FACED HARSH TREATMENT THAT IS DISPROPORTIONATE TO THE EVIDENCE OF WRONGDOING

Many in the Asian American community believe that the prosecution has been overzealous in their treatment of Dr. Lee, given the evidence presented at the detention hearing and what has been reported in the news. They are convinced that federal investigators used racial profiling in the initial targeting of Dr. Lee. They also believe that the Department of Energy and others involved are acting so harshly due to embarrassment from the congressional attacks, the reported bungling of the initial investigation and the failure to find evidence of espionage after the investigation was leaked.

Many community leaders believe that prosecutors have been overstating the security risk to create a hostile public environment so that he will be tried based on the perception of espionage, despite the fact that there is insufficient evidence to even bring such a charge. He is being treated as though there is overwhelming evidence of espionage even though the detention hearing revealed no such evidence. Without such evidence, the community believes that pretrial detention in solitary confinement is not warranted. Solitary confinement seems to have no basis except to impose psychological stress on the defendant so that he will not be able to pursue the vigorous defense to which he is entitled.

A. DENIAL OF PRE-TRIAL RELEASE

Where the statutory scheme 18 U.S.C. §3142 generally favors the defendant, Dr. Lee nonetheless was denied bail. While we respect the judge's decision, we are concerned that he was provided with characterizations of Dr. Lee as a Chinese spy that are not substantiated by the evidence and that influenced his decision not to consider alternative conditions for release. For many in the Asian community, it bears a potential resemblance to the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the internment of Japanese Americans because the threat to national security was overstated by government attorneys who destroyed evidence that undercut the argument. While we are certainly not charging the Department of Justice with such misconduct here, we do believe that Korematsu v. U.S., 323 U.S. 214 (1944), Hirabayashi v. U.S., 320 U.S. 81 (1943), and Yasui v. U.S., 320 U.S. 115 (1943) are cases instructive of how much more careful we must be when national security threats are being claimed as a basis for unfair and harsh treatment.

Under §3142(b), the judge ''shall order the pretrial release'' of a defendant to ''subject to the least restrictive further condition.'' According to Judge Parker, no alternative conditions would save against the ''danger'' posed by Dr. Lee's ''ability to communicate with unauthorized persons while under house arrest.''

We are concerned with the suggestive nature of this assertion because there is no evidence that shows that Dr. Lee transferred any classified information to an unauthorized third party nor ever attempted to commit such act. Moreover, the Government has not provided any direct evidence of Dr. Lee's intent to use classified information to injure the United States nor procure unfair advantage to a foreign nature. Yet, the charges brought against Dr. Lee make this assertion, and while espionage is not expressly among them, the specter of espionage is raised throughout the detention hearing and prominently figures into the judge's rationale for denying a pretrial release.

What the evidence does show is that Dr. Lee has been the target of an investigation since 1995 for the possible theft of W–88 data theft, which he has been cleared for over a year. In March 1999, he was placed under 24-hour secret surveillance for nine months, yet during that time, the FBI acquired no evidence showing that Dr. Lee attempted to transfer or transferred classified information to any unauthorized third party. Instead, they found six tapes in his office, and received an offer from Dr. Lee to take a polygraph test to determine the truthfulness of his statement to the FBI regarding the seven missing tapes. The Government rejected the offer, but used his inability to produce the missing tapes as the rationale for holding him without bail. This places Dr. Lee in the untenable position of producing tapes that he says has been destroyed or proving they no longer exist. How can he be expected to prove they no longer exist?

Furthermore, even though Dr. Lee is not charged with espionage, the Govenrment strongly inferred the allegation during the detention hearings. We are concerned that Dr. Lee's contacts with Chinese scientists and government officials are depicted as bad acts in and of themselves when the evidence shows otherwise. Dr. Lee's trips to China were authorized by the Los Alamos National Laboratories and his scientific collaborations with the Chinese were encouraged by the Secretary of the Department of Energy.

The Government successfully argued that Dr. Lee is a national security risk based on the fact that the seven portable tapes are missing and that Dr. Lee has the cognitive ability to potentially assist a third party in using the codes. Based on a single witness, they persuaded the Court to view Dr. Lee's actions in the most damaging light possible, using words such as ''devious,'' ''nefarious,'' and ''secretive and deceptive.''

Without doubt, we too find Dr. Lee's actions very grave. We do not condone any employee who breaches security rules, especially when sensitive defense information such as nuclear weapons designs is involved. However, we also are guided by the evidence presented and the presumption of innocence until proven guilty in our justice system.

Dr. Lee faces very serious criminal charges, but he has not had his day in court. Meanwhile, he is being held in custody as if he posed a threat of heinous violence to the community. We particularly are concerned that despite many alternatives that have been in practice by other courts, i.e., house arrest, electronic monitoring, supervision by a third-party custodian, visitation by court-approved persons and consent to unannounced searches, the Government chose the harshest alternative for a nonviolent offense.

The Court uses a four-part test to determine whether there are conditions of release that will reasonably assure a defendant's appearance and the safety of the community. We find that the evidence shows the following: (1) Dr. Lee was not charged with committing a violent act or dealing with drugs; (2) no direct evidence exists to prove that Dr. Lee had the intent to injure the United States or procure an unfair advantage to a foreign nation; (3) Dr. Lee has strong community ties and no past criminal record; and, (4) he has not acted in a manner to suggest that he poses a danger to society; there is no evidence that he attempted to transfer or transferred classified information to an unauthorized third party nor that he assisted any person with the use of the classified information. Yet, despite the evidence, Dr. Lee been denied one of the most sacred guarantees by our Constitution—his freedom.

Judge James Parker indicated that he would be willing to revisit the issue of pretrial release if Dr. Lee could satisfactorily account for the missing seven tapes. We encourage the Government to work with Dr. Lee's attorneys on Dr. Lee's offer to take a polygraph test as to the disposition of the tapes so that they can move forward on discussing alternative conditions of release.

B. IMPOSITION OF THE HARSHEST RESTRICTIONS DURING DETAINMENT

Dr. Lee has been placed under solitary confinement and restricted from family visits except for four hours per month. While the prison warden may have the discretionary authority regarding at least visitation, we believe that the Government can weigh on the conditions imposed on Dr. Lee's confinement.

We are concerned about reports from the media and the detention hearing transcripts that the FBI have been employing psychological tactics to pressure Dr. Lee to ''confess'' to wrongdoings or to break down his will to go through a trial. The Asian American community does not understand the national interest in placing harsh restrictions on a defendant who has been been proven guilty. In fact, Dr. Lee's treatment in jail only has strengthened the majority view of the Asian Pacific American community that the Government has selectively and unfairly investigated and prosecuted Dr. Lee.

Judge Parker urged the Government to consider loosening what he himself described as severe restrictions imposed on Dr. Lee. We also urge the Government to carefully consider the offer by Dr. Lee's attorneys to have Dr. Lee undergo a polygraph test so that Court may reevaluate any changed circumstances that warrant his pretrial release.

II. THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE SHOULD BE PARTICULARLY CIRCUMSPECT GIVEN THE POLITICAL NATURE OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING DR. LEE'S PROSECUTION

The Asian American community has been carefully monitoring the developments of Dr. Lee's situation because they are concerned that political forces may be playing an inappropriately significant role in the investigation and prosecution of Dr. Lee. The media, initially led by The New York Times recklessly portrayed Dr. Lee as a Chinese spy. The Cox House Committee Report, later criticized for serious inaccuracies by the Rudman Report and esteemed Stanford University researchers, took advantage of the opportunity to embarrass the Administration by fanning fears about Communist China.

Given Dr. Lee's ethnic background, the community was concerned that he was investigated on the basis of his ethnic background. Former FBI counterintelligence officers reporting to the media that they believed racial profiling occurred in Dr. Lee's case validated their concerns. Further reports that in fact the Chinese government could have gained the information from other sources and that Dr. Lee's laboratory probably could not have been the source for the design information have added to the community's alarm.

While the community does not condone Dr. Lee's egregious mishandling of classified information, they fear that Dr. Lee is vulnerable to being used as a scapegoat to take attention from the embarrassing wealth of security lapses that the Energy Department has allowed to occur. In its efforts to overcome the series of embarrassing disclosures and to look tough on security, the Department of Energy may not be acting fairly or providing prosecutors with full disclosure.

The Asian American community is concerned that Dr. Lee's due process rights may fall victim to political scapegoating and that negative repercussions for other Asian Americans working in science and technology may follow if a pattern of disregard for civil liberties is established in this case.

NATIONAL ASIAN PACIFIC AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, August 18, 1999.

Hon. JANET RENO,
Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

DEAR MS. RENO: We are writing to express our deep concern about recent accounts that race may have played a significant factor in pursuing the investigation of Dr. Wen Ho Lee for alleged espionage. While we do not condone acts of espionage or any other illegal activity by any individual, we ask that you ensure that race is not now a factor as you make decisions regarding this and other investigations and prosecutions involving security violations at Los Alamos and other national laboratories.

According to Senators Fred Thompson and Joseph Lieberman in a statement issued on August 5, 1999, the Department of Energy and the Federal Bureau of Investigation had multiple suspects for leaks of nuclear warhead information and yet only two—Dr. Lee and his wife—were investigated. Because the DOE and FBI investigators failed to look into the other suspects ''—that is, to assess whether these others were not for some reason equally suspicious—meant that it was impossible to be sure that the Lees really did stand out as the prime suspects.'' (Thompson/Lieberman Report p. 18.) This account is further buttressed by recent statements made by Robert S. Vrooman, former chief of Counter-Intelligence at the Los Alamos National Laboratory. Mr. Vrooman stated that Dr. Lee was targeted for investigation mainly because of his ethnicity, and that there is no evidence that Dr. Lee leaked secrets to China. Mr. Vrooman noted that at least 13 Caucasian scientists from Los Alamos ''who went to the same [physics] institute and visited the same people'' as Dr. Lee were left out of the investigation.

Furthermore, both the Thompson/Lieberman Statement and Mr. Vrooman noted that key technical information concerning certain weapons, whose acquisition by the Chinese government initiated the investigation of Mr. Lee, was available to numerous government and military entities that could have been the source of the leaked information.

While we recognize that Mr. Vrooman's statements will be subject to debate, we believe that it is important that you verify that no ''racial profiling'' occurred in this investigation. Additionally, we would like to request a meeting with you to discuss these issues. In the meantime, we ask that as you continue your investigation of security leaks at our national laboratories, you do so with a heightened consideration for fairness.

Mr. NORMAN BAY,
U.S. Attorney, Albuquerque, NM.

DEAR MR. BAY: Thank you very much for meeting with us last week. The Asian Pacific American community nationwide has been monitoring the Wen Ho Lee case for over a year. The community has been concerned with the public discourse and media stereotypes arising from the case that insinuate all Asian Pacific Americans as disloyal foreigners. With regard to Dr. Lee, the community is wondering whether he has been accorded his due process rights as an American citizen during the investigation and decision making to prosecute him.

Since Dr. Lee's incarceration in December of 1999, the community has been very concerned about the fact that he has not been granted bail until his trial. One of the questions we have is what are the conditions, if any, must Dr. Lee meet in order for him to be released on bail?

As a follow up to our conversation, we wanted to ask specific questions about Dr. Lee's incarceration.

We understand that Dr. Lee has been charged with mishandling classified data. A concern of the community is that since Dr. Lee has not been charged with espionage then why is he being treated as if he has been charged with espionage? As someone charged with a nonviolent act, the community believes Dr. Lee should be treated like those charged with other nonviolent ''white collar'' offenses.

We have heard the following:

Dr. Lee is in ''solitary confinement.''

Dr. Lee is ''shackled'' all day.

Dr. Lee's ankles and wrists are shackled when he is moved within the jail facility, even during his one hour of exercise, and unremoved during weekly meetings with his family.

No collect calls to any outside party are allowed except to his counsel.

Kept separate from other prisoners during one hour long exercise.

Dr. Lee is only allowed one hour outside of his jail cell for exercise per day, but not always outside under the sunlight.

Dr. Lee is not allowed to read newspapers, magazines, books.

Dr. Lee is not allowed to watch TV.

We would greatly appreciate your response to these points as soon as possible so that we may accurately respond to the inquiries from our community about Dr. Lee's confinement. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Executive Director, Organization of Chinese Americans.

DECLARATION OF ROBERT VROOMAN

I, Robert Vrooman, do hereby declare and state:

1. I have reviewed the government's response to Wen Ho Lee's Motion for Discovery of Materials Related to Selective Prosecution, including the attached Declaration of Special Agent Robert Messemer. As set out below, Agent Messsemer's declaration contains numerous false statements. Based on my experiences with Agent Messemer and the information I have received from other FBI agents, I believe that the regularly distorts information.

2. I did not tell Agent Messemer that Lee probably assisted the Chinese by helping fix Chinese hydrocodes during his travel in 1986 and 1988. His allegation that I did so is false. Our April 28, 1999 meeting focused on [approx, one line deleted] and Agent Messemer's theory that there was something inappropriate going on [words deleted]. I attended that interview solely as a favor to John Browne, the director of Los Alamos National Laboratory. When it was over, I told Browne that I considered the interview strange, because it had nothing to do with the Lee case. I later learned from officials at the CIA that Agent Messemer was falsely informing CIA officials that I had been critical [word(s) deleted]. At the time, Agent Messemer was attempting to shift blame to the CIA for possible fallout [words deleted]. I sought to obtain a copy of Agency Messemer's memoranda of my interview and to have it corrected. See Attachment one. The FBI refused to provide me a copy of this memorandum, which I expect contains false information.

3. Agent Messemer's statement that the individuals selected for investigation was chosen because they fit ''matrix'' based on access to W–88 information and travel to the PRC is false. Dozens of individuals who share those characteristics were not chosen for investigation. As I explained in my prior declaration, it is my firm belief that the actual reason Dr. Lee was selected for investigation was because he made a call to another person who was under investigation in spite of the fact that he assisted the FBI in this case. It is my opinion that the failure to look at the rest of the population is because Lee is ethnic Chinese.

4. Mr. Moore's contention that the Chinese target ethnically Chinese individuals to the exclusion of others, therefore making it rational to focus investigations on such individuals was not borne out by our experience at Los Alamos, which was the critical context for this investigation. It was our experience that Chinese intelligence officials contacted everyone from the laboratories with a nuclear weapons background who visited China for information, regardless of their ethnicity. I am unaware of any empirical data that would support any inference that an American citizen born in Taiwan would be more likely than any other American citizen [deletion].

5. Of the twelve people ultimately chosen for the short list on which the investigation focused, some had no access at all to W–88 information, and one did not have a security clearance, but this individuals is ethnically Chinese. I do not believe this was a coincidence. Further, this ethnically Chinese individual did not fall within the ''matrix'' which Agent Messemer claims was used by the DOE and FBI. In addition, although there were other names on the HI list, Mr. Trulock made clear that Dr. Lee was his primary suspect.

6. Agent Messemer deliberately mischaracterizes the nature of my comments to him regarding my concerns about Dr. Lee's travel to the PRC. I did consider it unusual that Dr. Lee had not reported any contact by Chinese agents when I debriefed him following his return from the PRC. I did not believe then and I do not believe now that Dr. Lee engaged in espionage, and I made no such intimation to Agent Messemer. Dr. Lee and his wife Sylvia were both cooperating with FBI investigations, and I considered them loyal Americans. Nonetheless, I considered Dr. Lee naive, and therefore a potential security risk. It was to keep Dr. Lee out of harm's way, not because I had any fear that he might knowingly engage in improper conduct, that I recommended against further unescorted trips out of the country for Dr. Lee.

7. My concerns about the real motivation behind the investigation were exacerbated when I received a classified intelligence briefing from Dr. Thomas Cook, an intelligence analysis at LANL, in September 1999. This briefing put to rest any concerns that I may have had that Dr. Lee helped the Chinese in any substantial manner.

8. In my capacity as a counterintelligence investigator at LANL, I was brief on the existence of an investigation code-named ''Buffalo Slaughter'' some time in the late 1980s involving a non-Chinese individual working at DOE laboratory who transferred classified information to a foreign country. That individual was granted full immunity in return for agreeing to a full debriefing on the information that he passed. [Approx. six lines deleted].

9. The statements contained in my Declaration dated June 22, 2000 are true and correct and I so attest.

I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the United States that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed August 10, 2000, at Gallatin Gateway, Montana.

DAVID V. KITCHEN,
Special Agent in Charge, FBI 415 Silver SW, Albuquerque, NM.

DEAR MR. KITCHEN: I would like to have a copy of the 302 prepared by S.A. Robert Messemer as a result of his interview with me on April 28, 1999. Several members of the CIA's IG office have read me portions [of] Messemer's report, and it is clear to me that SA Messemer attributed his opinions to me. During the interview, I told SA Messemer that I did not know [deletion] well enough to have an opinion [deletion]. He then provided me with the details and asked me to speculate on the implications. I find this interview technique objectionable.

On the other hand, SA Messemer did provide me with a lot of details regarding Dr. Lee that I did not know. This helped to solidify my opinions on the case and to have the confidence to go public. I learned during the meeting with SA Messemer that Dr. Lee [Approx. one line deleted]. SA Messemer was particularly helpful to us when he provided us a copy of Mr. Bruno's April 15, 1997 memorandum to Notra Trulock thus allowing us to defend our decision to keep Dr. Lee in his job. For this I am grateful to SA Messemer, but I still object to his using me to promote his opinions.

I am planning to write a book on my experiences and would like to have the 302 as soon as possible.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT S. VROOMAN.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
CRIMINAL DIVISION,
Washington, DC, March 29, 2000.

Mr. PHYLLIS HEDGES,
P.O. Box 1288, Los Alamos, NM.

DEAR MR. HEDGES: This is in response to your letter to the Department of Justice concerning the prosecution of Wen Ho Lee. Although I am not able to comment in detail about a pending case, I hope you will find the following information useful.

This prosecution is based solely on the facts and the law, Dr. Lee's Chinese heritage and ancestry played no role whatsoever in the decision to prosecute him. Like you, I am very disturbed by news accounts suggesting that Dr. Lee has been singled out for investigation and prosecution because of his ethnicity. Let me assure you that this is not the way the Department of Justice or the Criminal Division operates. To render a decision on a potential prosecution on the basis of race or ethnicity, even in part, would violate the Department's ethical canons, as well as my own personal beliefs.

As you may know, Dr. Lee was ordered to be detained pending trial by United States Magistrate Judge Svet and, thereafter, by United States District Judge Parker, who heard extensive testimony and legal argument. On February 29, 2000, a three-judge panel of the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit unanimously affirmed Judge Parker's decision.

With regard to the conditions of Dr. Lee's incarceration, I am advised that the limitations on visits by his family are the same as those for other similarly-situated prisoners at the facility where Dr. Lee is being held. We have, however, been able to accommodate the Lee family recently by arranging for a Mandarin language interpreter to be present for several meetings so that Dr. Lee's family can speak with him in his native language. We will continue to make the interpreter available as often as possible. Furthermore, we have arranged with the prison facility to allow Dr. Lee's family to meet with Dr. Lee for more than one hour per week.

Thank you for taking the time to write to express your views.

Sincerely,

JOHN J. DION,
Acting Chief, Internal Security Section.

At the request of the members of its Social Concerns Committee, the Congregation of the Unitarian Church of Los Alamos met in a Congressional Meeting on Friday, August 4, 2000 and, after a more than two-hour debate, passed the following resolution concerning the pretrial treatment of Dr. Wen Ho Lee. The resolution was passed by an affirmative vote of 97% of those voting.

RICHARD K. COOPER,
President, Unitarian Church of Los Alamos.

RESOLUTION IN SUPPORT OF CIVIL RIGHTS FOR DR. WEN HO LEE

August 4, 2000

WHEREAS, Dr. Wen Ho Lee, an American citizen, was arrested in December 1999 and charged in a 59-count indictment with transferring nuclear weapons data to an unsecured computer and portable storage systems in violation of federal laws;

WHEREAS, Dr. Lee is not charged with espionage;

WHEREAS, as documented in the transcript of the FBI interrogation, FBI agents lied to Dr. Lee about the results of a polygraph test which he passed, and threatened his life and his family in an effort to force Dr. Lee to confess to espionage;

WHEREAS, while awaiting trial set for November, 2000, and presumed innocent, Dr. Lee has been denied bail, jailed in solitary confinement, and subjected to harsh and cruel conditions which include the following:

Dr. Lee is in chains, shackled hands and feet whenever he is taken from his solitary cell; he is chained during his one hour per week visit with immediate family so that he must shuffle and awkwardly lean to activate the intercom with manacled hands in order to speak through glass (however, during a mid-July visit his handcuffs were removed) while two FBI agents monitor and censor each word; Dr. Lee remains in ankle chains when working with his lawyers behind triple locked doors in a windowless room in a secured facility;

Dr. Lee is not allowed any exercise, fresh air, or showers on weekends; the one hour of exercise weekdays he spends alone, and until recently in shackles, and he must forego any exercise or fresh air on days he meets his attorneys to prepare for trial; Dr. Lee's telephone calls are extremely limited, censored and transcribed; he is allowed no television and limited reading material; his mail is delayed by months;

AND WHEREAS, in protest of the treatment of Dr. Wen Ho Lee, is far more severe than needed to assure security, numerous organizations and individuals have adopted resolutions or written in protest to Attorney General Janet Reno and other government officials;

NOW, THEREFORE, it is resolved that the Unitarian Church of Los Alamos, New Mexico, while taking no position on the guilt or innocence of Dr. Lee with respect to the charges against him, concurs in the protest of the conditions of detention of Dr. Wen Ho Lee as cruel and overly harsh and is alarmed by the denial of Dr. Lee's civil libraries and rights to due process;

FURTHER, the Unitarian Church of Los Alamos, New Mexico, calls upon the government of the United States of America immediately to institute humane treatment of Dr. Lee and to seek from the Court pre-trial release of Dr. Lee under conditions that respect his human dignity;

And it is FURTHER RESOLVED that this Resolution shall be printed in publications of the Unitarian Church of Los Alamos, distributed to other appropriate Unitarian Universalist Association offices and congregations, and shall be delivered to U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno and to the congressional delegation from the State of New Mexico.

By September 7, 1999, the New York Times wrote a long article on Chinese espionage and noted that secret information regarding nuclear design was available not only at Los Alamos but ''to hundreds and perhaps thousands of individuals scattered throughout the nation.''

Citing a CIA official, the New York Times stated that this Wen Ho Lee case was going to be as ''bad as the Rosenbergs.''

All of this hysteria, I believe was deliberately programmed as a cover-up of the lack of security at the labs.

Wen Ho Lee being Taiwanese was an easy target.

Creating a climate of suspicion upon all Chinese is the terrible wreckage heaped by the storm on these loyal Americans.

If all that the New York Times alleged were true, why wasn't Wen Ho Lee charged with espionage?

The answer is obvious. There was never any evidence of espionage.

This case began in 1995 when a U.S. agent in Asia was approached by a Chinese defector with a 74-page document which purported to be a blueprint for a nuclear weapons program. It was 7 years old.

U.S. experts concluded it came from Los Alamos. Energy Department intelligence chief Notra Turlock took over the investigation. By May 1996 he had identified 12 suspects. Newsweek, September 25, 2000.

By late 1998 the FBI became convinced Lee was probably not their target. Newsweek.—By 1999 the political climate however changed and people were hot after finding a spy.

Newsweek states in its article of September 25, 2000, that Energy Secretary Bill Richardson called FBI Director Freeh and urged they accelerate Wen Ho Lee's investigation.

Wen Ho Lee had engaged in a pattern of deceit.

Dr. Robert A. Messemer, an FBI agent, admitted on August 17, 2000, at a December 1999 bail hearing for Wen Ho Lee, that he had misstated the testimony of a co-worker, Kuok-Mee Ling, suggesting that Wen Ho Lee had misled him in getting permission to use his computer. In fact, there was no deception.

Dr. Messemer also testified in August 2000 that he failed to tell the Judge in December 1999, that Dr. Lee had disclosed contracts with Chinese scientists in his 1986 trip to China.

Dr. Messemer had failed to tell the court in December 1999, that Wen Ho Lee had told the FBI in March 5, 1999, that he received various correspondence from Chinese scientists.

Nor did Dr. Messemer tell the court that the letters the FBI found in Dr. Lee's home did not prove he had sent them seeking a job. The letters were written to Australia, France, Singapore, and Switzerland.

Initially the felony charge against Wen Ho Lee was based on intent to harm the U.S. and to aid a foreign power.

Later, the prosecutor's case was based on showing Lee's motive was to impress prospective employers rather than to help China's nuclear program. Washington Post, September 24, 2000.

Mr. Richard Krajcik, Deputy Director of the Los Alamos top-secret X Division, testified on August 17, 2000, and conceded the information that Wen Ho Lee downloaded was not classified secret at the time he took it. AP New Mexico, August 18, 2000. He said it had not been reviewed for classification.

Judge James A. Parker in the final court hearing in which Wen Ho Lee was released of all 59 charges except one, said the government action against Wen Ho Lee had embarrassed the entire nation. Judge Parker said that the government had led him astray. Judge Parker apologized to Dr. Lee for the unfair manner in which he was held.

The question that lies unanswered with Wen Ho Lee's release is whether he in fact downloaded the ''crown jewels'' of our nation's nuclear weapons program so sensitive that it could change the global strategic balance if obtained by a foreign adversary.

INTO THE SUNSHINE

(By Michael Isikoff)

Every Saturday morning Sylvia Lee and her children would pass through the metal detector and take their seats by the glass partition in the bleak room where maximum-security prisoners meet visitors. A door would open and Wen Ho Lee, diminutive and soft-spoken at 60, would shuffle in flanked by two FBI agents. Lee's legs were shackled, his hands manacled and the handcuffs chained to his waist. ''It was just so horrible,'' his daughter, Alberta, says now. ''They were treating him like an animal.'' The Lee family time began—an hour of stilted togetherness with the FBI taking notes on every word. Seeing her father in chains, and knowing he was being held in complete isolation, frequently reduced Alberta to tears. Reading was one of his only escapes, and every week she brought him something new. His favorite was the novel by Gabriel García Márquez: ''One Hundred Years of Solitude.''

Wen Ho Lee's term of solitude ended last week in the collapse of the most highly publicized espionage case since the arrest of Aldrich Ames—a negotiated guilty plea on one count of mishandling classified information. The plea bargain stripped any remaining credibility from the hopelessly botched federal investigation of alleged Chinese spying at the Los Alamos National Laboratory, and it humiliated the FBI. It also infuriated U.S. district Judge James A. Parker, who said he had been ''misled'' into treating Wen Ho Lee as a dangerous spy. Calling Lee's imprisonment ''draconian'' and ''unfair'' Parker excoriated ''top decision makers'' at the Department of Justice and the Energy Department who, according to Parker, had ''embarrassed our nation.'' Lee and his lawyers claimed he had been targeted for investigation because he is Chinese, and critics charged that the FBI and the Energy Department had engaged in a new form of racial profiling. The Clinton administration, it seemed, had a bad case of cold-war paranoia.

The recriminations have only just begun. Stung by the judge's criticism and by a rebuke from Bill Clinton, Attorney General Janet Reno is likely to order an internal inquiry into what went wrong—a probe that could prove distinctly uncomfortable to Reno herself, FBI Director Louis Freeh and other senior officials. But even as they acknowledged a badly flawed case, senior law-enforcement officials insisted they were right to go after Lee in the first place. They say his actions raise troubling questions that are still unanswered.

As late as last Monday, Newsweek has learned, Reno and other top Justice officials nearly torpedoed the deal after Lee admitted for the first time that he made copies of the computer tapes containing nuclear secrets he downloaded from Los Alamos's classified computers. Lee insisted he had destroyed all the copies along with seven original tapes the FBI never recovered and that he never compromised U.S. security. But his new admission triggered a series of tense discussions among top national-security officials. ''People were really angry and upset,'' said one source. For a time Reno and other top officials were strongly leaning toward taking the troubled case to trial anyway.

In the end, Justice officials modified the deal with Lee. They gave themselves greater latitude to bring new charges against the scientist if they catch him lying during the intense debriefings he must now undergo. ''When the full story comes out,'' said one unrepentant law-enforcement official, ''people are going to see that he's not the poor little innocent he's being made out to be.''

Maybe so, but suspicions are not what federal prosecutions are supposed to be about. What drove the Lee case was legitimate national-security concerns—warped by politics. The case began in 1995 when a U.S. agent in Asia was approached by a Chinese ''walk-in'' defector with a sensational intelligence coup—a 74-page document that purported to be the blueprint for modernizing China's nuclear-weapons program. Although it was seven years old, the document included numerous pieces of information, and some key phrases, that suggested a massive security leak at Los Alamos. It also included a design virtually identical to the W88, a state-of-the-art thermonuclear warhead built for U.S. missile subs. While skeptics suggested the document may have been a plant by Chinese intelligence, some U.S. experts were convinced that much of the information had indeed been stolen from Los Alamos. One of them was Energy Department counter-intelligence chief Notra Trulock, who took over the W88 probe, code-named Kindred Spirit. By May 1996 his team of spy-hunters, working with the FBI, had identified 12 suspects—with Wen Ho Lee at the top of the list.

Born in Taiwan and educated at Texas A&M, where he got his doctorate in mechanical engineering, Lee joined the staff at Los Alamos in 1978. He worked in the X Division, which designs U.S. bombs and warheads, as a midlevel scientist specializing in the computer simulation of shock waves generated by nuclear blasts. Crucially, he was on the team that designed the trigger for the W88 warhead. Still, there was no hard evidence that Lee had engaged in any form of espionage. By late 1998 the FBI's Albuquerque, N.M., field office became convinced that Lee was probably not their target and noted that hundreds of other people, including outside contractors, needed to be examined.

By then the political climate had changed. Trulock had testified in secret before a congressional committee investigating technology transfers to China headed by GOP

Rep. Chris Cox. Republicans had already pummeled the Clinton White House over Asian campaign contributions, and top administration officials feared a new China scandal. In December 1998, Newsweek has learned, Energy Secretary Bill Richardson called FBI Director Freeh and urged him to accelerate the Lee investigation.

In March 1999 The New York Times ran a front-page story pointing to an unnamed ''computer scientist'' at Los Alamos as a key figure in a probe of Chinese espionage. The next day the FBI interrogated Lee and tried to extract a confession. Waving the newspaper story, agents warned Lee he faced the loss of his job and pension and that he was ''failing'' lie-detector tests—a statement that was at least somewhat misleading. ''I tell the truth,'' Lee insisted. ''Do you know who the Rosenbergs are?'' an agent asked. ''You know what happened to them? They electrocuted them, Wen Ho.'' No lawyer was present.

Ironically, neither the FBI nor the Energy Department was aware at that point that Wen Ho Lee had been secretly downloading massive amounts of X Division weapons data for years. To do it, Lee asked to use the computer of a colleague outside the X Division. Then he typed CL=U (classified equals unclassified) on the restricted files, allowing access from the other computer. Starting in 1993 Lee downloaded 806 megabytes of classified information—about 400,000 pages.

But damning as the evidence looked to national-security officials in Washington, the case against Lee turned out to be filled with holes, and prosecutors began to take hits left and right. At a bail hearing in August, FBI agent Robert Messemer admitted that he had earlier given false testimony, portraying Lee as more devious than the scientist actually was when he asked to use his colleague's computer. Messemer called his testimony ''an honest mistake.'' Other government scientists stated that many of the nuclear secrets Lee downloaded were publicly available—and many had a relatively low classification: ''protect as restricted data,'' or PARD.

In late August a meeting was convened at the Justice Department command center to review where matters stood. ''The case was falling apart,'' said one official. Chief prosecutor George Stamboulidis was convinced he could still win at trial. But national-security officials feared that Judge Parker would allow defense lawyers to introduce some of the secret documents that Lee had downloaded. ''We would have had to parade these documents in front of the jury and the world,'' said Stamboulidis. Even FBI Director Freeh—who had aggressively pushed the case to begin with—was now arguing that the government should take a plea.

Senior law-enforcement officials say the biggest mistake may have been the harsh conditions under which Lee was held—the solitary cell, the leg irons, the 24-hour watch. Top Justice officials now say they had some concerns about this from the beginning but didn't convey them strongly enough to the original prosecution team. ''If there was a failure, the higher-ups at Justice weren't really forceful enough in speaking up,'' said one official. ''That's a legitimate criticism.'' When Stamboulidis came in to take over the case in June, he eased the treatment of Lee and ordered the leg irons taken off. But by then it was too late. The image of Lee, a gentle scientist being mistreated by the government, had made its way into the public mind. As a symbol of overzealous prosecution, it could well stay there for some time to come.

FBI AGENT RECANTS TESTIMONY AGAINST LOS ALAMOS SCIENTIST LEE

(August 18, 2000; Albuquerque, New Mexico)

An FBI agent has recanted testimony that was key to a judge's decision to deny bail last December to a fired nuclear weapons scientist accused of downloading restricted files.

The testimony last year from Agent Robert Messemer had portrayed Wen Ho Lee as guileful when the jailed Los Alamos lab physicist supposedly told a colleague he wanted to use that scientist's computer to print a resume.

At a bail review hearing Thursday, Messemer acknowledge that Lee had told the other scientist he wished to download files.

''My testimony was incorrect,'' Messemer told U.S. District Judge James Parker.

The judge had cited Lee's ''deeply troubling'' deceptions in denying him bail in December.

The FBI agent said Thursday he did not intentionally attempt to mislead the judge and said he did not believe it was a serious error.

The hearing, the defense's third effort to get Lee released on bail, was scheduled to continue Friday with more questioning of Messemer.

Lee, 60, is charged with 59 counts involving downloading files from Los Alamos National Laboratory to unsecured computers and tape. The Taiwan-born American citizen could face life in prison if convicted at trial, scheduled to begin Nov. 6.

During Messemer's testimony Thursday, the FBI agent also acknowledged Lee disclosed contacts with scientists from the People's Republic of China in a report to the lab about a 1986 conference he attended.

Messemer insisted, however, that under questioning by authorities Lee did not disclose the full scope of those contacts.

Messemer testified last year Lee initially told authorities only about a Christmas card he had gotten from one Chinese scientist. He acknowledged that Parker could have inferred from that testimony Lee was lying.

He also said he wanted to correct a ''minor point'' in which he said Lee sent letters seeking an overseas job. Messemer said Thursday the FBI had no evidence one way or the other whether the letters were sent.

Los Alamos scientist Richard Krajcik, deputy director of a top-secret nuclear weapons division at the lab, testified that he stood by earlier statements about the seriousness of the downloaded documents.

''It represents the crown jewels of nuclear design assessment capability of the United States,'' Krajcik said.

Krajcik conceded the information was not classified as secret when Lee allegedly took it, but said only scientists with security clearances could access it.

At the time, the information had not been reviewed for classification. The information has since been classified as confidential restricted data and secret restricted data, but not top secret.

Defense attorney John Cline read descriptions of classification levels, which define top-secret information as vital to national security and whose dissemination would cause ''exceptionally great damage.'' Secret information does not reveal critical features.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Congresswoman MINK for organizing this important Special Order and commend Congressman UNDERWOOD, Chair of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, and the other Members of the Caucus for their leadership and hard work to focus attention on these important civil rights issues.

The treatment of Dr. Wen Ho Lee remains a cause for concern. Asian-Americans, members of racial and ethnic minority groups, civil libertarians, and other Americans have correctly questioned his treatment and continue to question the underlying racial stereotyping and racial profiling that plagued this case. Why did this happen? What were the objective and neutral criteria used to bring these charges? Why was he held in solitary confinement, unable to exercise, prohibited from speaking Chinese to his family, and subjected to extraordinary conditions of confinement?

The implications of this case go well beyond the Chinese and Asian-American community. It concerns other minority communities, racial profiling in law enforcement, and stereotyping all across the country. America's law enforcement agencies and the FBI should not be targeting individuals based solely on their race or ethnicity. Several years ago, after the bombing at the Oklahoma City Federal Building, too many people were quick to blame foreigners and Arab terrorists. That tragedy reminded us of the important lesson of not jumping to conclusions. Evidently, that lesson has been forgotten.

Rep. ROBERT UNDERWOOD, Chair of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, has written to President Clinton to urge the establishment of an independent, bi-partisan commission to investigate the handling of the case of Dr. Wen Ho Lee. This important step would help reveal the truth and help depoliticize the issue. A formal Commission of national stature to review these issues would be an important step forward. This independent Commission should have subpoena power. I would like to see the release of documents that the defense would have used during discovery in order to determine whether there were appropriate criteria used to target Dr. Wen Ho Lee. The Organization of Chinese Americans [OCA] has also called for an independent inquiry into how this case was investigated and prosecuted by Federal agencies.

It is important to remind government officials, law enforcement agencies, and the media that our nation's underlying guarantee of equal and fair treatment before the law applies to all Americans, including Chinese and Asian Pacific Americans. Many think Dr. Lee's case was influenced by biased media coverage, political partisanship, attempts to scapegoat someone for the Department of Energy's lax security procedures. Bail hearing testimony by government investigators admitting erroneous statements about Dr. Lee's actions are particularly troubling. As a nation, we can and must do better.

I look forward to the establishment of an independent Commission and the results of the Commission's fact finding mission. Regardless of these findings, we must keep in mind the lessons of the Oklahoma bombing and recognize that racial profiling and stereotyping are unfair and may violate our civil rights. We must work to ensure that the principles of innocent until proven guilty and due process are more than mere rhetoric. We must ensure they remain core American values protecting all Americans.

In closing, I want to thank Congresswoman MINK for organizing this Special Order and highlighting these important issues.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my concerns about the unjust treatment and confinement of Dr. Wen Ho Lee, a former Los Alamos scientist.

Dr. Wen Ho Lee was arrested by the FBI on December 10, 1999, when a grand jury issued a 59-count indictment charging him with stealing nuclear secrets from a classified Los Alamos computer. U.S. District Judge James Parker denied bail for Dr. Lee, citing seven missing computer tapes of nuclear secrets and the possibility that his release could harm U.S. national security. Dr. Lee was held in solitary confinement for the following nine months and shackled whenever he was outside of his cell.

Dr. Lee's confinement was clearly unnecessary. He had not been convicted of any crime and was considered innocent under the law throughout his confinement. On August 17, 2000, FBI agent Robert Messemer admitted that he gave false testimony against Dr. Lee at his bail hearing the previous December. Furthermore, on September 10, 2000, the Department of Justice announced that Dr. Lee would go free after pleading guilty to just one of the original 59 felony counts against him. All other counts against him were dropped. When the Executive Branch agreed to release him without any conditions, it became apparent that it had never been necessary to confine him.

We will never know the reasons why the Federal Government confined Dr. Lee and treated him so harshly. The plea agreement reached by Dr. Lee and the Department of Justice shields the Executive Branch from disclosing information that might have provided an explanation.

Dr. Lee's unjust confinement and the cruelty of the conditions under which he was confined are a disgrace to the FBI, the Department of Justice and the entire nation. No American citizen should ever be unnecessarily confined by the U.S. Government. I am deeply sorry about the unjust treatment Dr. Lee received, and I urge my colleagues to work diligently to ensure that no other citizen will ever be forced to endure this type of treatment.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on my special order tonight.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MICA). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Hawaii?

There was no objection.

SOCIAL SECURITY SOLVENCY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, to whoever might be looking at this session, this is going to be sort of a briefing on Social Security.

Social Security has come to the forefront of one of the very important issues in this Presidential debate, certainly with every senior, certainly also with every worker in this country as they now pay more into the Social Security tax than they do in the income tax, and certainly for our kids, our grandkids, those kids that are not born yet, is Social Security going to be there for them.

Let me start with my first chart. I would like to thank Senator ROD GRAMS from Minnesota. He has introduced legislation to keep Social Security solvent, as I have. I have been chairing the bipartisan Social Security Task Force of the Committee on the Budget and, so, we have been working on Social Security for the last 5 years trying to get public attention to the fact that Social Security is insolvent and eventually there is going to be less money coming in than is required for benefits and the challenge facing this country if we are going to make a commitment not to reduce benefits, and we should do that, not to increase taxes even further on workers in this country, and we should do that.

When Franklin Delano Roosevelt created the Social Security program over 6 decades ago, he wanted it to feature a private sector component to build retirement income. Social Security was supposed to be one leg of a three-legged stool to support retirees. It was supposed to go hand-in-hand with personal savings and private pension plans.

In fact, it is interesting, looking up and researching in the archives in 1935, the Senate on two occasions voted that private personal investments should be an option to the Government handling the system. When it finally went to the conference committee between the House and the Senate, it turned around strictly to a Government-run program, a pay-as-you-go program where current workers pay in their taxes and immediately it goes out to current retirees.

This is Barry Pump, an intern that is going to be helping me, from Iowa. So our intern program is an excellent opportunity for juniors in high school. So, Barry, thank you very much.

The system really is now stretched to its limits. Seventy-eight million baby boomers begin retiring in 2008. That means they go out of the, if you will, paying in mode, paying their Social Security taxes, to the taking out mode. And these baby boomers are at the high end of the income scale, so they pay a much higher tax since our tax now is 12.4 percent on the first $76,000. Social Security expending exceeds tax revenues in 2015, and so the problem is where do we start getting the extra money starting in 2015.

The bottom blip is Social Security trust funds go broke in 2037, although the crisis could arrive much sooner. And the crisis is trying to come up with that money. The danger historically as we look at what has happened through history, politicians in Washington and the President, for example, in 1997 and again in 1983, when money was short to pay out benefits, legislation was passed to reduce benefits and increase taxes. And that is why it is so very important that we deal with this problem now, we do not delay, we do not put it off. The longer we put off this problem, the more drastic the changes are going to have to be. So I think it is very important that we deal with this very important program as soon as we can.

Some have said, well, these are just people's estimates of the future. Not so. Insolvency is an absolute. Insolvency is certain. We know how many people there are and we know when they are going to retire. We count the people. We know what their ages are. We know what their earning is, how much they are paying in. We know that people will live longer in retirement.

When Social Security started in 1935, the average age of death was 62 years. For this pay-as-you-go program, that meant most people paid in all their lives but never took anything out. It worked very well. But now the life span of individuals has been increasing substantially. We know how much these individuals will pay in, how much they will take out. The payroll taxes will not cover benefits starting in 2015. And the shortfalls will add up to $120 trillion between 2015 and 2075.

So, in tomorrow's dollars, in those inflated dollars, it is going to take $120 trillion more than the tax revenue coming in from the Social Security tax to pay benefits.

I suspect most of us do not know how much really a trillion dollars is. I certainly do not. But you can compare it maybe with our annual budget, which now is approximately $1.8 trillion annual budget. It is a huge challenge. And that is why it has been so easy for this Chamber and the Senate and the President not to take action on it. It is too easy to demagogue. And with this Chamber running for election every 2 years, it is easy to put it off. We cannot do that any more. It is not fair to our kids. It is not fair to our grand kids. Our pay-as-you-go retirement system will not meet the challenge of demographic change.

This is an example of workers per Social Security beneficiary. Back in 1940, there were 38 workers in this country paying in their Social Security tax for every one retiree. Now there are three workers paying in their increased Social Security tax for every one retiree. And by 2025 there is going to be two workers paying in their Social Security tax for every one retiree.

This was developed because of demographic changes. One is the falling birth rate after the baby boomers after World War II. So the number of workers has not increased at the rate it was in the past. And secondly, the life span is tremendously increased. So if you reach retirement age, 65, then on average you are going to live another 18 to 20 years. So life span is going up, the number of workers' birth rate is going down, and that leaves us with a huge problem of insolvency.

The little blue blip on the top left, maybe it should be green, is the period between now and someplace around 2015 when there are more revenues coming in from Social Security taxes than is used to pay benefits. The reason there is a surplus now in the Social Security tax is because we raised the Social Security tax, Congress and the President raised the Social Security tax substantially in 1983. And we will be looking at that chart in a moment.

What happens after 2015 is the shortfall. The red represents how much money we are going to need above and beyond the Social Security taxes that will be coming in from American workers.

Barry will help us with the next five.

Some have suggested we really do not need to do anything now because economic growth is great, we are going along smoothly. The fact is economic growth will not solve the Social Security problem. Let me tell you why. Social Security benefits are indexed to wage growth. In other words, the more wages you earn, the more taxes you pay in earlier. But when you retire, the more benefits you will get out because the benefits are directly related to the wages you earn.

When the economy grows, workers pay more in taxes but also will earn more in benefits when they retire.

Growth makes the numbers look better now but leaves a larger hole to fill later. That is what has happened. Three years ago, we were going to run out of money by 2012; but with the economy expanding, now the projection is that we are going to have less money than needed 3 years later, in 2015. But when these people retire, then they are going to take out more. So over the long run, it does not offer a solution to Social Security.

The administration has used these short-term advantages as an excuse to do nothing. Politicians have used this as an excuse to do nothing. I think the fact is clear that many people have called this the third rail of politics. They have suggested if you come up with a fix for Social Security, you are going to be criticized so aggressively by one of the most powerful groups in this Nation, the AARP is going to say, ''Don't mess around with our Social Security.''

Working as chairman of the bipartisan Social Security task force, it was interesting to find out that the people from AARP understand the problems with Social Security and so they are no longer criticizing individuals or the Presidential candidates that come up with potential solutions for Social Security because they know it is a huge problem in the future.

There is no Social Security account with your name on it. A couple of footnotes on this issue. The Supreme Court on two occasions now has ruled that there is no entitlement, no connection, between the Social Security taxes that you pay in and your rights to have any benefits. These trust fund balances are available to finance future benefit payments and other trust fund expenditures but only in a bookkeeping sense. They are claims on the Treasury that when redeemed will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, reducing benefits or somehow reducing other expenditures. This is from the Office of Management and Budget.

Some have compared the trust fund, that it is somehow a magical safeguard, that the money will be there. I like to use the comparison, what would happen with or without a trust fund, if we had no trust fund, coming up with the money to meet our promises, and I think we are going to do that. I think we have got to do that. If there was no trust fund, you would come up with the money in one of three ways: You would either reduce other spending, increase borrowing or increase taxes or reduce benefits.

If there is a trust fund and you start calling on the trust fund but it is a bunch of IOUs in a box, government still has to come up with those same alternatives to pay back the money that has been borrowed from the trust fund and, that is, you increase borrowing, you increase taxes, you reduce benefits or you cut other expenditures. I do not think this body or the President is going to cut other expenditures of the Federal Government to the extent that is needed to cover the Social Security shortfall. I think the greater danger is in a continuing decision to say, ''Well, it's easier just to raise taxes a little bit or cut benefits a little bit.''

Some have suggested that if we just pay down the debt held by the public and use that interest savings, that will help take care of the problem of Social Security and keep it solvent until 2057. In fact, Vice President GORE's plan, in effect, says, Let us add another giant IOU to the Social Security trust fund. But in trying to look at the problem of coming up with the finances necessary, and it is going to take $46.6 trillion to come up with the money to pay off Social Security until 2057. You cannot do that.

This is the total debt held by the public. This is the total debt that everybody is talking about, bragging about, being able to pay down maybe in the next 10 to 12 years. The interest savings from that $3.4 trillion can never solve a $46.6 trillion problem. So adding another IOU to the trust fund will not work.

I have demonstrated this same problem in another graph. If you will, paying off the trust fund over this same period of time, we start with about a $180 billion a year savings in interest charges if we are going to pay off the $3.4 trillion of debt held by the public. That grows around to 2018 to be about $260 billion a year, and so the blue line represents, assuming that this $260 billion a year is now going to be dedicated every year to Social Security, it still only represents that bottom two inches of an 18-inch problem. And so the shortfall still remains $35 trillion. So to simply say we are going to add an IOU and somehow government is going to come up with the money and add this extra interest charge, interest savings to the Social Security trust fund is not going to solve the problem even if all the money was there.

But again the problem is, where do you come up with the dollars? You come up with it by increasing taxes, cutting benefits, increasing borrowing. Just for the next 57 years, if we were to borrow that extra $35 trillion, the economists suggest that that would so disrupt the market and the economy in this country that it is not feasible. Remember, I said for 75 years it is going to take $120 trillion. There has got to be program changes. They can be made. ROD GRAMS and I and several others have introduced legislation that do not reduce a current or near-term retiree's benefits, that end up trying to accommodate by having a greater return on some of that investment that the worker is sending in in taxes. The average worker now is only getting less than a 2 percent return on those Social Security taxes they send in and we can do much better than that.

The biggest risk is doing nothing at all. Social Security has a total unfunded liability of over $20 trillion. Let me sort of go over these numbers. Over the next 75 years in today's dollars, it would be $20 trillion. If we could come up with the $20 trillion now and start earning interest on it, we could solve the problem. If we wait year by year, then it is $120 trillion over the next 75 years and it is the 46, $47 trillion until 2057 when Vice President GORE says that it is going to keep the trust fund solvent. The Social Security trust fund contains nothing but IOUs. To keep paying promised Social Security benefits, the payroll tax will have to be increased by nearly 50 percent or benefits will have to be cut by 30 percent. I say that not to scare people but just to try to send the message that the longer we delay, the more drastic the solution. Something has got to be done now, because I think it would be unconscionable to increase taxes even further.

The Social Security lock box. A little gimmicky maybe. I introduced a bill so that we would not spend any of the Social Security surplus. But this Congress has been spending the Social Security surplus for the last 40 years. So any extra money that comes into the Social Security trust fund has been spent for other government programs. The bad part of that is that it becomes almost an entitlement. Any program spending that we spend for 2 or 3 years, there is such a lobbying group, an infrastructure built up to insist that we continue spending that money that government has continued to grow. So increasing discretionary domestic social spending is very dangerous in terms of the obligations to our kids and our grandkids on future generations.

The Social Security lockbox is what Republicans made. The decision was a good way to put that Social Security surplus aside, not spend it on other government programs, and it sort of ended up reducing the amount that we spend on government. That means that it has helped give us the kind of huge surplus that we are now experiencing this calendar year and again next year. It is interesting. The Vice President has said the lockbox is a good idea but I would remind everyone, Mr. Speaker, that we passed the lockbox legislation in this Chamber, we sent it to the Senate, and now the Senate Democrats are filibustering the lockbox law that we sent them. If the Vice President would ask the Democrats in the Senate to pass that bill, there is no doubt in my mind that it would be passed and sent to the President for signature.

I am going to get in a little bit to talking about the diminishing returns on your Social Security investment. The real return of Social Security is less than 2 percent. It is about 1.9 percent on average for all workers. But it shows a negative return for some workers compared to the over 7 percent real return that you can get on average over the last 120 years in the stock market.

As you look at this chart, and I hope the cameras can show it closely enough, minorities on average are going to have a negative return on the money they send in for Social Security. A young black male working today on average will die at age 62½. That means that they will pay in Social Security taxes all their life and not be entitled to anything except a $240 death tax for burial. So they are really getting gypped. The average again is 1.9 percent. Compare that to the market of real return of 7 percent. So if you can get a better return on some of that money being sent in for Social Security, that has got to be part of the solution.

Then part of the problem is the transition cost. How do we make this transition from wanting to start some of those retirement accounts that are going to get some of the higher interest rate returns and the challenge, of course, is using some of the surplus coming in to government today, some of the Social Security surplus, some of the general fund surplus to start some real investments that are going to give Americans an average income worker the opportunity to be a rich retiree.

With this chart, I have attempted to demonstrate in another way what a bad investment Social Security is. This does not include the disability insurance. So the disability insurance is an absolute. No plan touches the disability insurance. So that part is insurance. You take your chances. Some people need the disability insurance and some do not. What I am talking about is the retirement, the rest of, I think it is approximately 10.4 percent of the 12.4 percent that is used for retirement purposes. And so that is what we are talking about. To get that portion back, if you retired in 1940, then that was pretty good. Taxes were not very high in those early years and you received everything you and your employer put into Social Security taxes and you received that back in 2 months. In 1960, it took 2 years to get it back. In 1980, it took 4 years to get it back. In 1995, if you retired in 1995, you have got to live 16 years after you retire to get your Social Security benefits back that you paid in, to break even for what you and your employer put into Social Security taxes. And you see 2015, 26 years; 2025, 26 years. The reason this goes down a skosh is because of the fact that in 1983 when they passed that law, they actually increased the retirement age gradually, so now it goes gradually up from 65 to 67 over the next 20 years.

This is a picture of Bonnie's and my grandkids. I have the picture on the wall of my office. When I come to vote in this Chamber on legislation, I look at that picture and think how is it going to affect my grandkids, 10, 20, 30, 40, 50 years from now. Our youngest here is Frances and our oldest in this picture is Nick, but both of them are going to have real challenges if they are ever going to get Social Security back.

It is interesting that young people today do not believe that Social Security is going to be there yet they are saving less than the previous generations of young people. How do we encourage more savings? The challenge is to fix this program now, because if we simply add IOUs to the trust fund, if we simply say that look, we are going to pass a law and put $20 trillion in the trust fund, then the actuaries would score Social Security as solvent for the next 75 years. The problem is still when there is less money coming in in taxes in 2015 than what is needed for benefits, where do you come up with the money?

I am afraid what is going to happen if we continue to put off solving this problem is my grandkids, your kids and grandkids and their kids, are going to end up paying huge taxes. Right now the estimate is that if we do nothing to cover medicaid, Medicare and Social Security, you would have to go to a 47 percent tax on payroll. Our economy in this country was built on encouraging those people that work and that save, that try and invest, and if we were to put that kind of taxes on our workers I think there would be a generational rebellion. If we simply say, look, we are going to live how we want to live today and somehow make our kids and our grandkids pay for it later, we cannot do that.

This is Salina; this is James; this is Henry; this is George, he is a real tiger; Emily; and I have actually two more grandkids I will have in the next couple of months. Maybe it is a situation where if all of us were grandfathers and we were in this chamber and we were concerned about the obligations that we are putting on our kids and grandkids as we make decisions to pass laws to make our lives easier now but put the debt on them, we have a $5.6 trillion debt that needs to be paid down.

This is a chart on taxes. So just briefly in 1940 the Social Security tax was 2 percent on the first $3,000, or a maximum of $60. By 1960 it was 6 percent on the first $4,800, or a maximum of $288. By 1980 it was 10.16 percent of the first $25,900, for a total of $2,630. Today it is 12.4 percent on the first $76,200, for a total of $9,448.

If we continue to add benefits to Social Security, not correct the problems with Social Security, then it is going to be my grandkids and your grandkids that are going to be facing the kind of increased tax that is going to be intolerable.

Seventy-eight percent of families, working families in the United States, now pay more in the payroll tax than they do in the income tax. So we continue to raise this payroll tax. It is a tax that hurts low-income people much more than high income people. It is the kind of tax that we should not be increasing. So let us not do it.

The 6 principles that I agree with that Senator ROD GRAMS has agreed with, that Governor George W. Bush has agreed with, are we protect current and future beneficiaries. We allow freedom of choice. We preserve the safety net. We make Americans better off, not worse off. We create a fully funded system and no tax increases, and no reductions in benefits for those retirees, or near-term retirees.

Personal retirement accounts, they do not come out of Social Security; they help Social Security earn more money to assure that those benefits are going to be there. They become part of your Social Security retirement benefits and a worker will own his or her own retirement account. That means if an individual might die before they are eligible for retirement, the money goes into their estate. Unlike today, if you die before your retirement then there is nothing there and it simply is added to the pot for other future retirees and beneficiaries and disability individuals; limited to safe investments that will earn more than the 1.9 percent paid by Social Security. So nobody is suggesting that we simply give this money to individuals and they be allowed to invest it however they want. All of the plans that I have seen say that it has to be a structured, limited type investment, something like maybe a 401(k), something like the Federal Thrift Savings Plan, where you choose from several safe investments; you have some options but they are all safe investments. In my bill that I introduced, I limit it to four safe investments with a potential expansion of additional safe investments that is decided by the treasurer of the United States.

So the point is can we get a better return on our investment than 1.9 percent? The answer is, yes.

I borrowed this from Senator GRAMS because I think it is so important that we have to make sure we do this with the prerequisite that we do not increase taxes and that we do not reduce benefits for retirees or near-term retirees. Term retirement accounts offer more retirement security. If John Doe makes an average of $36,000 a year, he can expect monthly payments of $1,280 from Social Security. If he puts 10 percent of the 12.4 percent into a savings account, he can get $6,000 a month from his personal retirement savings account.

Remember the picture of Nicholas, my oldest grandson, he painted my fence last year and I said, look, you have $180. I would like you to put it in a Roth IRA, and he said, gosh, grandpa, I sure wanted to put that in the bank and maybe buy a car when I was 16. So I went step through step trying to explain the magic of compound interest and what it would do every year if it was drawing the kind of interest that the equity stock markets have averaged over the last 20 years, the ups and downs. So I went through this and I said, look, by the time you are 68, that $180 will have grown to almost $64,000, and if you wait another 6 years and 8 months, it will be almost $140,000.

He seemed impressed but he said, well, grandpa, can I just maybe put a little bit of it in that Roth IRA and then put the rest in the bank for a car? And I think it demonstrates sort of part of the problem today to encourage people to save. It is so important that everyone, Mr. Speaker, everyone, young, medium age, older age, discipline themselves to put more money in a savings account. The savings account in the United States of America is one of the lowest out of the industrialized world. We have to do better in encouraging savings. This Chamber has come a long ways, developing the regular IRA, the Roth IRA. Now in a bill that we have sent to the Senate, we expand how much you are allowed to save in those IRAs; educational savings accounts. It is important that we encourage that extra savings, but it is even more important that we deal with Social Security and not put it off.

In the law of 1935, we left it operational for State and local governments whether they wanted to get in the Social Security program or have their own retirement program. Galveston County, Texas, was a county that decided it wanted to do its own investments so their employees do not have the payroll deduction. They have a deduction that goes into their personal retirement savings accounts.

Let me just compare Galveston with Social Security. Death benefits now in Galveston are $75,000 with a Social Security burial benefit of $253. The disability benefit per month under the Galveston plan is $2,749. With Social Security it would be $1,280. The retirement benefits per month in Galveston, this is disability, the retirement benefits are $4,790 compared to $1,280. It is an example of how real investments can make a much greater difference than what is happening in the pay-as-you-go Social Security program. Social Security is sort of like, I saw a cartoon I think was interesting that represented the pay-as-you-go program. It had this person coming in to Uncle Sam with a hat on in the cartoon saying, well, now just how does Social Security work? And Uncle Sam was saying, well, see this list here. Now, you send money to the name on the top of this list and you add your name to the bottom of this list, and then when you retire you will get all this money.

A chain letter is sort of like the Social Security program. You depend on somebody else later on that might send you that money when you retire, and that is dangerous.

Spouses and survivors benefits under the Galveston County plan, and I quote this young lady that gave this quote, she said, thank God that some wise man privatized Social Security here. If I had regular Social Security, I would be broke.

After her husband died, Winnie Colehill used her death benefit check of $126,000 to pay for his funeral and she also entered college herself. Under Social Security, she would have gotten $255.

San Diego has a similar plan. San Diego enjoys PRAs, personal retirement accounts. A 30-year-old employee who earns a salary of $30,000 for 35 years and contributes 6 percent to his PRA would receive $3,000 per month in retirement benefits. Under the current system, he would contribute twice as much to Social Security but receive only $1,077; $1,077 in Social Security compared to $3,000 per month in their retirement plan.

The difference between San Diego's system of PRAs and Social Security is more than the difference in a check. It is also the difference between ownership and dependence. It is you owning that amount of money; not leaving it up to politicians to mess around with that money or your potential future benefits.

I thought this was very interesting. Even those who oppose PRAs agree they offer more retirement security, and I am quoting from a letter from Senator BARBARA BOXER and Senator DIANE FEINSTEIN and Senator TED KENNEDY to President Clinton on April 22, 1999, in support of allowing San Diego to keep continuing with their private retirement system. They said in this letter, millions of our constituents will receive higher retirement benefits from their current public pensions than they would under Social Security, and that is the truth. So why do not we do it?

The U.S. trails other countries in saving its retirement system. As advanced as we are and as smart as we are, other countries are moving ahead of us with their retirement systems that they are starting to get real investment returns from.

In the 18 years since Chile offered the PRAs, 95 percent of Chilean workers have created accounts. Their average rate of return has been 11.3 percent for years. Among others, Australia, Britain, Switzerland, they offer their workers PRA. It becomes an option to own their own savings account where they can get their own returns on that money.

British workers choose PRAs. With the 10 percent returns, we cannot blame them. Two out of three British workers, and this is a socialist country, enrolled in the second-tier social security system chose to enroll in PRAs. British workers have enjoyed a 10 percent return on their pension investments over the past few years. The pool of these personal retirement accounts in Britain now exceeds nearly $1.4 trillion, larger than the entire economy of Great Britain.

Based on a family income of $58,475, the return on a PRA is even better. Over a 20-year period, if you put in 10 percent of your payroll, you would end up having $274,000. The bottom blue mark is 2 percent of your payroll. At 2 percent of your payroll, it is $55,000. If we left it in for 30 years, and here again is the magic of compound interest, these investments held over that 30 or 40 years is so significant, and can again make an average income worker a rich retiree.

If one leaves it in for 40 years, and we are allowed to put in 10 percent of the payroll, and social security now takes 12.4 percent, we would have $1,389,000. If one was to get a 5 percent return on that money, it would still be about $70,000 a year without even going into the principal.

Again, let me conclude by saying 78 percent of families pay more in payroll taxes than income taxes. Several of us, bipartisan, when I chaired the social security bipartisan task force, it was interesting that the demographics, the current demographics of how long people are expected to live and therefore how much it is going to cost future taxpayers to pay their benefits. With our medical technology, some medical futurists are now estimating that within 25 years a person will be able to live to be 100 years old if they want to. Within 35 to 40 years, an individual can live to be 110 years old .

Are we doing what we need to do as individuals in putting aside savings to accommodate the kind of living standard that the future kind of medical technology is going to allow? Of course, if that happens to social security, then the tremendous extra pressures on social security in future generations that are going to have to pay the increased tax will occur.

Right now we are talking about adding prescription drugs to Medicare. Medicare could go broke with the legislation that has passed as early as 2004 or 2005. If we add prescription drugs to it, then my guess is a couple of things will happen. We end up with a government-run program that if it starts costing too much, it is going to look at rationing. That rationing is going to hold true whether it is Medicare and the government running that program, or whether it is social security.

So my bottom line, Mr. Speaker, is, let us not delay. Let us not neglect this promise any longer. We have lost the last 8 years. Let us make sure that we move ahead with this next administration and come up with a program that will keep social security solvent.

THE PROBLEM OF ILLEGAL NARCOTICS IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, usually I come on Tuesday nights to address the House on the problem of illegal narcotics in our society, and what the Congress can do working together to try to resolve the problem of drugs.

Tonight I will only have a few minutes to sort of summarize, because our time is limited.

We have watched on television, a front line report about illegal narcotics. It has gotten the attention of many Americans and Members of Congress.

I came to the floor about a week or two ago and held up this chart. I chair the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, Drug Policy, and Human Resources. It is one of the most shocking statistics or report that I have ever received as a Member of Congress or chairing a committee responsible for drug policy.

For the first time in the history of recordkeeping of the United States, drug-induced deaths in 1998 exceeded murder, homicides, in this country. That means we had more people dying from drug overdoses and drug-induced deaths than murders or homicides across our land. That, unfortunately, has been repeated in my community in Central Florida, and it is a very serious problem.

One of the things we have heard is that the war on drugs is a failure. It is very important that the American people and the Congress understand that the war on drugs basically was closed down at the beginning of the Clinton administration.

If we look at long-term trends and lifetime prevalence of drug use, we see that during the Reagan administration and Bush administration there was a 50 percent drop in drug abuse. If one in fact looks at that Frontline report that has been published and viewed across the country lately, we hear of all the things that were instituted: the Andean strategy, the stopping drugs at their source, the Vice President's task force, even going after Noriega for drug trafficking and money laundering of drugs in the Bush administration in 1989. Then we see a dramatic decrease in drug use in the country, a 50 percent reduction.

In the Clinton administration, where we have the ''just say maybe'' policy, where we appoint a chief health officer like Joycelyn Elders as a Surgeon General who says, just say maybe, to our kids, where we abolish the international programs to stop drugs at their source, we have a flood and a huge supply of narcotics. Treatment can never keep up with what we see here and the failure of this administration, and certainly the deaths that we see and the destruction, the devastation.

The other thing is that we do not spend enough money on treatment. That is the line that the Clinton administration used when they took over. Here, we will see the treatment money was being expended and increased under the Bush administration and under the Reagan administration. They also had dramatic programs to deal with the supply, and they cut down the supply.

Here we see treatment spending during the Democrat control, even the Republican control, almost a doubling in treatment over these years. Yet, we see an incredible plague upon our cities.

So we cannot just treat ourselves out of this problem, we have to have a combination of eradication, interdiction, enforcement, education, and also prevention programs that work. Finding the prevention and treatment programs that work is so important. We are spending a lot of money on treatment. We have doubled the amount of money on treatment.

The Clinton administration closed down any semblance of a war on drugs. In hearings that we have held, even today, we found that the $300 million that this Congress appropriated for Colombia some 2 years ago, getting the resources to Colombia, were in fact bungled. We find even in a $1 billion education program we are paying 179 percent over industry standards for placement of ads, and instead of paying a 3½ percent industry average commission, we are paying 14 percent plus, so ads are not going on the public education and information media. An anti-narcotics campaign is not what the Congress intended.

Getting the resources from Colombia, which is the source of 70 percent of the heroin and some 80 percent of the cocaine, has not been done. The project as administered by the administration has been bungled. This is the result we see. We are back to a dramatic increase in the number of drug-induced deaths, some 16,926, exceeding for the first time in the recorded history of the United States the homicides or murders in this country.

So when people tell us that the war on drugs is a failure, the Clinton-Gore close-down of the war on drugs indeed led to failure, led to death and destruction. The statistics are very clear.

But a successful program such as the Reagan-Bush administration, even though it was a tough one, even though it was a zero tolerance, had a 50 percent reduction in illegal narcotics use in this country, and dramatically gave us a different picture than what we see here today.

Finally, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I was pleased that last Friday was the first time I have heard anyone who assumes to national leadership take the forefront and mention the problem of illegal narcotics. That was Governor Bush from the State of Texas, who I believe was in Iowa and talked about illegal narcotics, brought it up as part of his campaign.

I hope that we have a leader and someone who is willing to provide the direction to provide successful programs, and also to bring this to the attention and provide the national leadership that we so badly need in this area, because for so long it has been swept under the table. For too long it has been ignored by this Congress.

Again, we see the results of this and the tragedy, death, and destruction to our families and our children.

Mr. Speaker, I would mention that we leave with a saddened heart in the loss of our dearly beloved colleague, Mr. Bruce Vento, the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota, and with our deepest sympathy to his family as we now adjourn for the evening.

SENATE—Thursday, October 12, 2000

(Legislative day of Friay, September 22, 2000)

The Senate met at 9:36 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Dear God, we praise You for Your faithfulness. We say with Jeremiah, ''The Lord's mercies are new every morning; great is Your faithfulness.''—Lamentations 3:23.

We are profoundly moved by Your merciful kindness to us. You never give up on us. When we forget You, You infuse our lives with reminders of Your consistent love; when we resist Your guidance, You find new ways to get through to us; when hubris becomes a habit, You break the bond of self-sufficiency by showing us what we could accomplish with Your supernatural strength.

Lord we confess our need for humility. It is a combination of gratitude, honesty, and courage. We admit that all that we have and are is Your gift; we honestly face the distance between what we are and what we could be in our relationships and responsibilities; we need courage to blow the cap off of our reservations and live the full potential according to Your expectations.

Here we are at the beginning of a crucial day in the life of this Senate. As we rush into the schedule, we meet You at the pass. We don't need to spin to win with You. You know all about us. And so we simply ask You to take our minds and focus our intelligence on what is best for America, to take our wills and guide us to choose what is righteous and just, and to take our voices and speak Your truth through them. You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable MIKE CRAPO, a Senator from the State of Idaho, led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). The able acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. BOND. On behalf of the leader, permit me to explain that today the Senate will begin debate on the HUD–VA appropriations bill. Senators BYRD and BOXER have amendments in order. Those amendments will be offered and debated prior to 12:30 p.m. today. At 12:30, there will be up to four stacked rollcall votes on amendments to the VA–HUD bill, final passage of the bill, and final passage of the conference report to accompany the legislative branch/Treasury-Postal appropriations bill. Following the votes, the Senate is expected to begin consideration of the conference report to accompany the Department of Defense authorization bill. There are approximately 6 hours of debate requested on the conference report. Therefore, Senators should expect votes into the evening regarding the DOD authorization conference report.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

DEPARTMENTS OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. CRAPO. The clerk will report the pending bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4635) making appropriations for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, boards, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the part printed in italic.

DIVISION A

That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, boards, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, and for other purposes, namely:

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

VETERANS BENEFITS ADMINISTRATION

COMPENSATION AND PENSIONS

(INCLUDING TRANSFERS OF FUNDS)

For the payment of compensation benefits to or on behalf of veterans and a pilot program for disability examinations as authorized by law (38 U.S.C. 107, chapters 11, 13, 18, 51, 53, 55, and 61); pension benefits to or on behalf of veterans as authorized by law (38 U.S.C. chapters 15, 51, 53, 55, and 61; 92 Stat. 2508); and burial benefits, emergency and other officers' retirement pay, adjusted-service credits and certificates, payment of premiums due on commercial life insurance policies guaranteed under the provisions of Article IV of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, and for other benefits as authorized by law (38 U.S.C. 107, 1312, 1977, and 2106, chapters 23, 51, 53, 55, and 61; 50 U.S.C. App. 540–548; 43 Stat. 122, 123; 45 Stat. 735; 76 Stat. 1198), $22,766,276,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That not to exceed $17,419,000 of the amount appropriated shall be reimbursed to ''General operating expenses'' and ''Medical care'' for necessary expenses in implementing those provisions authorized in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, and in the Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992 (38 U.S.C. chapters 51, 53, and 55), the funding source for which is specifically provided as the ''Compensation and pensions'' appropriation: Provided further, That such sums as may be earned on an actual qualifying patient basis, shall be reimbursed to ''Medical facilities revolving fund'' to augment the funding of individual medical facilities for nursing home care provided to pensioners as authorized.

READJUSTMENT BENEFITS

For the payment of readjustment and rehabilitation benefits to or on behalf of veterans as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapters 21, 30, 31, 34, 35, 36, 39, 51, 53, 55, and 61, $1,634,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That expenses for rehabilitation program services and assistance which the Secretary is authorized to provide under section 3104(a) of title 38, United States Code, other than under subsection (a)(1), (2), (5) and (11) of that section, shall be charged to the account: Provided further, That funds shall be available to pay any court order, court award or any compromise settlement arising from litigation involving the vocational training program authorized by section 18 of Public Law 98–77, as amended.

VETERANS INSURANCE AND INDEMNITIES

For military and naval insurance, national service life insurance, servicemen's indemnities, service-disabled veterans insurance, and veterans mortgage life insurance as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 19; 70 Stat. 887; 72 Stat. 487, $19,850,000, to remain available until expended.

VETERANS HOUSING BENEFIT PROGRAM FUND PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the cost of direct and guaranteed loans, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the program, as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 37, as amended: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That during fiscal year 2001, within the resources available, not to exceed $300,000 in gross obligations for direct loans are authorized for specially adapted housing loans.

In addition, for administrative expenses to carry out the direct and guaranteed loan programs, $162,000,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

EDUCATION LOAN FUND PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the cost of direct loans, $1,000, as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 3698, as amended: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That these funds are available to subsidize gross obligations for the principal amount of direct loans not to exceed $3,400.

In addition, for administrative expenses necessary to carry out the direct loan program, $220,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION LOANS PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the cost of direct loans, $52,000, as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 31, as amended: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That these funds are available to subsidize gross obligations for the principal amount of direct loans not to exceed $2,726,000.

In addition, for administrative expenses necessary to carry out the direct loan program, $432,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

NATIVE AMERICAN VETERAN HOUSING LOAN PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For administrative expenses to carry out the direct loan program authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 37, subchapter V, as amended, $532,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

GUARANTEED TRANSITIONAL HOUSING LOANS FOR HOMELESS VETERANS PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

Not to exceed $750,000 of the amounts appropriated by this Act for ''General operating expenses'' and ''Medical care'' may be expended for the administrative expenses to carry out the guaranteed loan program authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 37, subchapter VI.

VETERANS HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

MEDICAL CARE

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For necessary expenses for the maintenance and operation of hospitals, nursing homes, and domiciliary facilities; for furnishing, as authorized by law, inpatient and outpatient care and treatment to beneficiaries of the Department of Veterans Affairs, including care and treatment in facilities not under the jurisdiction of the department; and furnishing recreational facilities, supplies, and equipment; funeral, burial, and other expenses incidental thereto for beneficiaries receiving care in the department; administrative expenses in support of planning, design, project management, real property acquisition and disposition, construction and renovation of any facility under the jurisdiction or for the use of the department; oversight, engineering and architectural activities not charged to project cost; repairing, altering, improving or providing facilities in the several hospitals and homes under the jurisdiction of the department, not otherwise provided for, either by contract or by the hire of temporary employees and purchase of materials; uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901–5902; aid to State homes as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 1741; administrative and legal expenses of the department for collecting and recovering amounts owed the department as authorized under 38 U.S.C. chapter 17, and the Federal Medical Care Recovery Act, 42 U.S.C. 2651 et seq., $20,281,587,000, plus reimbursements: Provided, That of the funds made available under this heading, $900,000,000 is for the equipment and land and structures object classifications only, which amount shall not become available for obligation until August 1, 2001, and shall remain available until September 30, 2002: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, not to exceed $500,000,000 shall be available until September 30, 2002: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, not to exceed $27,907,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses'': Provided further, That the department shall conduct by contract a program of recovery audits for the fee basis and other medical services contracts with respect to payments for hospital care; and, notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3302(b), amounts collected, by setoff or otherwise, as the result of such audits shall be available, without fiscal year limitation, for the purposes for which funds are appropriated under this heading and the purposes of paying a contractor a percent of the amount collected as a result of an audit carried out by the contractor: Provided further, That all amounts so collected under the preceding proviso with respect to a designated health care region (as that term is defined in 38 U.S.C. 1729A(d)(2)) shall be allocated, net of payments to the contractor, to that region.

In addition, in conformance with Public Law 105–33 establishing the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Care Collections Fund, such sums as may be deposited to such Fund pursuant to 38 U.S.C. 1729A may be transferred to this account, to remain available until expended for the purposes of this account.

MEDICAL AND PROSTHETIC RESEARCH

For necessary expenses in carrying out programs of medical and prosthetic research and development as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 73, to remain available until September 30, 2001, $331,000,000, plus reimbursements.

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATION AND MISCELLANEOUS OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary expenses in the administration of the medical, hospital, nursing home, domiciliary, construction, supply, and research activities, as authorized by law; administrative expenses in support of capital policy activities, $62,000,000 plus reimbursements: Provided, That technical and consulting services offered by the Facilities Management Field Service, including project management and real property administration (including leases, site acquisition and disposal activities directly supporting projects), shall be provided to Department of Veterans Affairs components only on a reimbursable basis, and such amounts will remain available until September 30, 2001.

DEPARTMENTAL ADMINISTRATION

GENERAL OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary operating expenses of the Department of Veterans Affairs, not otherwise provided for, including uniforms or allowances therefor; not to exceed $25,000 for official reception and representation expenses; hire of passenger motor vehicles; and reimbursement of the General Services Administration for security guard services, and the Department of Defense for the cost of overseas employee mail, $1,050,000,000: Provided, That expenses for services and assistance authorized under 38 U.S.C. 3104(a)(1), (2), (5) and (11) that the Secretary determines are necessary to enable entitled veterans (1) to the maximum extent feasible, to become employable and to obtain and maintain suitable employment; or (2) to achieve maximum independence in daily living, shall be charged to this account: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, not to exceed $45,000,000 shall be available until September 30, 2002: Provided further, That funds under this heading shall be available to administer the Service Members Occupational Conversion and Training Act.

NATIONAL CEMETERY ADMINISTRATION

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For necessary expenses for the maintenance and operation of the National Cemetery Administration, not otherwise provided for, including uniforms or allowances therefor; cemeterial expenses as authorized by law; purchase of two passenger motor vehicles for use in cemeterial operations; and hire of passenger motor vehicles, $109,889,000: Provided, That of the amount made available under this heading, not to exceed $117,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For necessary expenses of the Office of Inspector General in carrying out the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, $46,464,000: Provided, That of the amount made available under this heading, not to exceed $30,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

CONSTRUCTION, MAJOR PROJECTS

For constructing, altering, extending and improving any of the facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the Department of Veterans Affairs, or for any of the purposes set forth in sections 316, 2404, 2406, 8102, 8103, 8106, 8108, 8109, 8110, and 8122 of title 38, United States Code, including planning, architectural and engineering services, maintenance or guarantee period services costs associated with equipment guarantees provided under the project, services of claims analysts, offsite utility and storm drainage system construction costs, and site acquisition, where the estimated cost of a project is $4,000,000 or more or where funds for a project were made available in a previous major project appropriation, $48,540,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That except for advance planning of projects (including market-based assessments of health care needs which may or may not lead to capital investments) funded through the advance planning fund and the design of projects funded through the design fund, none of these funds shall be used for any project which has not been considered and approved by the Congress in the budgetary process: Provided further, That funds provided in this appropriation for fiscal year 2001, for each approved project shall be obligated: (1) by the awarding of a construction documents contract by September 30, 2001; and (2) by the awarding of a construction contract by September 30, 2002: Provided further, That the Secretary shall promptly report in writing to the Committees on Appropriations any approved major construction project in which obligations are not incurred within the time limitations established above: Provided further, That no funds from any other account except the ''Parking revolving fund'', may be obligated for constructing, altering, extending, or improving a project which was approved in the budget process and funded in this account until one year after substantial completion and beneficial occupancy by the Department of Veterans Affairs of the project or any part thereof with respect to that part only.

CONSTRUCTION, MINOR PROJECTS

For constructing, altering, extending, and improving any of the facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the Department of Veterans Affairs, including planning, architectural and engineering services, maintenance or guarantee period services costs associated with equipment guarantees provided under the project, services of claims analysts, offsite utility and storm drainage system construction costs, and site acquisition, or for any of the purposes set forth in sections 316, 2404, 2406, 8102, 8103, 8106, 8108, 8109, 8110, 8122, and 8162 of title 38, United States Code, where the estimated cost of a project is less than $4,000,000, $162,000,000, to remain available until expended, along with unobligated balances of previous ''Construction, minor projects'' appropriations which are hereby made available for any project where the estimated cost is less than $4,000,000: Provided, That funds in this account shall be available for: (1) repairs to any of the nonmedical facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the department which are necessary because of loss or damage caused by any natural disaster or catastrophe; and (2) temporary measures necessary to prevent or to minimize further loss by such causes.

PARKING REVOLVING FUND

For the parking revolving fund as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 8109, income from fees collected, to remain available until expended, which shall be available for all authorized expenses except operations and maintenance costs, which will be funded from ''Medical care''.

GRANTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF STATE EXTENDED CARE FACILITIES

For grants to assist States to acquire or construct State nursing home and domiciliary facilities and to remodel, modify or alter existing hospital, nursing home and domiciliary facilities in State homes, for furnishing care to veterans as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 8131–8137, $100,000,000, to remain available until expended.

GRANTS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF STATE VETERANS CEMETERIES

For grants to aid States in establishing, expanding, or improving State veteran cemeteries as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 2408, $25,000,000, to remain available until expended.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 101. Any appropriation for fiscal year 2001 for ''Compensation and pensions'', ''Readjustment benefits'', and ''Veterans insurance and indemnities'' may be transferred to any other of the mentioned appropriations.

SEC. 102. Appropriations available to the Department of Veterans Affairs for fiscal year 2001 for salaries and expenses shall be available for services authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

SEC. 103. No appropriations in this Act for the Department of Veterans Affairs (except the appropriations for ''Construction, major projects'', ''Construction, minor projects'', and the ''Parking revolving fund'') shall be available for the purchase of any site for or toward the construction of any new hospital or home.

SEC. 104. No appropriations in this Act for the Department of Veterans Affairs shall be available for hospitalization or examination of any persons (except beneficiaries entitled under the laws bestowing such benefits to veterans, and persons receiving such treatment under 5 U.S.C. 7901–7904 or 42 U.S.C. 5141–5204), unless reimbursement of cost is made to the ''Medical care'' account at such rates as may be fixed by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

SEC. 105. Appropriations available to the Department of Veterans Affairs for fiscal year 2001 for ''Compensation and pensions'', ''Readjustment benefits'', and ''Veterans insurance and indemnities'' shall be available for payment of prior year accrued obligations required to be recorded by law against the corresponding prior year accounts within the last quarter of fiscal year 2000.

SEC. 106. Appropriations accounts available to the Department of Veterans Affairs for fiscal year 2001 shall be available to pay prior year obligations of corresponding prior year appropriations accounts resulting from title X of the Competitive Equality Banking Act, Public Law 100–86, except that if such obligations are from trust fund accounts they shall be payable from ''Compensation and pensions''.

SEC. 107. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, during fiscal year 2001, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall, from the National Service Life Insurance Fund (38 U.S.C. 1920), the Veterans' Special Life Insurance Fund (38 U.S.C. 1923), and the United States Government Life Insurance Fund (38 U.S.C. 1955), reimburse the ''General operating expenses'' account for the cost of administration of the insurance programs financed through those accounts: Provided, That reimbursement shall be made only from the surplus earnings accumulated in an insurance program in fiscal year 2001, that are available for dividends in that program after claims have been paid and actuarially determined reserves have been set aside: Provided further, That if the cost of administration of an insurance program exceeds the amount of surplus earnings accumulated in that program, reimbursement shall be made only to the extent of such surplus earnings: Provided further, That the Secretary shall determine the cost of administration for fiscal year 2001, which is properly allocable to the provision of each insurance program and to the provision of any total disability income insurance included in such insurance program.

SEC. 108. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act for Medical Care appropriations of the Department of Veterans Affairs may be obligated for the realignment of the health care delivery system in Veterans Integrated Service Network 12 (VISN 12) until 60 days after the Secretary of Veterans Affairs certifies that the Department has: (1) consulted with veterans organizations, medical school affiliates, employee representatives, State veterans and health associations, and other interested parties with respect to the realignment plan to be implemented; and (2) made available to the Congress and the public information from the consultations regarding possible impacts on the accessibility of veterans health care services to affected veterans.

SEC. 109. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, collections authorized by the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act (Public Law 106–117) and credited to the appropriate Department of Veterans Affairs accounts in fiscal year 2001, shall not be available for obligation or expenditure unless appropriation language making such funds available is enacted.

SEC. 110. ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

FINANCING ADJUSTMENT FACTORS

SEC. 201. Fifty percent of the amounts of budget authority, or in lieu thereof 50 percent of the cash amounts associated with such budget authority, that are recaptured from projects described in section 1012(a) of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Amendments Act of 1988 (Public Law 100–628; 102 Stat. 3224, 3268) shall be rescinded, or in the case of cash, shall be remitted to the Treasury, and such amounts of budget authority or cash recaptured and not rescinded or remitted to the Treasury shall be used by State housing finance agencies or local governments or local housing agencies with projects approved by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development for which settlement occurred after January 1, 1992, in accordance with such section. Notwithstanding the previous sentence, the Secretary may award up to 15 percent of the budget authority or cash recaptured and not rescinded or remitted to the Treasury to provide project owners with incentives to refinance their project at a lower interest rate.

FAIR HOUSING AND FREE SPEECH

SEC. 202. None of the amounts made available under this Act may be used during fiscal year 2001 to investigate or prosecute under the Fair Housing Act any otherwise lawful activity engaged in by one or more persons, including the filing or maintaining of a nonfrivolous legal action, that is engaged in solely for the purpose of achieving or preventing action by a Government official or entity, or a court of competent jurisdiction.

HOUSING OPPORTUNITIES FOR PERSONS WITH AIDS GRANTS

SEC. 203. (a) ELIGIBILITY.—Notwithstanding section 854(c)(1)(A) of the AIDS Housing Opportunity Act (42 U.S.C. 12903(c)(1)(A)), from any amounts made available under this title for fiscal year 2001 that are allocated under such section, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall allocate and make a grant, in the amount determined under subsection (b), for any State that—

(1) received an allocation in a prior fiscal year under clause (ii) of such section; and

(2) is not otherwise eligible for an allocation for fiscal year 2001 under such clause (ii) because the areas in the State outside of the metropolitan statistical areas that qualify under clause (i) in fiscal year 2000 do not have the number of cases of acquired immunodeficiency syndrome required under such clause.

(b) AMOUNT.—The amount of the allocation and grant for any State described in subsection (a) shall be an amount based on the cumulative number of AIDS cases in the areas of that State that are outside of metropolitan statistical areas that qualify under clause (i) of such section

845(c)(1)(A) in fiscal year 2000, in proportion to AIDS cases among cities and States that qualify under clauses (i) and (ii) of such section and States deemed eligible under subsection (a).

(c) ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW.—Section 856 of the Act is amended by adding the following new subsection at the end:

''(h) ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW.—For purposes of environmental review, a grant under this subtitle shall be treated as assistance for a special project that is subject to section 305(c) of the Multifamily Housing Property Disposition Reform Act of 1994, and shall be subject to the regulations issued by the Secretary to implement such section.''.

DUE PROCESS FOR HOMELESS ASSISTANCE

SEC. 204. None of the funds appropriated under this or any other Act may be used by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to prohibit or debar or in any way diminish the responsibilities of any entity (and the individuals comprising that entity) that is responsible for convening and managing a continuum of care process (convenor) in a community for purposes of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act from participating in that capacity unless the Secretary has published in the Federal Register a description of all circumstances that would be grounds for prohibiting or debarring a convenor from administering a continuum of care process and the procedures for a prohibition or debarment: Provided, That these procedures shall include a requirement that a convenor shall be provided with timely notice of a proposed prohibition or debarment, an identification of the circumstances that could result in the prohibition or debarment, an opportunity to respond to or remedy these circumstances, and the right for judicial review of any decision of the Secretary that results in a prohibition or debarment.

HUD REFORM ACT COMPLIANCE

SEC. 205. Except as explicitly provided in legislation, any grant or assistance made pursuant to Title II of this Act shall be made in accordance with section 102 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 on a competitive basis.

EXPANSION OF ENVIRONMENTAL ASSUMPTION AUTHORITY FOR HOMELESS ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

SEC. 206. Section 443 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act is amended to read as follows:

''SEC. 443. ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW.

''For purposes of environmental review, assistance and projects under this title shall be treated as assistance for special projects that are subject to section 305(c) of the Multifamily Housing Property Disposition Reform Act of 1994, and shall be subject to the regulations issued by the Secretary to implement such section.''.

STATE AND TRIBAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS

For environmental programs and infrastructure assistance, including capitalization grants for State revolving funds and performance partnership grants, $3,320,000,000, to remain available until expended, of which $1,350,000,000 shall be for making capitalization grants for the Clean Water State Revolving Funds under title VI of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended; $820,000,000 shall be for capitalization grants for the Drinking Water State Revolving Funds under section 1452 of the Safe Drinking Water Act, as amended, except that, notwithstanding section 1452(n) of the Safe Drinking Water Act, as amended, none of the funds made available under this heading in this Act, or in previous appropriations Acts, shall be reserved by the Administrator for health effects studies on drinking water contaminants; $50,000,000 shall be for architectural, engineering, planning, design, construction and related activities in connection with the construction of high priority water and wastewater facilities in the area of the United States-Mexico Border, after consultation with the appropriate border commission; $35,000,000 shall be for grants to the State of Alaska to address drinking water and wastewater infrastructure needs of rural and Alaska Native Villages; $110,000,000 shall be for making grants for the construction of wastewater and water treatment facilities and groundwater protection infrastructure in accordance with the terms and conditions specified for such grants in the Senate Report (106–410) accompanying this Act (H.R. 4635); and $955,000,000 shall be for grants, including associated program support costs, to States, federally recognized tribes, interstate agencies, tribal consortia, and air pollution control agencies for multi-media or single media pollution prevention, control and abatement and related activities, including activities pursuant to the provisions set forth under this heading in Public Law 104–134, and for making grants under section 103 of the Clean Air Act for particulate matter monitoring and data collection activities: Provided, That notwithstanding section 603(d)(7) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, the limitation on the amounts in a State water pollution control revolving fund that may be used by a State to administer the fund shall not apply to amounts included as principal in loans made by such fund in fiscal year 2001 and prior years where such amounts represent costs of administering the fund to the extent that such amounts are or were deemed reasonable by the Administrator, accounted for separately from other assets in the fund, and used for eligible purposes of the fund, including administration: Provided further, That for fiscal year 2001 and thereafter, and notwithstanding section 518(f) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, the Administrator is authorized to use the amounts appropriated for any fiscal year under section 319 of that Act to make grants to Indian tribes pursuant to section 319(h) and 518(e) of that Act: Provided further, That beginning in fiscal year 2001 and thereafter, notwithstanding the limitation on amounts in section 518(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, up to a total of 1½ percent of the funds appropriated for State Revolving Funds under Title VI of that Act may be reserved by the Administrator for grants under section 518(c) of such Act: Provided further, That no funds provided by this legislation to address the water, wastewater and other critical infrastructure needs of the colonias along the United States-Mexico border shall be made available to a county or municipal government unless that government has established an enforceable local ordinance, or other zoning rule, which prevents in that jurisdiction the development or construction of any additional colonia areas, or the development within an existing colonia the construction of any new home, business, or other structure which lacks water, wastewater, or other necessary infrastructure.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

For fiscal year 2001 and thereafter, the obligated balances of sums available in multiple-year appropriations accounts shall remain available through the seventh fiscal year after their period of availability has expired for liquidating obligations made during the period of availability.

Beginning in fiscal year 2001 and thereafter, notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 6303(1) and 6305(1), the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, in carrying out the Agency's function to directly implement Federal environmental programs required or authorized by law in the absence of an acceptable tribal program, may award cooperative agreements to federally-recognized Indian Tribes or Intertribal consortia, if authorized by their member Tribes, to assist the Administrator in implementing Federal environmental programs for Indian Tribes required or authorized by law, except that no such cooperative agreements may be awarded from funds designated for State financial assistance agreements.

Section 176(c) of the Clean Air Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(6) Notwithstanding paragraph 5, this subsection shall not apply with respect to an area designated nonattainment under section 107(d)(1) until one year after that area is first designated nonattainment for a specific national ambient air quality standard. This paragraph only applies with respect to the national ambient air quality standard for which an area is newly designated nonattainment and does not affect the area's requirements with respect to all other national ambient air quality standards for which the area is designated nonattainment or has been redesignated from nonattainment to attainment with a maintenance plan pursuant to section 175(A) (including any pre-existing national ambient air quality standard for a pollutant for which a new or revised standard has been issued).''.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

For necessary expenses of the Office of Inspector General in carrying out the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, $23,000,000.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for ''Human space flight'', ''Science, aeronautics and technology'', or ''Mission support'' by this appropriations Act, when any activity has been initiated by the incurrence of obligations for construction of facilities as authorized by law, such amount available for such activity shall remain available until expended. This provision does not apply to the amounts appropriated in ''Mission support'' pursuant to the authorization for repair, rehabilitation and modification of facilities, minor construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, and facility planning and design.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for ''Human space flight'', ''Science, aeronautics and technology'', or ''Mission support'' by this appropriations

Act, the amounts appropriated for construction of facilities shall remain available until September 30, 2003.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for ''Mission support'' and ''Office of Inspector General'', amounts made available by this Act for personnel and related costs and travel expenses of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall remain available until September 30, 2000 and may be used to enter into contracts for training, investigations, costs associated with personnel relocation, and for other services, to be provided during the next fiscal year.

Unless otherwise provided for in this Act or in the joint explanatory statement of the committee of conference accompanying this Act, no part of the funds appropriated for ''Human space flight'' may be used for the development of the International Space Station in excess of the amounts set forth in the budget estimates submitted as part of the budget request for fiscal year 2001.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all amounts made available for missions, programs and individual activities and research under ''Human space flight'', ''Science, aeronautics and technology'', or ''Mission support'' by this appropriations Act shall be funded in accordance with the terms and conditions specified in Senate Report 106–410, with any changes subject to the approval of the Committees on Appropriations pursuant to a reprogramming request by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

NATIONAL CREDIT UNION ADMINISTRATION

CENTRAL LIQUIDITY FACILITY

During fiscal year 2001, gross obligations of the Central Liquidity Facility for the principal amount of new direct loans to member credit unions, as authorized by the National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility Act (12 U.S.C. 1795), shall not exceed $600,000,000: Provided, That administrative expenses of the Central Liquidity Facility in fiscal year 2001 shall not exceed $296,303.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

RESEARCH AND RELATED ACTIVITIES

For necessary expenses in carrying out the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1861–1875), and the Act to establish a National Medal of Science (42 U.S.C. 1880–1881); services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; authorized travel; maintenance and operation of aircraft and purchase of flight services for research support; acquisition of aircraft; $3,245,562,000, of which not to exceed $285,410,000 shall remain available until expended for Polar research and operations support, and for reimbursement to other Federal agencies for operational and science support and logistical and other related activities for the United States Antarctic program; the balance to remain available until September 30, 2002: Provided, That receipts for scientific support services and materials furnished by the National Research Centers and other National Science Foundation supported research facilities may be credited to this appropriation: Provided further, That to the extent that the amount appropriated is less than the total amount authorized to be appropriated for included program activities, all amounts, including floors and ceilings, specified in the authorizing Act for those program activities or their subactivities shall be reduced proportionally: Provided further, That $65,000,000 of the funds available under this heading shall be made available for a comprehensive research initiative on plant genomes for economically significant crop: Provided further, That no funds in this or any other Act shall be used to acquire or lease a research vessel with ice-breaking capability built or retrofitted by a shipyard located in a foreign country if such a vessel of United States origin can be obtained at a cost no more than 50 per centum above that of the least expensive technically acceptable foreign vessel bid: Provided further, That, in determining the cost of such a vessel, such cost be increased by the amount of any subsidies or financing provided by a foreign government (or instrumentality thereof) to such vessel's construction: Provided further, That if the vessel contracted for pursuant to the foregoing is not available for the 2002–2003 austral summer Antarctic season, a vessel of any origin may be leased for a period of not to exceed 120 days for that season and each season thereafter until delivery of the new vessel.

MAJOR RESEARCH EQUIPMENT

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Selective Service System, including expenses of attendance at meetings and of training for uniformed personnel assigned to the Selective Service System, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 4101–4118 for civilian employees; and not to exceed $1,000 for official reception and representation expenses; $24,480,000: Provided, That during the current fiscal year, the President may exempt this appropriation from the provisions of 31 U.S.C. 1341, whenever he deems such action to be necessary in the interest of national defense: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated by this Act may be expended for or in connection with the induction of any person into the Armed Forces of the United States.

TITLE IV—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. Where appropriations in titles I, II, and III of this Act are expendable for travel expenses and no specific limitation has been placed thereon, the expenditures for such travel expenses may not exceed the amounts set forth therefore in the budget estimates submitted for the appropriations: Provided, That this provision does not apply to accounts that do not contain an object classification for travel: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to travel performed by uncompensated officials of local boards and appeal boards of the Selective Service System; to travel performed directly in connection with care and treatment of medical beneficiaries of the Department of Veterans Affairs; to travel performed in connection with major disasters or emergencies declared or determined by the President under the provisions of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act; to travel performed by the Offices of Inspector General in connection with audits and investigations; or to payments to interagency motor pools where separately set forth in the budget schedules: Provided further, That if appropriations in titles I, II, and III exceed the amounts set forth in budget estimates initially submitted for such appropriations, the expenditures for travel may correspondingly exceed the amounts therefore set forth in the estimates in the same proportion.

SEC. 402. Appropriations and funds available for the administrative expenses of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Selective Service System shall be available in the current fiscal year for purchase of uniforms, or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901–5902; hire of passenger motor vehicles; and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

SEC. 403. Funds of the Department of Housing and Urban Development subject to the Government Corporation Control Act or section 402 of the Housing Act of 1950 shall be available, without regard to the limitations on administrative expenses, for legal services on a contract or fee basis, and for utilizing and making payment for services and facilities of Federal National Mortgage Association, Government National Mortgage Association, Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, Federal Financing Bank, Federal Reserve banks or any member thereof, Federal Home Loan banks, and any insured bank within the meaning of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1811–1831).

SEC. 404. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 405. No funds appropriated by this Act may be expended—

(1) pursuant to a certification of an officer or employee of the United States unless—

(A) such certification is accompanied by, or is part of, a voucher or abstract which describes the payee or payees and the items or services for which such expenditure is being made; or

(B) the expenditure of funds pursuant to such certification, and without such a voucher or abstract, is specifically authorized by law; and

(2) unless such expenditure is subject to audit by the General Accounting Office or is specifically exempt by law from such audit.

SEC. 406. None of the funds provided in this Act to any department or agency may be expended for the transportation of any officer or employee of such department or agency between their domicile and their place of employment, with the exception of any officer or employee authorized such transportation under 31 U.S.C. 1344 or 5 U.S.C. 7905.

SEC. 407. None of the funds provided in this Act may be used for payment, through grants or contracts, to recipients that do not share in the cost of conducting research resulting from proposals not specifically solicited by the Government: Provided, That the extent of cost sharing by the recipient shall reflect the mutuality of interest of the grantee or contractor and the Government in the research.

SEC. 408. None of the funds in this Act may be used, directly or through grants, to pay or to provide reimbursement for payment of the salary of a consultant (whether retained by the Federal Government or a grantee) at more than the daily equivalent of the rate paid for level IV of the Executive Schedule, unless specifically authorized by law.

SEC. 409. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be used to pay the expenses of, or otherwise compensate, non-Federal parties intervening in regulatory or adjudicatory proceedings. Nothing herein affects the authority of the Consumer Product Safety Commission pursuant to section 7 of the Consumer Product Safety Act (15 U.S.C. 2056 et seq.).

SEC. 410. Except as otherwise provided under existing law, or under an existing Executive order issued pursuant to an existing law, the obligation or expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for contracts for any consulting service shall be limited to contracts which are: (1) a matter of public record and available for public inspection; and (2) thereafter included in a publicly available list of all contracts entered into within 24 months prior to the date on which the list is made available to the public and of all contracts on which performance has not been completed by such date. The list required by the preceding sentence shall be updated quarterly and shall include a narrative description of the work to be performed under each such contract.

SEC. 411. Except as otherwise provided by law, no part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be obligated or expended by any executive agency, as referred to in the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 401 et seq.), for a contract for services unless such executive agency: (1) has awarded and entered into such contract in full compliance with such Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder; and (2) requires any report prepared pursuant to such contract, including plans, evaluations, studies, analyses and manuals, and any report prepared by the agency which is substantially derived from or substantially includes any report prepared pursuant to such contract, to contain information concerning: (A) the contract pursuant to which the report was prepared; and (B) the contractor who prepared the report pursuant to such contract.

SEC. 412. Except as otherwise provided in section 406, none of the funds provided in this Act to any department or agency shall be obligated or expended to provide a personal cook, chauffeur, or other personal servants to any officer or employee of such department or agency.

SEC. 413. None of the funds provided in this Act to any department or agency shall be obligated or expended to procure passenger automobiles as defined in 15 U.S.C. 2001 with an EPA estimated miles per gallon average of less than 22 miles per gallon.

SEC. 414. None of the funds appropriated in title I of this Act shall be used to enter into any new lease of real property if the estimated annual rental is more than $300,000 unless the Secretary submits, in writing, a report to the Committees on Appropriations of the Congress and a period of 30 days has expired following the date on which the report is received by the Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 415. (a) It is the sense of the Congress that, to the greatest extent practicable, all equipment and products purchased with funds made available in this Act should be American-made.

(b) In providing financial assistance to, or entering into any contract with, any entity using funds made available in this Act, the head of each Federal agency, to the greatest extent practicable, shall provide to such entity a notice describing the statement made in subsection (a) by the Congress.

SEC. 416. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to implement any cap on reimbursements to grantees for indirect costs, except as published in Office of Management and Budget Circular A–21.

SEC. 417. Such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2001 pay raises for programs funded by this Act shall be absorbed within the levels appropriated in this Act.

SEC. 418. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used for any program, project, or activity, when it is made known to the Federal entity or official to which the funds are made available that the program, project, or activity is not in compliance with any Federal law relating to risk assessment, the protection of private property rights, or unfunded mandates.

SEC. 419. Corporations and agencies of the Department of Housing and Urban Development which are subject to the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, are hereby authorized to make such expenditures, within the limits of funds and borrowing authority available to each such corporation or agency and in accord with law, and to make such contracts and commitments without regard to fiscal year limitations as provided by section 104 of the Act as may be necessary in carrying out the programs set forth in the budget for 2001 for such corporation or agency except as hereinafter provided: Provided, That collections of these corporations and agencies may be used for new loan or mortgage purchase commitments only to the extent expressly provided for in this Act (unless such loans are in support of other forms of assistance provided for in this or prior appropriations Acts), except that this proviso shall not apply to the mortgage insurance or guaranty operations of these corporations, or where loans or mortgage purchases are necessary to protect the financial interest of the United States Government.

SEC. 420. Notwithstanding section 320(g) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1330(g)), funds made available pursuant to authorization under such section for fiscal year 2001 may be used for implementing comprehensive conservation and management plans.

SEC. 421. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the term ''qualified student loan'' with respect to national service education awards shall mean any loan made directly to a student by the Alaska Commission on Postsecondary Education, in addition to other meanings under section 148(b)(7) of the National and Community Service Act.

SEC. 422. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to carry out Executive Order No. 13083.

SEC. 423. Unless otherwise provided for in this Act, no part of any appropriation for the Department of Housing and Urban Development shall be available for any activity in excess of amounts set forth in the budget estimates submitted for the appropriations.

SEC. 424. Except in the case of entities that are funded solely with Federal funds or any natural persons that are funded under this Act, none of the funds in this Act shall be used for the planning or execution of any program to pay the expenses of, or otherwise compensate, non-Federal parties to lobby or litigate in respect to adjudicatory proceedings funded in this Act. A chief executive officer of any entity receiving funds under this Act shall certify that none of these funds have been used to engage in the lobbying of the Federal Government or in litigation against the United States unless authorized under existing law.

SEC. 425. No part of any funds appropriated in this Act shall be used by an agency of the executive branch, other than for normal and recognized executive-legislative relationships, for publicity or propaganda purposes, and for the preparation, distribution or use of any kit, pamphlet, booklet, publication, radio, television or film presentation designed to support or defeat legislation pending before the Congress, except in presentation to the Congress itself.

SEC. 426. NASA FULL COST ACCOUNTING. Title III of the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958, Public Law 85–568, is amended by adding the following new section at the end:

''SEC. 312. (a) Appropriations for the Administration for fiscal year 2002 and thereafter shall be made in accounts, ''Human space flight'', ''International space station'', ''Science, aeronautics and technology'', and an account for amounts appropriated for the necessary expenses of the Office of Inspector General. Appropriations shall remain available for two fiscal years. Each account shall include the planned full costs of the Administration's related activities.

''(b) The Administrator shall notify the Committees on Appropriations whenever any program or activity exceeds fifteen percent of the annual or total budget of such program or activity.''.

SEC. 3. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.—

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the Nation has not made adequate progress in maintaining and expanding the inventory of affordable housing for low and very low-income families, including persons with disabilities and seniors;

(2) despite continued economic expansion, worst case housing needs have reached an all-time high of 5.4 million families, increasing by 4 percent between 1995 and 1997;

(3) the number of rental units which are affordable to extremely low-income families has decreased by 5 percent since 1991, a loss of over 37,000 units;

(4) the Administration and the Department of Housing and Urban Development has proposed increased funding for incremental rental vouchers as the primary solution to making additional housing available for low-income and very low-income families;

(5) while section 8 vouchers represent housing choice as a matter of philosophy, in many cases families using vouchers have difficult time finding housing, especially in low vacancy market areas;

(6) in many cases, where section 8 vouchers are used, the result is de facto redlining where low-income families are relegated to the poorest and most distressed neighborhoods with limited opportunities for transportation, employment and quality schools;

(7) section 8 vouchers do not produce additional new units of affordable low-income housing since banks will not finance new construction with one year termed portable assistance;

(8) the Department of Housing and Urban Development has not provided the necessary leadership to assist in the development of needed affordable housing;

(9) a large number of States and local government have been successful in developing new tools and opportunities for the development of additional affordable housing for low-income families, including the development of affordable mixed income housing as part of State and local redevelopment strategies for distressed communities; and

(10) State housing finance agencies have the local experience and knowledge to maximize the development of additional units of affordable low-income housing and to preserve the existing stock of low-income affordable housing.

(b) The purpose of this Act is to redirect the primary responsibility for the preservation of existing affordable low-income housing and the expansion of the inventory of affordable rental housing for very low-income and low-income families from the Federal Government to State and local governments through State housing finance agencies.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) The term ''low-income families'' shall have the same meaning as provided under section 3(b)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(2) The term ''project-based assistance'' shall have the meaning given such term in section 16(c)(6) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, except that such term includes assistance under any successor programs to the programs referred to in such section.

(3) The term ''public housing agency'' shall have the meaning given such term in section 3(b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(4) The term ''Secretary'' shall mean the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

(5) The term ''section 8 assistance'' or ''voucher'' shall have the meaning given such term in section 8(f) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(6) The term ''State'' shall mean the United States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, America Samoa, and any other territory of possession of the United States.

(7) The term ''State housing finance agency'' shall mean any State or local housing finance agency that has been designated by a State to administer this program.

(8) The term ''very low-income families'' shall have the same meaning as provided under section 3(b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

TITLE I—PRODUCTION OF NEW HOUSING FOR LOW AND VERY LOW-INCOME FAMILIES

SEC. 101. The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall make funds available to State housing finance agencies as provided under section 102 for the rehabilitation of existing low-income housing, for the development of new affordable low-income housing units, and for the preservation of existing low-income housing units that are at risk of becoming unavailable for low-income families.

SEC. 102. ALLOCATION OF RESOURCES.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall allocate funds approved in appropriations Acts to State housing finance agencies to carry out this Title. Subject to the requirements of subsection (b) and as otherwise provided in this subsection, each State housing finance agency shall be eligible to receive an amount of funds equal to the proportion of the per capita population of the State in relation to the population of the United States which shall be determined on the basis of the most recent decennial census for which data are available. For each fiscal year, the Secretary shall reserve for grants to Indian tribes 1 percent of the amount appropriated under the applicable appropriations Act. The Secretary shall provide for distribution of amounts under this subsection to Indian tribes on the basis of a competition conducted pursuant to specific criteria developed after notice and public comment.

(b) MINIMUM STATE ALLOCATION.—If the allocation under subsection (a), when applied to the funds approved under this section in appropriations Acts for a fiscal year, would result in funding of less than $10,000,000 to any State housing finance agency, the allocation for such State housing finance agency shall be $10,000,000 and the increase shall be deducted pro rata from the allocation of all other State housing finance agencies.

(c) CRITERIA FOR REALLOCATION.—The Secretary shall reallocate any funds previously allocated to a State housing finance agency for any fiscal year in which the State housing finance agency fails to provide its match requirements or fails to submit an affordable housing expansion plan that is approved by the Secretary. All such funds shall be reallocated pursuant to the formula provided under subsection (a).

SEC. 103. AFFORDABLE HOUSING EXPANSION PLAN.—

(a) SUBMISSION OF AFFORDABLE HOUSING EXPANSION PLAN.—The Secretary shall allocate funds under section 102 to a State housing finance agency only if the State housing finance agency has submitted an affordable housing expansion plan, with annual updates, approved by the Secretary and designed to meet the overall very low- and low-income housing needs of both the rural and urban areas of the State in which the State housing finance agency is located. This plan shall be developed in conjunction with the housing strategies developed for the applicable States and localities under section 105 of Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act.

(b) CITIZEN PARTICIPATION.—Before submitting an affordable housing expansion plan to the Secretary, a State housing finance agency shall—

(1) make available to citizens of the State, public agencies and other interested parties information regarding the amount of assistance expected to be made available under this Title and the range of investment or other uses of such assistance that the State housing finance agency may undertake;

(2) publish the proposed plan in a manner that, in the determination of the Secretary, affords affected citizens, public agencies, and other interested parties a reasonable opportunity to review its contents and to submit comments on the proposed plan;

(3) hold one or more public hearings to obtain the views of citizens, public agencies, and other interested parties on the housing needs of the State; and

(4) provide citizens, public agencies, and other interested parties with reasonable access to records regarding the uses of any assistance that the State housing finance agency may have received under this Title during the preceding 5 years.

SEC. 104. ELIGIBLE USE OF FUNDS.—Funds made available under this title shall be used for—

(1) the acquisition, new construction, reconstruction, or moderate or substantial rehabilitation of affordable housing for mixed income rental housing where the assistance provided under section 102 shall be used to assist units targeted to low and very low-income families, including the elderly and persons with disabilities;

(2) the moderate and substantial rehabilitation of rental housing units that are currently assisted under State or Federal low-income housing programs;

(3) the preservation of Federal and State low-income housing units that are at risk of being no longer affordable to low-income families;

(4) the purchase and creation of land trusts to allow low- and moderate-income families an opportunity to rent homes in areas of low-vacancy;

(5) conversion of public housing to assisted living facilities for the elderly;

(6) conversion of section 202 elderly housing to assisted living facilities for the elderly;

(7) conversion of HUD-owned or HUD-held multifamily properties upon disposition to housing for the elderly, housing for persons with disabilities and to assisted living facilities for the elderly;

(8) creation of sinking funds to maintain reserves held by State housing finance agencies to preserve the low-income character of the housing; and

(9) the creation of public/private partnerships in which corporations and nonprofits are encouraged to develop partnerships for the creation of affordable low-income housing.

SEC. 105. MATCHING REQUIREMENTS.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each State housing finance agency shall make contributions for activities under this title that total, throughout a fiscal year, not less than 75 percent of the funds made available under this title.

(b) ALLOWABLE AMOUNTS.—

(1) APPLICATION TO HOUSING.—A contribution shall be recognized for purposes of a match under subsection (a) only if—

(A) is made with respect to housing that qualifies as affordable housing under section 107; or

(B) is made with respect to any portion of a project for which not less than 50 percent of the units qualify as affordable housing under section 107.

(2) FORM.—A contribution may be in the form of—

(A) cash contributions from non-Federal sources, which may not include funds from a grant under section 106(b) or section 106(d) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 or from the value of low income tax credits allocated pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code;

(B) the value of taxes, fees or other charges that are normally and customarily imposed but are waived, forgone, or deferred in a manner that achieves affordability of housing assisted under this title;

(C) the value of land or other real property as appraised according to procedures acceptable to the Secretary;

(D) the value of investment in on-site and off-site infrastructure directly required for affordable housing assisted under this title;

(E) the reasonable value of any site-preparation and construction materials and any donated or voluntary labor in connection with the site-preparation for, construction or rehabilitation of affordable housing; and

(F) such other contributions to affordable housing as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(3) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Contributions for administrative expenses may not be recognized for purposes of this section.

SEC. 106. DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE.—Each State housing finance agency shall ensure that the development of new housing under this section is designed to meet both urban and rural needs, and prioritize funding, to the extent practicable, in conjunction with the economic redevelopment of an area.

SEC. 107. ELIGIBLE AFFORDABLE HOUSING.—

(a) PRODUCTION OF AFFORDABLE HOUSING.—In the case of new construction, housing shall qualify for assistance under this title only if the housing—

(1) has not less than 30 percent of the units assisted under this title occupied by very low-income families who pay as a contribution towards rent (not including any Federal or State rental subsidy provided on behalf of the family) not more than 20 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 50 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustments for the number of bedrooms in the unit, except that the Secretary may establish income ceilings higher or lower than 50 percent of the median income for the area on the basis of the Secretary's findings that variations are necessary because of the prevailing levels of construction costs or fair market rents, or unusually high or low family incomes;

(2) except as provided under paragraph (1), requires all units assisted under this title to be occupied by households that are low-income families and who pay no more than 30 percent of 100 percent of the median income for an area; and

(3) will remain affordable under the requirements provided in paragraphs (1) and (2), according to legally binding commitments satisfactory to the Secretary, for not less than 40 years, without regard to the term of the mortgage or to the transfer of ownership, or for such period that the Secretary determines is the longest feasible period of time consistent with sound economics and the purposes of this Act, including foreclosure where the responsibility for maintaining the low-income character of the property will be the responsibility of the State housing finance agency.

SEC. 108. TENANT SELECTION.—An owner of any housing assisted under this Title shall establish tenant selection procedures consistent with the affordable housing expansion plan of the State housing finance agency.

SEC. 109. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR SERVICE COORDINATORS OR SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—No funds under this Act may be used for service coordinators or supportive services.

SEC. 110. PENALTIES FOR MISUSE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall recapture any assistance awarded under this Title to the extent the assistance has been used for impermissible purposes. To the extent the Secretary identifies a pattern and practice regarding the misuse of funds awarded under this Title, the Secretary shall deny assistance to that State for up to 5 years, subject to notice and an opportunity for judicial review.

SEC. 111. SUBSIDY LAYERING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of section 102(d) of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 may be satisfied in connection with assistance, including a commitment to insure a mortgage, provided under this Title by a certification of a State housing finance agency to the Secretary that the combination of assistance within the jurisdiction of the Secretary and other government assistance provided in connection with a property assisted under this Title shall not be any greater than is necessary to provide affordable housing.

SEC. 112. MULTIFAMILY RISK-SHARING MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall carry out a mortgage insurance program through the Federal Housing Administration in conjunction with State housing finance agencies to insure multifamily mortgages for housing that qualifies under this Title. This program shall be consistent with the requirements established under section 542 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992, except that housing that meet the requirements of this Title shall be eligible for mortgage insurance.

SEC. 113. REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue notice and comment rulemaking with final regulations issued no later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 114. SUNSET.—Title I shall expire on October 1, 2001, except that all funds shall remain available until expended.

TITLE II—SECTION 8 VOUCHER SUCCESS DEMONSTRATION

SEC. 201. AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall establish a voucher success demonstration to permit public housing agencies to increase the payment standard for section 8 vouchers for an area in excess of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(B) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to assist in helping low-income and very low-income families obtain housing in tight rental markets. Except as otherwise provided herein, all assistance provided under this Title shall be subject to the requirements of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

SEC. 202. ELIGIBILITY.—

(a) VOUCHER SUCCESS PLAN.—Not less than annually, each public housing agency that seeks to participate in the voucher success demonstration under section 201 shall submit to the Secretary a voucher success plan that—

(1) demonstrates that the market area for which the public housing agency is responsible is an area, based on housing market indicators, such as low vacancy rates or high absorption rates, where there is not adequate available and affordable housing or where families with vouchers will not be able to locate suitable units or use tenant-based assistance successfully;

(2) identifies a payment standard in excess of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(B) that will ensure that not less than 97 percent of families with vouchers will be able to obtain suitable housing in that market area within 120 days;

(3) describes actions that the public housing agency will take that will assist families with vouchers, including seniors and persons with disabilities, to identify and obtain suitable and available affordable housing that is close to transportation, employment opportunities, quality schools and appropriate services; and

(4) shall include such other information and commitments as deemed appropriate by the Secretary.

(b) INCREASED PAYMENT STANDARD.—The Secretary shall approve a payment standard for a market area under this demonstration to no more than 150 percent of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(B) of the United States Housing Act of 1937. This payment standard shall be published annually in the Federal Register and adjusted annually to reflect changes in each market area.

(c) PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall establish requirements and procedures for the submission and review of voucher success plans, including requirements for timing and form of submission, and for the contents and approval of such plans.

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue interim regulations no later than 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act with final notice and public comment regulations issued no later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—A family using a voucher approved as part of a demonstration under this Title shall be eligible for an approved payment standard in excess of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(d) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to the extent the assisted family continues to reside in the same housing in which the family was residing on the date in which the housing was determined eligible for the increased payment standard under this Title.

SEC. 203. LIMITATION ON FUNDING.—Except to the extent additional incremental vouchers are provided in appropriations Acts, for purposes of this section, each public housing agency shall be limited to the section 8 funds allocated to that public housing agency as of October 1, 2000, including appropriate amounts for reserves, for purposes of implementing the voucher success plan.

TITLE III—PRESERVATION OF LOW-INCOME HOUSING AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. SECTION 8 PROJECT-BASED FLEXIBILITY.—Section 8(o)(13) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by—

(1) in paragraph (A)(ii), striking ''15 percent'' and inserting in lieu thereof ''25 percent''; and

(2) adding the following new paragraph (E) to the end:

''(E) The Secretary shall establish expedited procedures to allow public housing agencies to enter into housing assistance payment contracts with respect to existing structures.''.

SEC. 302. DISPOSITION OF HUD-HELD AND HUD-OWNED MULTIFAMILY PROJECTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall maintain any rental assistance payments attached to any dwelling units under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 for all multifamily properties owned by the Secretary and multifamily properties held by the Secretary for purposes of management and disposition of such properties. To the extent, the Secretary determines that a multifamily property owned by the Secretary or held by the Secretary is not feasible for continued rental assistance payments under section 8, the Secretary may, in consultation with the tenants of that property, contract for project-based rental assistance payments with an owner or owners of other existing housing properties.

SEC. 303. FAMILY UNIFICATION PROGRAM.—Section 8(x)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by—

(a) striking ''any family (A) who is otherwise eligible for such assistance, and (B)'' and inserting in lieu thereof: ''(A) any family (i) who is otherwise eligible for such assistance, and (ii)''; and

(b) inserting before the period at the end: ''(B) for a period not to exceed 18 months, youths who have attained at least 18 years of age and not more than 21 years of age and who have left foster care at age 16 or older''.

SEC. 304. PERMANENT EXTENSION OF FHA MULTIFAMILY MORTGAGE CREDIT DEMONSTRATIONS.—Section 542 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992 is amended—

(1) by revising subsection (b)(5) to read as follows:

''(5) INSURANCE AUTHORITY.—Using any authority provided in appropriation Acts to insure mortgages under the National Housing Act, the Secretary may enter into commitments under this subsection for risk-sharing units.'';

(2) by revising subsection (c)(4) to read as follows:

''(4) INSURANCE AUTHORITY.—Using any authority provided in appropriation Acts to insure mortgages under the National Housing Act, the Secretary may enter into commitments under this subsection for risk-sharing units.'';

(3) in the heading, by striking ''Demonstrations'' and inserting ''Programs'';

(4) in the first sentence of subsection (a), by striking ''demonstrate the effectiveness of providing'' and inserting ''provide'';

(5) in the second sentence of subsection (a), by striking ''demonstration'';

(6) in subsection (b)(1), by striking ''determine the effectiveness of'' and inserting ''provide'';

(7) in subsection (c)(1), by striking ''test the effectiveness of'' and inserting ''provide'';

(8) by striking subsection (d); and

(9) by striking ''pilot'' and ''PILOT'' each place it appears.

This Act may be cited as the ''Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001''.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee substitute is agreed to. The Bond-Mikulski amendment is agreed to.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4306) was agreed to, as follows: (The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, as comanager, I am pleased to present to the Senate, H.R. 4635, the VA–HUD appropriations bill for fiscal year 2001, as reported from the Committee on Appropriations.

This is an unusual year. We have offered, and it has been accepted, a managers' amendment that I have offered with my distinguished colleague, Senator MIKULSKI, which will replace the Senate committee-reported text of H.R. 4635.

This compromise amendment was worked out in agreement with Senator MIKULSKI, Congressman WALSH, Congressman MOLLOHAN, and me in consultation with the administration. This is an unusual and far from perfect situation. It is not the way I would normally prefer to proceed with the passage of the VA–HUD appropriations bill. Nevertheless, we have worked hard to develop a comprehensive package that considers the concerns of all colleagues in both the House and Senate. It also met the test for approval by the administration. I strongly believe that the proposed compromise language strikes the right balance in funding the programs under the jurisdiction of the VA/HUD Appropriations Subcommittee.

The managers amendment/compromise agreement totals some $105.8 billion, including some $24.6 billion in mandatory veterans benefits. This represents some $1.1 billion over the Senate committee-reported bill and almost $1 billion less than the budget request. Outlays are funded at some $110.7 billion for fiscal year 2001, $540 million over the Senate committee-reported bill of $110.2 billion. The bill meets our current funding allocation, per the Budget Committee.

We also did our best to satisfy priorities of Senators who made special requests for such items as economic development grants, water infrastructure improvements and the like. Such requests numbered several thousand, illustrating the level of interest and demand for assistance provided in this bill.

We also attempted to address the administration's top concerns, including funding for 79,000 new housing vouchers, as well as record funding for EPA at $7.8 billion.

Before going into the details of the compromise agreement, I would like to commend my ranking members, Senator MIKULSKI, and her staff for their cooperation and support throughout this process. We would not have reached agreement as quickly, nor attained as good a result, without her active help. She is a vitally important part of this operation. I am deeply grateful for her help, guidance, and counsel.

To turn to the elements of the bill: For Veterans Affairs, the proposed compromise language to VA/HUD FY 2001 appropriations bill includes funding for VA that totals $47 billion, including $22.4 billion in discretionary spending. Veterans needs remain the highest priority for this bill, and compared to the President's request, this bill has an additional $54.7 million.

The compromise includes $20.28 billion for VA medical care, $1.4 billion more than the current level, and $351 million for research, an increase of $30 million above the budget request level for this key program which helps ensure the best quality of care to our veterans and keeps the best doctors in the VA system.

The VA/HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise also includes about $180 million more than the President's request for VA medical care by including a provision that will ensure VA will not be penalized from collecting less in new receipts authorized under the 1999 Millennium Act.

In addition, the compromise includes a new Title V, Filipino Veterans Benefits Improvements, which provides benefits to Filipino veterans who fought alongside American soldiers in World War II and who live in the United States, equal to those benefits provided to U.S. veterans of World War II. This is a long overdue remedy of inequitable treatment of Filipino veterans. We thank our colleagues on the Veterans' Affairs Committee for their agreement and assistance in including this provision.

For HUD, the VA/HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise appropriates some $30.6 billion, approximately the same as the budget request. This includes a section 8 rescission of some $1.8 billion in excess section 8 funds. This funding includes all the funding needed to renew all expiring section 8 contracts and also provides funds for 79,000 incremental vouchers, an administration priority.

The public housing capital funding is increased by $45 million above the budget request in fiscal year 2001 to $3 billion. Similarly, the public housing operating funding has been increased by $50 million above the budget request in fiscal year 2001 to $3.242 billion.

In addition, CDBG and HOME funds have been increased by $150 million each in fiscal year 2001 with CDBG at $5.057 billion and HOME at $1.8 billion, respectively. These are important block grant programs which rely on decisionmaking guided by local choice and need. I also hope these funds are used as an investment in housing production to meet the increasing affordable housing needs of low-income families. Staff work in this subcommittee has shown one of the serious problems facing us is lack of affordable housing.

In addition, the VA/HUD appropriations bill for fiscal year 2001 funds section 202 elderly housing at $779 million, the budget request, and section 811 housing for disabled persons at $217 million, $7 million over the budget request. A separate account has been created at $100 million for the renewal of expiring shelter plus care contracts.

This bill includes a number of noncontroversial HUD administrative provisions, whereas we have dropped, at the request of the Senate Banking Committee, a new housing production program for extremely low-income families and a provision that would have provided favorable treatment under FHA for municipal workers such as teachers, firemen, and police.

We also have maintained a provision that would increase the amount of section 8 assistance available to PHAs for project-based assistance from 15 percent to 20 percent with a limitation that no more than 25 percent of the units in a building can be project-based, except in the case of seniors, disabled persons and scattered site housing as well as a provision that would require HUD to maintain section 8 projected-based assistance on a HUD-held or HUD-owned multifamily housing projects where the project is elderly or disabled housing unless that housing is not viable. These are important provisions that focus on local decisionmaking and local housing needs.

For EPA, the VA/HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise includes a record $7.8 billion for EPA, plus an additional $138 million for the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences which traditionally have been funded under EPA's appropriation and are funded separately in this bill. Thus, compared to the budget request, the compromise will provide an additional $686 million more than the President and about $400 million more than fiscal year 2000.

Additional funds of $550 million above the budget request have been provided for clean water state revolving funds as well as additional funds of $12 million for section 106 water quality grants—$57 million above the fiscal year 2000 level to help states meet future total maximum daily load requirements.

Compared to last year, the compromise increases operating programs by $246 million including an additional $20 million for the climate change technology initiative voluntary programs and protection of all core programs.

The compromise does not fund new, unauthorized programs such as clean air partnerships or Great Lakes grants which would detract from EPA core responsibilities.

With respect to legislative issues, the compromise bill includes the fiscal year 1999 bill with report language relative to the Kyoto Protocol. The proposed report would provide up to an additional 6 months for finalizing the arsenic-in-drinking water rule, and the bill modifies the so-called Collins-Linder provision on ozone nonattainment designations which would allow EPA to make designations once the Supreme Court decides this case but not later than June 2001.

These so-called EPA riders are primarily report language which we believe are fair and reasonable compromises on issues where there are broad questions and we need to bring some resolution. While everyone may not agree with these decisions, we have worked hard to balance the decisions associated with this account to the overall benefit of EPA policy and funding needs in consultation with and agreement with the administration.

For FEMA, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the VA–HUD appropriations bill for 2001 appropriates a total of $936.8 million for FEMA and includes an additional $1.3 billion in disaster relief contingency funds. With the disaster relief funds provided here, coupled with contingency funds already on hand, funding will be sufficient to meet fiscal year 2001 disaster relief operations.

Most notable in FEMA funding is the addition of $30 million above the Senate- or House-appropriated levels for emergency food and shelter, for a total of $140 million. This popular program results in temporary housing and food assistance to thousands of needy individuals with very little overhead costs.

For the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the VA–HUD appropriations compromise funds NASA at $14.285 billion instead of $14.035 billion, for an increase of $250 million. This account includes $5.46 billion for human space flight, which is $37 million below the administration request for fiscal year 2001. This reduction reflects a NASA request for a reduction in this account in order to provide full funding for the Mars 2003 lander program.

The funding includes $6.19 billion in fiscal year 2001 for science, aeronautics, and technology, instead of $5.93 billion as requested by the administration, an increase of $261 million above the budget request. Included in this is $20 million for Living with a Star and $290 million for the space launch initiative, including $40 million for alternative access to the space station initiative. In addition, mission support is funded for fiscal year 2001 at $2.6 billion, instead of $2.58 billion, an increase of $24.7 million over the budget request.

For the National Science Foundation—and this is a very important area for the ranking member and me—the VA–HUD compromise funds NSF at $4.43 billion, a $529 million increase over the fiscal year 2000 enacted level and $146 million below the President's request. Funding highlights include $215 million for information technology research, $150 million for nanotechnology, and $65 million for plant genome research. Lastly, to assist smaller research institutions, $75 million was included for EPSCoR, a $20 million increase over last year's level, and $10 million for the Office of Innovation Partnerships.

We believe very strongly the scientific exploration in space needs to be spread broadly throughout the land to ensure we achieve inclusion of knowledgeable and dedicated scientists at institutions which may not traditionally have received funding in the past.

I consider NSF a priority account that needs additional funding in order to pace U.S. leadership in science and technology. Senator MIKULSKI and I have heard from leading scientists in this country who say that we are falling behind because we are not providing enough funding for the National Science Foundation. Medical doctors who depend directly upon the research work done at the National Institutes of Health have come to us and said that we must bring NSF funding up to NIH funding because so many of the health breakthroughs on which NIH is working depend upon the support the National Science Foundation provides.

Senator MIKULSKI and I have launched an effort to double the NSF budget. We have circulated a letter and have a significant number of colleagues who have joined with us. We will be back. We will be asking the full Senate to recognize a priority in the National Science Foundation and help get us on that path for the next year.

Finally, for the National Service Corporation, the VA–HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise appropriates $458 million, a $25 million increase over last year's level and $75 million below the budget request. Further, $30 million will be rescinded from excess funds in the National Service Trust.

The compromise also funds the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund at $118 million, a $23 million increase over last year's level and $7 million below the request.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I begin by thanking my colleague, Senator BOND, as well as our colleagues Senator BYRD and Senator STEVENS, for enabling us to move our bill forward. I particularly express my appreciation to Senator BOND for his collegial and civil way of including me in all discussions related to both the funding and policy that we developed in this bill. His courtesy and collegiality are very much appreciated.

I believe today the bill we present takes care of national needs and national interests. I am also confident that it will be signed by President Bill Clinton because it takes care of the day-to-day needs of the American people and at the same time looks forward to helping with the long-range needs of our country to remain competitive and on the cutting edge of science.

This bill has always been to me about five things: meeting our obligations to our veterans—promises made, promises kept; investing in our neighborhoods and our communities promoting self-help; creating real opportunities for people to move from welfare to work, to make sure that public housing is not a way of life but a way to a better life; and, of course, advancing science and technology, the new ideas that lead to the new jobs and the new products. It is also about protecting consumers from fraud and scams and communities from floods and disasters.

I believe we meet the goals in this bill, and we have done it in a fiscally prudent way. While I support the bill, the process has left much to be desired; again no fault of Chairman BOND but really the Senate has placed us in a very awkward situation.

The bill before the Senate today is a managers' substitute for the Senate bill. This is effectively our conference report. We did not have a conference report, though we met. We had kind of a chatroom where we would meet and try to iron out our differences. We did. It also involved OMB and the White House for consultation. We wanted to be sure both sides of the aisle would support the bill. We also wanted to be sure that the President would sign the bill. I believe we achieved this.

I say to my colleagues, it will be absolutely crucial, in order to move this bill with this unique parliamentary situation, to have no amendments to this legislation. My colleague from California, Senator BOXER, will offer two amendments. I am going to oppose them. I am going to oppose them both on procedural and substantive grounds. On procedure, if the Boxer amendments prevail, we will have enormous difficulty reconvening and working with the House to pass this bill. I just put that out.

Though we had an unofficial conference, I do believe we were able to move forward. Senator BOND has outlined in detail what we were able to do financially. I am so glad we worked together on a bipartisan basis, particularly in the area of veterans health care, joining hands, scrutinizing the budget and then the appropriations to make sure that veterans health care will be funded $1.4 billion over last year's level.

We also want to look ahead to be sure, while we are taking care of the men and women who bear the permanent wounds of war, we do the medical research, to find the cures for those things affecting our veterans population. This legislation provides $350 million for medical and prosthetic research, $30 million over last year. I have seen the work at my own University of Maryland and know that people will live longer, live better, and recover more quickly because of the funding for veterans health care research which also goes into the civilian population.

Also, we have added more money, $100 million, for State veterans homes. This is to provide long-term care and rehabilitation, which is very crucial. It means the Federal Government does not bear the sole burden, the State governments do not bear the sole burden, and, most of all, our veterans do not bear the sole burden. This unique Federal-State partnership will meet the long term and rehab needs of our veterans.

In addition, we have paid attention to the day-to-day needs of our constituents in Housing and Urban Development.

We want to make sure the people of the United States of America, who are out there working every day but who are also part of the working poor, have help with housing. We have been able to create 79,000 new vouchers to help working families find affordable housing. Unfortunately, we do not have enough housing to meet their needs.

Senator BOND led a very vigorous effort, which I supported, as did the authorizers on my side, to start a production program. We were derailed from that, but we did not want to be detoured from the bill, so we put that aside for another year. But we really call out to our authorizers, please, pass a production bill that will generate jobs in construction and meet the needs of our citizens.

Where I think we also worked very closely together is in helping the elderly and disabled. We have provided $780 million for housing for the elderly. It is more than last year. It also helps with assisted living and service coordinators to be able to help people keep as independent as long as they can, and to even develop new models of care.

At the same time, we looked out for those who are disabled and the special AIDS population. But we wanted to also remember not only the ''H,'' which is housing, we wanted the part called urban development. But we also know so many of our constituents live in rural areas. So we looked to see how we could increase the ability for local decisionmaking. That is why we funded community development block grant money and a program called HOME at much more than last year, because it goes right to cities, communities, and neighborhoods. Whether you are in a small rural town in Missouri or a big city such as Baltimore, community development block grant money and HOME will be of great help to you.

But we are about promoting self-help. That is why we continued to stay the course in providing funds for empowerment zones, again recognizing rural needs and also promoting home ownership. That is why we help the homeowners by extending the FHA downpayment simplification program for another 25 months. So we looked at how we could create opportunities at the local level.

Another area where we have strong bipartisan support within the committee and by its chairman and ranking member is to make sure that America continues to lead the way in science and technology. Therefore, I am so pleased that we are funding the National Space Agency at $14.3 billion, $250 million above the President's request. Quite frankly, I think NASA needs a lot more because they have been severely cut over the years, but fiscal prudence won. At the same time, we wanted to make sure that we were fiscally prudent, that our shuttle will be safe, our space station will be ready, and that we will move ahead on a vigorous space science program, such as the Living With A Star Program that will be done at Goddard Space Flight Center in my own community.

The National Science Foundation is also a very important, crucial program. The national science program, as Senator BOND has said, really does promote the basic research that goes into our country. It has been a star. It has been almost flat-lined for several years while we tried to balance the budget. This is why this year they will receive a $520 million increase over last year's enacted level.

One of the areas which we will be also advocating is a field called nanotechnology. You have heard of a nanosecond. It is because it is small. But let me tell you, the nanotechnology is the next generation past this infotechnology. You have seen the biotech revolution and the infotech revolution, but wait until the nanotech research gets underway. We are going to have new products, new materials. We are going to be able to have a supercomputer the size of my ring.

We will be able to take little pills, that will literally have diagnostic equipment, that will be able to go through our bodies, giving immediate responses to our physicians. This is going to be extraordinary. I am so pleased to be part of what we are doing.

At the same time, we want to call forth young people to continue the call for service. That is why I am so pleased we continued to stay the course on national service, with a modest increase.

One of the things we have done in national service is add something called E-Corps. As many of my colleagues know, I have been a strong proponent to make sure we do not have a digital divide in this country, meaning that young people have access to technology and access to know how to use technology. What we are creating in this legislation is having E-Corps volunteers to train and mentor not only the children but community leaders and librarians and others who will be teaching our children.

Last, but not at all least, we joined hands to protect the environment. We have increased funds for the environment, whether it is the clean water revolving fund, small watershed programs to restore rivers and streams, or having full funding of the Chesapeake Bay program. I believe the environment will be stronger and better protected by the resources that we have put in this bill.

Now, yes, there are riders. I don't go for riders. None of us go for riders. But we were in a very difficult situation with the bill. We took the language that was being proposed by the House, working with the office of OMB—the President's own—and the Council on Environmental Quality that advises the President on the environment. They were in the room to help us really identify the appropriate language that could meet the policy objectives of those who advocated it without shackling EPA or hurting communities.

I will say more about that during the debate. But I will tell you, regardless of how you feel about the riders, they were acceptable to the President's Council on Environmental Quality.

To be more specific, Mr. President, I am especially pleased that we were able to provide a significant increase in funding for veterans health care. We met the President's request of $20.2 billion and are $1.4 billion above last year's level. This will help us ensure that promises made to our veterans are promises kept, and that our veterans get the health care to which they are entitled.

We were also able to provide $351 million for medical and prosthetic research. This is $30 million above the budget request and last year's level.

The VA plays a major role in medical research for the special needs of our veterans, such as: geriatrics, Alzheimers, Parkinson's, and orthopedic research. Our veterans are not the only ones who benefit from this research—our entire nation does, especially as America's population continues to age.

We are also providing $100 million in funding for state veterans homes. This is $40 million above the budget request and $10 million above last year's level. The state homes serve as long-term care and rehabilitation facilities for our veterans.

We were also able to provide over $1.6 billion for the Veterans Benefits Administration, which will help them administer benefits to our veterans more quickly.

I am also very pleased that we were able to include a new title in our bill that will provide benefits to Filipino veterans who fought alongside Americans in World War II and who live in the United States.

Finally, our Filipino-American veterans will receive equal benefits for equal valor.

We were able to take care of America's working families in this bill as well, by funding housing programs that millions of Americans depend upon.

Our bill provides almost $13 billion to review all expiring section 8 housing vouchers. And we have included $453 million in funding to issue 79,000 new vouchers, to help working families find affordable housing. This is 19,000 more than we were able to fund last year.

We included provisions to make it easier for public housing authorities to provide more project-based assistance to increase the stock of affordable housing, instead of just vouchers.

As many of my colleagues were aware, a production bill was under serious consideration during the conference. It was a modified version of Senator BOND's housing production bill that was included in the original Senate bill. Unfortunately, we were forced to drop this provision due to objections from the authorizing committee, but I hope we will re-visit the issue next year. We were also able to maintain level funding for other critical core HUD programs.

We provided $779 million for housing for the elderly, which meets the President's request and is $69 million more than last year. This includes funds for assisted living and service coordinators. We also provided $217 million in funding for housing for disabled Americans, which is $7 million above the President's request and $23 million over last year's level.

Homeless assistance grants received a $5 million increase and are funded at $1.025 billion.

We were able to provide both the Community Development Block Grant Program and the HOME Program with $150 million increases. CDBG is funded at more than $5 billion, and HOME is funded at $1.8 billion. The CDBG Program is one of the most important programs for rebuilding our cities and neighborhoods.

We also provided increased funding to help our neighborhoods and communities through the HOPE VI Program, which helps demolish and then revitalize distressed public housing sites. This year, we provided $575 million for HOPE VI, the same as last year's level.

I am pleased that we were able to provide funding for other programs that help America's communities. We increased funding for empowerment zones by providing $90 million in this bill and increased funding for CDFI—Community Development Financial Institutions Fund.

Funding for empowerment zones will help designated areas with economic development and social services. Community involvement in the empowerment zone initiative will prove especially beneficial.

We also help homeowners by extending the FHA downpayment simplification program for 25 months.

As I said, I am extremely pleased that our bill fully funds NASA at $14.3 billion, an increase of $250 million. This funding exceeds the President's request for NASA. All of NASA's core programs are fully funded and all of our centers are fully funded, including the Goddard Space Flight Center in my home State of Maryland.

The VA–HUD bill includes $1.5 billion for Earth science, more than $2.5 billion for space science, including funding for the Mars polar lander, and $20 million to start an exciting new program called ''Living With A Star,'' which will study the relationship between the sun and the Earth and its impact on our environment and our climate. It will help us predict and protect against solar storms that can disrupt our energy and communications systems.

I am especially proud that this program will be headquartered at the Goddard Space Flight Center.

NASA science programs are critical not just for science, but for technology. With NASA technology, we can create new jobs and literally save lives, while developing a greater understanding of how our universe works.

I fought hard to make sure that this funding was included in this manager's amendment.

And, of course, in the area of human space flight, we fully fund the space shuttle upgrades, space station construction, and fully fund the new ''Space Launch Initiative'' to find new, low-cost launch vehicles that will reduce the cost of getting to space.

The VA–HUD manager's amendment also increases funding for the Corporation for National Service.

The House bill cut funding for the Corporation for National Service, but I made it a priority to restore it in the Senate bill and in conference.

The corporation is funded at $458 million, a $25 million increase over last year's level.

The Corporation for National Service has enrolled over 100,000 members and participants across the country, in a wide array of community service programs, including: AmeriCorps, a national service program that helps communities, learn and serve America, which supports service-learning programs across the country by providing funding and training, and the National Senior Service Corps, which helps seniors get involved in their communities.

As many of my colleagues know, I have been very concerned about the digital divide in this country.

I introduced legislation called the Digital Empowerment Act to provide a one-stop shop and increased funds to local communities trying to cross the digital divide.

I am pleased that this bill contains $25 million within the national service budget to create an ''E-Corps'' of volunteers who will bring technology skills to people who have been left out or left behind in the digital economy, by training and mentoring children, teachers, and non-profit and community center staff on how to use computers and information technology.

With regard to the EPA, our bill provides $7.8 billion in funding, plus an additional $138 million for the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, ATSDR, and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, NIEHS.

All together, this is an increase of $400 million over last year's level, and $686 million more than the President's request.

We increased funding by $246 million for EPA's core environmental programs, including a $38 million increase for nonpoint source pollution control grants, and a $20 million increase for the climate change technology initiative.

We also provided an additional $550 million for the clean water state revolving fund. Taking care of the infrastructure needs of local communities has always been a priority for the VA–HUD Subcommittee.

We have fully funded the Chesapeake Bay, Great Lakes, and Long Island Sound Programs, and provided $1.25 million for the Chesapeake by small watershed grants program, a $500,000 increase over last year's level, that will help our small communities around the Bay watershed prevent runoff and pollution.

Legislatively, the bill includes the FY 1999 bill and report language regarding the Kyoto Protocol, provides up to an additional 6 months for finalizing the arsenic-in-drinking-water rule, and includes a weaker version of the Collins-Linder provision on ozone.

There is no language on the diesel sulfur rule. However modified report language has been included regarding dredging and invasive remediation.

I am a strong supporter of FEMA, and am proud that we have provided $937 million in funding for FEMA, plus an additional $1.3 billion in emergency disaster relief funding.

The National Science Foundation is funded at $4.43 billion, a $529 million increase over last year's enacted level, and one of the largest increases in NSF's history.

This funding level will keep America at the forefront of science and technology into the next century in infotech and bio-tech, and is an important step towards holding onto America's science and technology base.

This is a downpayment toward our goal of doubling the NSF budget over the next five years.

I am especially pleased that we were able to provide $150 million for the new nanotechnology initiative. We were also able to provide $215 million for information technology, and well-deserved increases for several of NSF's education and human resources accounts. These include a $10 million increase over the budget request for informal science education, nearly $20 million for graduate fellowships in K–12 education, and over $55 million for graduate research fellowships.

Mr. President, I once again appreciate the cooperation of my colleagues throughout this process. While I regret that this year's process was highly irregular, I am pleased that we worked together to bring a conference agreement to the Senate floor. I believe this year's VA/HUD bill is good for our country, our veterans, and our communities.

Mr. President, before I conclude my statement, I really want to thank Senator BOND and his staff, Jon Kamarck, Cheh Kim, and Carolyn Apostolou, for all the work they did, and also my own staff, Paul Carliner, Sean Smith, and Alexa Mitrakos, for helping us really move this bill, and, most of all, to move America forward.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4307

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, on behalf of the Democratic leader, I call up amendment No. 4307 and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI], for Mr. DASCHLE, proposes an amendment numbered 4307.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I yield back all time on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I heard the number, but what is the bill? What does it do?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the language of S. 2900 as reported.

Mr. BYRD. Is this the language of the Senate, of the bill that was reported from the committee?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BYRD. So it is the Senate-reported bill and carries the Senate title?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the language, but it doesn't carry the title.

Mr. BYRD. It carries the Senate number.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold, I just asked unanimous consent that this amendment be called up and yielded back time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The Senator from Arizona does have the time. He also has time on the bill.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I know the Senator has time.

Mr. MCCAIN. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Maryland until she completes this business.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Senator from Arizona.

Does Senator BYRD intend to speak?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I do not intend to take the time of the Senate at this point.

I thank the distinguished Senator from Arizona.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. President, I urge that the amendment be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona wish to speak before the amendment is adopted?

Mr. MCCAIN. Since the Senator from Maryland had already embarked on this parliamentary movement, I will yield until that is completed and then speak after that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 4307.

The amendment (No. 4307) was agreed to.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia asks for a division. As many as are in favor of the amendment will rise and remain standing until they are counted. (After a pause.) Those opposed will rise and stand until counted.

On a division, the amendment was rejected.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I thank both Senator BOND and Senator MIKULSKI for their hard work on this important legislation which provides federal funding for the Departments of Veterans Affairs (VA) and Housing and Urban Development (HUD), and Independent Agencies. Once again, though, I find myself in the unpleasant position of commenting on the process of bringing these spending bills to the Senate floor and on the spending items that have not been appropriately reviewed.

This task is even more necessary for this bill because of the truly unique process by which it arrived on the Senate floor—a process that increasingly empowers appropriators while disenfranchising many of my colleagues.

Let me comment on the process that has brought us to the point in time where we are about to vote on final passage of this bill. First, let me explain how the appropriations process is supposed to work. In the normal process of passing appropriations bills, an appropriations bill is first passed in the House of Representatives, then the Senate passes its own version. A conference committee is formed to iron out the differences between the two different bills, resulting in a conference report. Then the conference report is passed by both the House and the Senate, and sent to the President for his signature in order to become law. That sounds fairly straightforward.

In the case of this bill, we have decided to substitute the normal process of considering appropriations bills for a highly questionable approach to passing legislation.

The process we have decided to undertake avoids substantive debate on the merits of this bill and to the larger question of whether we are spending taxpayers' hard-earned money wisely and responsibly. Just because it is late in the game does not give us the right to avoid the normal process of appropriations. The Senate is being asked to pass the bill despite the fact that there was only one copy made available to each side and many Senators did not have adequate time to review its contents. How can we make sound policy and budget decisions with this type of budget steam-rolling?

Let me be clear about what is occurring today. This VA–HUD bill that we are voting on is a so-called ''composite compromise,'' cloaking the reality that we would normally be calling a VA–HUD conference report. The Appropriations leadership intends to take up the House-passed version of this year's VA–HUD Appropriations bill, substitute a Senate managers' amendment written by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees which for all practical purposes is a conference agreement—a conference agreement, not open to public inspection, not done through the normal legislative process, such as appointing conferees or allowing full disclosure of the issues being discussed. This process will allow the Appropriators to simply insert a ''Committee Statement'' into the record outlining certain questionable spending priorities that will ultimately be paid for by the American taxpayer. This ''composite compromise'' will then go to the House so that they can quickly pass the amended bill and then send it to the President for his signature.

Is that the way to pass legislation? As legislators, we have been entrusted by the American taxpayers to represent the fiscal interests of them and their nation. The American taxpayer is counting on us to use their hard-earned money wisely and here we are, manipulating the budget process so that we can say we did something and go back home to campaign.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, the budget process games began long before this bill.

When the conference report on Legislative Branch Appropriations bill first came to the floor for debate and a vote last month, the appropriators decided to insert the Treasury and General Government appropriations bill into it. Rather than having the Treasury and General Government Appropriations bill considered separately as it is usually done, to be debated on its own merits, the appropriators' actions decided to circumvent the normal budget process. This so-called ''minibus'' was soundly defeated and rightly so.

When the conference report on the Transportation Appropriations bill was brought to the Senate floor for a vote, the appropriators did not even provide a copy of the report for others to read and examine before voting on the nearly $60 billion bill. The transportation bill itself was only two pages long with the barest of detail—with actual text of the report to come later.

And yet, the appropriators were expecting Senators to vote yes on legislation that could not even be read, deciphered, and debated intelligently? How is this type of action accountable to all the hard-working Americans who demand that all their tax dollars are wisely spent? I worry that these budget games we play serve to reinforce their cynicism about politics.

Mr. President, the budget process can be summed up simply: no debate, no deliberation, and very few votes. Mr. President, this is no way to run the United States Senate.

To date, only two of the thirteen appropriations bills have become law. Of those remaining, three bills—Labor, HHS, Education, VA–HUD, and Treasury-Postal—were never brought to the Senate floor for debate as part of a deliberate strategy to prevent votes on any controversial amendments that my colleagues may have offered. Extraordinary measures are being employed to drive these spending bills through Congress. The only winners in such an arrangement are the appropriators. The rest of us, including our constituents, are, for all intents and purposes, shut-out of the process.

Mr. President, by adopting this budget strategy, we do a disservice to our constituents by not squarely facing tough issues, whether it's school choice, gun control, campaign finance, minimum wage, gambling, or HMO reform, and engaging in debate—even in the heat of an election season where both sides of the aisle are maneuvering for maximum political advantage. These are important issues. They deserve to be debated and each deserves an up or down vote.

Moreover, we have an obligation to ensure that Congress spends the taxpayer's hard-earned dollars prudently to protect the projected budget surpluses. The American public cannot understand why we engage in a process that continues to spend huge amounts of money without adequately balancing this spending against our nation's most urgent present and future needs. Spending from this budget process has been on automatic pilot. We have already exceeded the budget caps by over $30 billion, consuming, so far, about one-third of the on-budget surplus for FY2001—and we have yet to pass all of the appropriations bills. This byzantine budget process precludes serious discussion about how our projected budget surpluses should be devoted to national priorities such as saving Social Security, providing much needed tax relief, paying down the national debt, or addressing other major priorities.

But more is lost beyond the throttling of debate, the profligate spending of taxpayers' dollars, and the broken budget process.

Since 1960, the percentage of voters participating in the general presidential election has dropped nearly 15 percent, reaching below the 50 percent mark four years ago. Today, voter apathy, especially among the youth of America, is widespread. Even more disheartening is the fact that too many Americans, when asked to rank the people in the different fields from highest regard to lowest, consistently rank our profession near the bottom. Poll after poll continues to show an undercurrent of cynicism toward our governmental institution. As I previously mentioned, budget games like the one we have witnessed in the last few weeks contribute to this cynicism.

We can still seize the reform mantle and learn from this budget morass when the doors of the new Congress open in January. We need new reforms in the way we address the budget process. Perhaps we should even consider the radical step of abolishing the Appropriations Committees. Too many programs are without authorization. We also should study whether the authorizers should also be the appropriators, to build more accountability into the process.

There are many other reforms we should consider next Congress if we are to spare Congress' reputation from further damage and begin to repair the people's respect for this Government.

The Washington Post yesterday had an article by Dan Morgan, ''As Last Bills Leave Station, Lobbyists Grab Tickets.''

With only a handful of bills remaining to be signed into law before Congress adjourns, well tailored business lobbyists for elite corporations have descended on Capitol Hill to plead for dozens of special provisions in a Washington ritual with billions of dollars at stake.

Mr. President, on October 6, the Senate passed the conference report on the bill H.R. 4475, which funds the Department of Transportation and related agencies. At the time, I included for the RECORD a list of examples of pork barrel spending contained in the Transportation conference report. But because the list of pork barrel was so long and so extensive I was unable to publish the full list in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. For those who wish to view the list in its entirety, please visit my website: http://mccain.senate.gov and click the ''pork barreling'' logo at the bottom.

We are also legislating on these appropriations bills. Huge and vital interests are being legislated in smoke-filled rooms in the darkest corners of this Capitol. These lobbyists are out there and they are doing damage to the national interest by getting their special interests represented in appropriations bills which have never been debated or discussed on the floor of either House.

That is wrong, Mr. President. Nobody knows how much overspending there will be. Some say as much as $45 or $60 billion.

There is an article today, I believe in the USA Today, that shows we are spending the surplus. We are all talking about how we will use the surplus. Yet we are spending it now. We are spending the surplus. We are putting into law entitlement programs that will spend even more.

There are some very interesting CBO studies and others by outside watchdog organizations that indicate this much ballyhooed and very optimistic view of our budget surplus is being eroded as we speak by this appropriations process.

I urge my colleagues to look at these bills, to look at the spending in it, to look at the legislation that is going on. We are abrogating our responsibilities to the taxpayers by voting on bills that we have neither seen nor read.

I hope we can make some sense out of this. The train wreck that is about to occur is the worst that I have seen in all the years I have been in the Congress. I don't think it helps us in the eyes of the American citizens, to say the least.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, with respect to this bill, it is a very frustrating exercise, as Senator MCCAIN said. One of the problems is we have a practice around here of combining bills in such a way that while you want to vote for part of it, you want to oppose the other part. It makes it very difficult to make your decision about whether you will vote yes or no.

I wrote to the Appropriations Committee chairman when I first came to the Senate and asked to ''de-attach'' some of the bills. The bill before the Senate is the VA-HUD bill. Everybody wants to vote for the veterans programs, and because of the way those programs are structured this year, I support those programs. I want to be able to vote for those programs.

As usual, when it is combined with the runaway spending in the HUD part of the bill, it makes it impossible to do so. It is exacerbated this year as a result of the tactics of the minority. We have not been able to bring bills to the floor, and we have not been able to send them to the President. The result is we have had to combine a bunch of bills at the end of the session, and we find we have to combine the energy and water appropriations bill with the VA-HUD appropriations bill.

The problem, as bad as it is in the first instance, is exacerbated. I voted for the energy and water appropriations bill. While there are programs in that bill that I don't support overall, it was an important and good bill. I supported what Senator DOMENICI was trying to do in that legislation, by and large, so I voted for it.

The question is what to do now in a bill, the VA-HUD bill, which is increasing at a huge rate, and which now has the energy and water bill attached to it. I can't pick and choose. I can't take the veterans part out and say I support that, but I don't support the rest of it. I can't take the energy and water part out and say, I support it but I don't support the rest of it. It is not a good way to legislate, as Senator MCCAIN said.

I point out, there are good things in the bill. Veterans health care is increased by 6.5 percent, from $19 billion to $20.3 billion. The account for prosthetic and medical research, a relatively small account but very important, will receive a modest increase. There are some important projects in the NASA account that will receive necessary funding. I support that part of the bill.

How can I support a bill which has exploded funding in the HUD part of it? The VA part of this bill increases spending by 7 percent. Now, that is an important and significant increase. But the social programs under the HUD part of this bill have increased by 18 percent.

I have heard it said when we add up all the spending bills this year, it will be more than any other year in modern history, including the Great Society. We are increasing these social programs in the HUD part of the bill by 18 percent. The earmarking has exploded. We have not seen the final list, but we know it is up to at least $292 million, up from $123 million in the committee-passed bill, and $240 million from last year. That is too much. We have funding in here for everything from renovating theaters to restoring carousels. This is not something the Federal Government needs to be doing.

Finally, there is language in the Senate report that suggests that some of my colleagues are wavering from a commitment that has been made by the Senate and the House to ensure that the allocation of veterans health care funds reflects the reality of where veterans live.

Four years ago, under the leadership of Senator MCCAIN, Congress implemented the Veterans Equitable Resource Allocation System. This was done at the request of the Veterans' Administration. Up until then, the formula that VA used did not take into account shifts in population that are relevant in assessing where resources are needed. In particular, we found in Arizona a lot of so-called snow birds, those great folks who live in the cold States and come down to visit Arizona in the wintertime because it is warmer in Arizona. We didn't have the facilities to take care of all of those people because the dollars associated with their care were allocated to the Northeast primarily, or to the North.

The Senate, therefore, voted overwhelmingly to implement this new system that let the dollars follow the patients, so to speak. That vote was 79–18. Yet some who benefited from the earlier faulty formula complained, and as a result we find language in here that will require a study. The money for this study is going to have to come from the health care that otherwise would be provided to veterans.

I don't believe the way the language in the report is written the investigators are going to have a fair approach to this because of the one-sided list of items they are to explore.

I want to be able to support the veterans part of this bill. I want to support the energy and water component of this legislation, but it will be very difficult considering the explosive growth in the HUD part of the bill.

I commend the chairman of the committee, Senator BOND, and Senator MIKULSKI. They have an impossible task. Everybody comes to them with requests. The bottom line is we have to draw the line at some point. It seems to me this is the point at which the American taxpayers deserve to be represented.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized to offer an amendment.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be allowed 2 minutes of additional time to talk about the situation in the Middle East.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank Senators MIKULSKI and BOND for their graciousness. I know they are anxious to move their bill forward. I also thank them and Senator DASCHLE and Senator LOTT for receiving an agreement with me, whereby I could offer these very important amendments to this appropriations bill.

(The remarks of Mrs. BOXER are located in today's RECORD under ''Morning Business.'')

AMENDMENT NO. 4308

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER), for herself and Mr. BAUCUS, proposes an amendment numbered 4308.

(Purpose: To strike the riders that delay the Environmental Protection Agency's new standard on arsenic in drinking water and that prohibit the designation of nonattainment areas under the Clear Air Act)

On page 103, strike the first three lines.
On page 138, strike section 427.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, may I ask if we can have a copy of the amendment?

Mrs. BOXER. Certainly. I say to my friend that it is a very simple amendment. It strikes two riders. We will send it over to the Senator at this time. It doesn't have any language. It simply strikes two of the riders.

Mr. President, will you please tell me when I have 5 minutes remaining of my time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, my amendment strikes two egregious anti-environment riders that have been attached to this appropriations bill. These riders are opposed by 21 environmental groups.

There is a letter on everyone's desk from the League of Conservation Voters. They consider this to be extremely important.

We also have another letter that came in this morning signed by the most respected environmental groups in the country supporting both of my amendments.

We will try to put these on the desks. I will go through the groups in a moment.

Twenty-one environmental groups oppose these riders. They say they believe these riders would ''jeopardize public health or the environment.''

The first rider deals with arsenic in drinking water. Let me take a moment to explain why I think this rider should be stricken. In the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendment of 1996, which the Senate approved unanimously, we told the EPA to update its drinking water standard for arsenic by January 1, 2001. We included this provision in the law because we learned from public health experts that the current standard for arsenic is severely dangerous and outdated. The standard was set in 1975, but it was based on public health data from 1942.

What do scientists and health experts say about the dangers of arsenic? According to a National Academy of Sciences report, arsenic in water is known to cause cancer of the lungs, skin, and bladder. The National Academy of Sciences study and other studies also found that arsenic in drinking water may cause kidney and liver cancer. Arsenic is also known to cause other severe problems, including toxicity to the central and peripheral nervous system, hypertension, cardiovascular disease, skin lesions, and could cause birth defects and reproductive problems.

Here is the national shocker. The National Academy of Sciences estimates that 1 in every 100 people who drink water containing arsenic at the current standard may well develop cancer caused by arsenic. This is a cancer risk that is 10,000 times higher than the cancer risk EPA allows in food.

The National Resources Defense Council analyzed EPA's base data, and they looked at 25 States serving approximately 100 million Americans. They found that approximately half of those Americans are drinking water with arsenic levels that could cause 1 in 100 of them to develop cancer.

The arsenic levels in those systems meet the EPA's outdated 50 parts per billion standard. As the NAS has said, the outdated standard ''does not achieve EPA's goal for public health protection and requires revision as promptly as possible.''

Let me repeat that. This is science. They base these rules on science. The sciences say set the standard at a lower level as soon as possible.

In this rider we push the date back. It is a delay. I think it is a dangerous delay.

The EPA has been working on this new standard for a long time. They have held numerous public hearings. Actually, they have been working on updating the standard since the early 1980s.

It is time to do this. The EPA was told by Congress to move forward by January 1, and now this rider was slipped into this bill.

I know my friends believed at the time that these riders were not that much of a problem. Whoever told them that—and I was not in the room—I believe was wrong. They are proven wrong by science. They have been proven wrong.

Call me old fashioned, but I think when you play around with the arsenic levels in drinking water, it deserves to have the light of day. It should not be attached to some rider. I am the ranking member on the subcommittee on the Environment. My chairman of the full committee is here, Senator BAUCUS. We are working hard to make sure that drinking water is safe. Yet we push back the date. That is not the right thing to do.

I appreciate my friends giving me 15 minutes of time, and I am going to give Senator BAUCUS about 5 minutes of that time when he is ready. I have saved 5 minutes.

This is no way to legislate on an issue such as arsenic.

In closing, before I yield my time to my friend, I want to talk about the other part of this amendment which deals with another egregious rider that has to do with clean air. The clean air rider is very important. It essentially would prohibit EPA from designating new regions of the country as being in violation of smog standards. In other words, it is a gag order on EPA, telling them they cannot, in fact, tell communities their air is dirty. This is a fact.

I do not understand, again, why we would be doing this. There is a court case pending on the power of the EPA. It specifically says in that court case that EPA has the right to designate these areas and to tell people in these areas they are not meeting the smog standard. Administrator Browner made a very strong comment about this rider in the past.

I ask how much time I have remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8 minutes remaining.

Mrs. BOXER. What I would like to do at this time is yield 3 minutes to my friend, Senator BAUCUS, and 2 minutes following to my friend, Senator LAUTENBERG. Then I would have 3 minutes remaining, which I would retain.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator would have 3 minutes.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank my good friend from Maryland, Senator MIKULSKI—I worked with her on this bill—and also Senator BOXER for offering these amendments.

I strongly support Senator BOXER in her efforts to delete these provisions. Not only do they intrude upon the jurisdiction of the Environment and Public Works Committee, they are clearly legislation. Our committee was not consulted. The Appropriations Committee is now writing legislative language in an appropriations bill. It also is very unsound public policy.

One of these riders, the so-called Linder-Collins provision, is really an attack on the public's right to know. The provision prohibits the Environmental Protection Agency from identifying those areas which do not the meet the 8-hour standard ozone pollution provision until next June. In other words, even if the EPA knew an area had unhealthy air, it could not tell citizens or their government.

Since my time is so limited, I will not speak more on that issue. Senator BOXER will, and I believe other Senators will, too.

I also want to speak a bit on the other one, and that is the arsenic provision. The other rider postpones EPA's final rules on arsenic standards for drinking water for 6 months. This is very important. This is yet another unhealthy delay that could expose Americans to unnecessary danger. Why do I say that? First, arsenic is a poison. We now know it is also a carcinogen. So it is an especially serious contaminant in drinking water.

Get this. The current standard for arsenic was written in 1942, before we knew that arsenic causes cancer. Then, in 1996, Congress completed a comprehensive rewrite of the Safe Drinking Water Act. We put some common sense into the act, some risk assessment, some additional funding for the States. We also put in place a plan to resolve the remaining scientific issues.

As a result of the scientific study done by the National Academy of Sciences, we learned that arsenic is even more deadly than previously thought. NAS found:

There is sufficient evidence from human epidemiological studies . . . that chronic ingestion of inorganic arsenic causes bladder and lung cancer as well as skin cancer.

The study also said the current standard should be revised downward ''as promptly as possible.''

Furthermore, when the Environment and Public Works Committee had a hearing on the matter, in response to a question, Dr. Michael Cossett, a member of the NAS group who studied the arsenic issue, said:

Our committee specifically in its conclusions felt that the standards should be lowered as promptly as possible.

He went on to say that the current standard certainly was not protective of public health.

Yet we have this anti-environmental rider. It is further delay in protecting the American public from better arsenic standards. I cannot understand it. I think it is very bad public policy, and I strongly urge Congress to delete these provisions which, if not deleted, are going to cause serious harm to the American public.

Mr. President, earlier today we had a discussion about the arsenic rider. I want to assure Mr. BOND and Ms. MIKULSKI that although the minority committee staff was notified about the intention to pursue this rider, they objected to its inclusion. I just want to be sure the RECORD accurately reflects what occurred.

I yield the remainder of my time to my friend from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, time is short. I will try to get to the point very quickly.

I support Senator BOXER's amendments to this VA–HUD appropriations bill. I want to point out one thing. Under the leadership of Senators BOND and MIKULSKI, the bill our subcommittee reported last month was far better than the one before us today.

What we see today with these riders that have come over from the House side of the Capitol is delayed corporate responsibility. That is what these amendments ought to be called: Just take care of the corporations and forget about our obligation to our people to protect us from contaminated, polluted environments.

One of these amendments is there because it is strongly supported by General Electric, an extremely powerful corporation. I like General Electric. I know a lot of the people who run that company. But they have, according to the League of Conservation Voters, polluted 200 miles of New York and Connecticut coastline with a million pounds of PCBs. Their slogan is: ''Bring Good Things To Life.'' We have heard it. I would rather have them say: ''Bring Good Life To Things,'' like fish and birds and people. That is where they ought to be.

I commend Senator BOXER for bringing up this amendment. I hope our colleagues are going to support it.

This is a good bill, other than this part. Again, I commend Senators BOND and MIKULSKI for a very tough job well done. But we ought not let the corporations escape getting on with their responsibilities.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I would like to retain my 3 minutes if I might, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri now has 15 minutes.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Very briefly, this bill includes the provision that provides up to an additional 6 months for EPA to finalize the arsenic in drinking water rule. They can finalize it before June 2001 but will not be held to the statutory deadline. And EPA does not anticipate finalizing the rule until April or May, despite the act's requirements. The practical effect of knocking this out would be to force EPA to spend its resources fighting in court to do what it cannot otherwise do, and that is take the time necessary to do the job right.

The Safe Drinking Water Act called for a full year of comment. The full year would be up June 2001. The most conservative estimates of compliance, including EPA's, for the smallest communities show water rates increasing by hundreds of dollars per family.

The State of Utah Department of Environmental Quality says the rate increase to remove arsenic from the Heartland Mobile Home Park would be $230 per month per customer. Even the EPA said it would be $70 per month per customer.

Do you know what is going to happen? No system. They are going to be off the system. There will be no water. They will get it from sources that are not protected at all.

This is a very important rule that needs to be worked out scientifically. EPA has not identified the specific level in drinking water below which there is not a significant risk to public health.

On the ozone nonattainment designation, it seems to me completely unreasonable that EPA should be making designations when that standard is before the U.S. Supreme Court. Why do the EPA and the State expend resources giving communities a black eye by designating them nonattainment areas when the entire ability to designate may be repealed by the Supreme Court? The EPA would be allowed, under this legislation, to move forward when the Supreme Court acts but no later than June 2001.

Do not blacklist communities before there is a statutory authorization. The National Association of Counties has said this process will brand hundreds of new counties across the country clean air violators resulting in lost jobs and lost economic opportunity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLARD). The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. BOND. I yield 5 minutes to my distinguished colleague from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I oppose the Boxer amendment on arsenic in drinking water, and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

This amendment is not needed, and its adoption will effectively kill this bill.

Let me be clear about what we did.

In our negotiations with the House, bill language was added that allows EPA to take until June 22, 2001 to issue a final rule setting the allowable level of arsenic in drinking water.

EPA remains free to issue the final rule anytime up to June 22, 2001.

This provision was carefully negotiated with the administration.

It does not prevent, prohibit or restrict EPA's ability to issue a final rule for arsenic in drinking water.

Since EPA missed the deadline for proposal of this rule, this extension from the current January 1, 2001 statutory deadline would allow EPA the same length of time—12 months—to consider public comments as contemplated in the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996.

This provision is fully consistent with the Safe Drinking Water Act.

Our provision maintains all of the protections for public health and safety.

If it didn't, I would not support it.

This is not a debate about arsenic in drinking water.

We all agree that arsenic in drinking water should be reduced or eliminated consistent with science based public health standards.

This is a disagreement over process, not substance.

Let me be very clear, the language contained in the VA/HUD bill is permissive and does not prevent EPA from issuing the regulation earlier than June 2001 if EPA is prepared to promulgate the final rule.

Also, public interest groups would still be allowed to file suit next June if EPA misses the revised deadline—just as they can now.

No one's rights or privileges have been taken away.

Our provision on arsenic simply moves a date. It poses no threat to public health or the environment.

It is fully consistent with the Safe Drinking Water Act, and it maintains EPA's full authority.

I point out to my colleagues that this bill contains $825 million for the safe drinking water revolving loan program.

This is EPA's main program to upgrade and improve our Nation's public drinking water systems.

Overall, our bill provides $3.6 billion for all clean water programs—a $200 million increase over last year and, over $700 million more than the President's request.

If the Boxer amendment is adopted, it will kill this bill and jeopardize the funding increases for our clean water programs.

If this bill dies, there is no guarantee that we will be able to maintain our current level of funding.

The administration supports our provision, and I urge my colleagues to vote against the Boxer amendment.

Mr. President, I oppose the Boxer amendment on ozone nonattainment and I urge my colleagues to oppose it.

This amendment is not needed and should it pass, it will effectively kill this bill.

The administration supports the provision in our bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it and vote against this amendment.

Let me be clear about what the ozone nonattainment provision in the VA/HUD bill does.

The provision prohibits EPA from issuing new ozone nonattainment designations until June 15, 2001, or until the Supreme Court issues its ruling in this matter, whichever comes first.

The administration was involved in the negotiations over this provision and they support it.

I believe this provision is a matter of common sense. It makes no sense to issue new nonattainment designations, just to have the Supreme Court invalidate them.

That will do nothing more than confuse State and local governments and undercut EPA's authority and credibility.

I want to point out to my colleagues, that during our negotiations with the House, the language was modified to allow final designations to occur as soon as the U.S. Supreme Court rules on the ozone standard case, rather than waiting until June 15, 2001.

Depending on the Supreme Court's decision, this would potentially allow EPA to proceed with final designations several months earlier than under the original language.

This provision does not weaken the Clean Air Act, it does not threaten the Clean Air Act and, it does not undercut EPA's authority.

Our bill language does not preclude EPA from taking preparatory steps leading up to the final designations.

After the final designations are made, States have 3 years before they have to begin implementing their plans for achieving the new standard.

The additional time provided by this bill language, being tied to the Supreme Court process, minimizes any delay in moving forward with any clean air plans and acknowledges the uncertainty created by the ongoing litigation.

Our bill provides $209 million for State air assistance grants to help states meet Clean Air Act requirements.

If the Boxer amendment passes, the VA/HUD bill will be killed and funding levels that it contains will be in jeopardy.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the Boxer amendment and support the administration.

Mr. President, in summary, I oppose the Boxer amendments both on the issue of substance and procedure. No. 1, everybody complains about the process. Nobody complained about it more than BOND and MIKULSKI. We wanted to bring our bill to the floor, have a vote by the Senate, and go into a conference that was open and public. We were denied that.

Because we were worried about the homeless, because we were worried about veterans, because we were worried about the environment, we pressed on in a quasi-conference. BOND and MIKULSKI were united to delete the riders, but we lost. The House would not yield.

We then went to a fallback position because, again, we are worried about the homeless; we are worried about the veterans; we are worried about the environment and the National Service Corps, and all that is in this bill. When we negotiated, I invited into the room OMB—with the concurrence of my Republican colleagues—who brought in the Council on Environmental Quality. The President's chief adviser on the environment was on the phone with the legal counsel at EPA. We did not make this up.

I thought I was proceeding on safe grounds because of the advice I received from the Council on Environmental Quality. I say to my Democratic colleagues: Do you believe in a letter from 21 groups or do you believe in President Clinton's Council on Environmental Quality? The choice is there. Do you believe the advocacy analysis or President Clinton's analysis? I go with President Clinton because I believe there is a track record on protecting the environment.

What about arsenic? It does not shackle anybody. It delays it by 6 months. Under the current law, EPA must give the regs by January 2001. They can issue them at any time up to 2001. EPA retains its authority and its flexibility to issue the regs any time, but it removes the old deadline. Why do we do this? So small rural communities can have time to get EPA information, cost, and other things they are going to need to comply.

Let's go to the ozone. That court case is before the Supreme Court of the United States. It is not going through some small court. It is in the Supreme Court. They are going to decide it in June. The Court term ends in June. This language will no longer apply once the Court issues its ruling. Also, the language becomes moot in 2001.

Why was this language added? To prevent EPA from making new attainment designations and then have the Supreme Court invalidate them. We are saying, let the Court act and move on. At the same time, EPA is allowed to go on with its own planning process. Once the Supreme Court acts, EPA is good to go.

We are not shackling anybody. We are not stymying anybody. I believe in each of these instances there is flexibility to meet the compelling needs of public health. If they did not have that, I would not have supported it. If President Clinton's own team did not tell me it was OK to do this, I would not have done it.

I stand on the advice we were given, and I believe the advice is accurate, responsible, and reliable. I urge my colleagues to defeat the Boxer amendments.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Maryland. I yield 3 minutes to the junior Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I thank Senator BOND and Senator MIKULSKI. As chairman of the Fisheries, Wildlife and Drinking Water Subcommittee, I rise today in strong opposition to the amendment to prevent the EPA from having the time necessary to produce a proper arsenic drinking water rule based on the available science. It is important to note that in 1996 this Congress directed the EPA to adopt a specific schedule to propose an arsenic standard to allow for a full year of public review and comments by scientific experts and then to implement a rule after taking into consideration those comments.

That is what is at stake. It is important to follow up on what Senators BOND and MIKULSKI have said about what this amendment really does. It has been characterized as stopping the EPA from protecting us from arsenic problems.

The reality is that all this amendment does is give the EPA up to an additional 6 months to complete its work. In fact, I am quite surprised to see this amendment today because the administration itself has said they do not have the ability to meet the statutory deadline, and they need this extra time to make sure the rule they adopt is scientifically justified and does not cause the immense damage to local small communities in rural areas that is of concern.

We have held hearings on this issue in our subcommittee, and witness after witness has raised questions about whether the science is there to justify the direction in which the EPA is going. The EPA has acknowledged these questions. The EPA has said it needs time to further review the science, and the EPA has said it will take that time if we give it to them to do a good rule that will protect the country and yet not do damage to small communities in rural areas.

It is also important to note that this amendment does not stop the EPA from acting at any time the EPA deems it is ready to act. If the EPA says it has the process finalized, it has the science understood and is ready to proceed, they can proceed tomorrow, they can proceed in November or December or January when the statutory deadline exists. Again, the EPA has told us they are not ready to do so and that they need this extra time. We believe they need the extra time because of the impending damage that could be caused to local communities across this country.

As Senator BOND has said, there are communities and individual families who will see their water bills go up by hundreds of dollars. There are communities that probably will have to go off their systems because of this. The potential damage if we do not give the EPA the time to act properly and to review the comments is immense, and that is why I must oppose this amendment. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I reserve the time that has been allocated to various Members. I now allocate 3 minutes to the distinguished senior Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Idaho is recognized.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—CONFERENCE REPORT TO ACCOMPANY H.R. 4205

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, on behalf of the leadership, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the DOD authorization conference report following the consideration and vote on H.R. 4516 on Thursday; that the conference report be considered as having been read and debated under the following agreement: 2 hours under the control of the chairman of the Armed Services Committee; 2½ hours under the control of Senator LEVIN; 1 hour under the control of Senator GRAMM; 30 minutes under the control of Senator WELLSTONE; that following the debate just outlined, Senator BOB KERREY be recognized to make a point of order, and that the motion to waive the Budget Act be limited to 2 hours equally divided in the usual form. I further ask unanimous consent that following the use or yielding back of time on the motion to waive, the Senate proceed to vote on the motion and, if waived, a vote occur immediately on adoption of the conference report, without any intervening action, motion, or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, this is the agreement we have been attempting to work out for the last day. This is something Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN have worked on very hard. It is a good bill. We, on this side, think the agreement is something that will be to the benefit not only of the Senate but the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Idaho.

DEPARTMENTS OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS—Continued

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I thank the chairman of my subcommittee for yielding.

I say to the Senator from California, her amendment is a perfect example of no good deed goes unpunished. I say that to the Senator from California for this very simple reason. This language has been worked out with all of the parties, and all of the staffs, with the administration, and with the EPA. While they do not like it, they understand their science, and where they are does not justify, at this time, the kind of regulation they are attempting to bring down.

From the State of the Senator from California, let me read from the Indian Wells Valley Water District. This is a water district of 10 to 12 wells, wells that, meeting the current standard proposed by EPA, would cost this water district $1 million per year—a 60- to 70-percent cost increase in their operations.

What happens when Government goes silly or crazy based on science they have not substantiated, in highly mineralized areas, where arsenic is present in water supplies, is that they drive up costs, and ultimately they collapse these little water districts and everybody goes out and drills their own wells to supply their own household water and then an even greater problem exists.

We are talking about cost per speculative cancer case—cost per speculative cancer case.

If the amendment of the Senator from California prevails, that cost per speculative cancer case goes to $5 million per speculative case.

I do not think that is good policy. I know the science isn't there yet to justify it because the word ''speculative'' is the word EPA uses in suggesting these dramatic reductions in arsenic levels.

I do not want to destroy rural water systems. Neither does this subcommittee. My colleague from Idaho spoke very clearly about the real live impact if this amendment were to prevail. Across this country, small independent water districts cannot nor could not comply without a cost of several hundred dollars more per month added to the cost of a water bill.

This is not good policy. I do not even think it is good politics.

Let me repeat: No good deed will go unpunished according to this amendment because we have been working collectively together to solve this problem, recognizing the phenomenal importance of the water quality to all citizens in this country.

Energy and Water, as an authorizing committee, has acted responsibly. While the ranking member might suggest that staff or they were not consulted, that is simply not true. They were thoroughly involved and consulted on this issue. This is a compromise. It does not shut down the process, as has clearly been spoken to by my colleague from Idaho, Senator CRAPO. So I hope the Senate will recognize that.

Let us not rush to judgment, nor let us not get into the speculative business of driving up costs of water and, therefore, allowing people to go out and drill their own wells and even create a more dangerous water structure for small rural communities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 3 minutes have expired.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. KERRY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of debate on the two amendments under the previous order, I be permitted to speak on the VA-HUD bill for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. BOND addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, we reserve the remainder of our time on these amendments. I believe the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee is on his way over.

What time do we have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri has 2 minutes, and the Senator from California has 3 minutes.

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair. We reserve our time.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I want to respond to my colleagues directly on a number of points that they made. These two riders should be deleted. It is bad process. I think that has been spoken to a number of times. And it is really bad policy. I think that has been spoken to as well.

I say to my dearest friend, Senator MIKULSKI, who has worked so hard on this bill—and it means everything to her—how much I support her bill but for these riders. I want to tell her how I feel.

I do not think that all wisdom resides in Washington. I think I am quoting the Republican candidate for President. I do think these 21 groups are phenomenal. I do trust them. The National Resources Defense Council, the Sierra Club—maybe they do not always agree with every one of us, but they spend their lives on these issues. I do respect them. And I do think that they can. I am really glad it looks as if they are going to count these votes as an important vote on their scorecard.

But I do want to say if CEQ were in the room and some others from the administration—I know it to be fact, and it is true —I just do not happen to agree with them. I will tell you who was not in the room, who was not even given the courtesy of a phone call, Senator Max BAUCUS, who is the ranking member on Environment and Public Works. I will tell you who else was not in the room, Senator MOYNIHAN, who supports my dredging amendment. I think a phone call from the administration, if you will, to those folks would have been in order to find out how we feel about these anti-environmented riders. So we are very disappointed.

I say to my friend, Senator CRAIG, who has left the floor, he calls it ''silly science'' to talk about a lower standard for arsenic. Here is the silly science. I have to tell you, taxpayers pay the National Academy of Sciences to produce this study on arsenic in drinking water. This isn't silly science. This is what they said:

> This outdated standard does not achieve EPA's goal for public health protection and, therefore, requires revision as promptly as possible.

So what did we do? We did the opposite. We delayed the date.

The Senator mentioned a water district in California. That is why we have a waiver in the Safe Drinking Water Act, for those small communities, a waiver so they will not have hardship. That is why we have a State revolving fund which, by the way, is funded in this bill. It needs more attention. It needs more help.

But I have to say, again—and call me as old-fashioned as you want; maybe it is because when I was a kid I saw ''Arsenic and Old Lace''—but I can tell you right now, the science is clear. It is not silly; it is not foolish. This is very dangerous. We have to do something about it.

To say this is a rush to judgment when we have been having hearings on the standard since the 1980s, we all know what it is about. It is about a delay. It is the hope that the new administration may not be as tough.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All the Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent for 30 more seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. So I would sum up this way. We have a gag order in front of us in the rider that deals with EPA not being allowed to tell people they live in a dirty air district. It is for people to know that exposure to smog decreases lung function. It hurts our children with asthma, and it leads to emergency room visits. The courts have said clearly—and I have a direct quotation from the court—the court said: EPA has the right to tell people the truth about the quality of their air. This rider overturns that court decision.

I hope we will have strong support for this amendment.

I thank my friends.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 2 minutes have expired.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from New Hampshire if he is ready to speak?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Yes.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, just to correct the record, the staff of the ranking member on the Environment and Public Works Committee was consulted, was informed of this. This was not done without advice to them. That was just incorrect.

I now yield the remaining time on this side to the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire has 1 minute 39 seconds.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. That is not much time to try to make my points here. But, look, this is one of those situations where you have an amendment, part of which I support and part of which I do not, which means I have to oppose it.

The clean air provisions that the Senator from California has outlined I can support. But it is unfortunate that I have to be here today, as the chairman of the committee, to choose to do something that this body chose to do 4 years ago in the Safe Drinking Water Act amendment.

It is worse that the only groups objecting to this language in VA-HUD are doing so because they stand to gain attorney's fees. I support the underlying managers' amendment by the Senator from Missouri. We are going to see wasteful litigation here, and it is wrong.

To put this in context would take more time than I have, but we all agree the standard on this should be reviewed. This is not a discussion about the standard. The arsenic standard needs to be reviewed. But due to the complexity and science that was needed to develop the standard, the Congress very clearly dictated a timeframe.

Congress directed EPA to propose a rule on January 1, 2000, and to finalize the rule on January 1, 2001. They made it clear we wanted to provide one year from the date of publication of a draft rule to publication of a final rule. EPA cannot meet this requirement right now, and we need to get this science. We need to draw all this in. That is what the managers' amendment allows for.

To go to litigation now means we will waste millions of dollars of taxpayers' money on litigation for no reason, and they are still not going to be able to meet the standard in spite of the litigation. It is absolutely ridiculous.

I encourage my colleagues to support Senator BOND and the managers' amendment on this issue.

To reiterate, I come today to talk about Senator BOXER's amendment to the VA HUD appropriations bill. Unfortunately, Senator BOXER has put two issues into her amendment. I support one and strongly object to the other. Due to that strong objection I will vote against this amendment.

On the arsenic provision, it is very unfortunate that I need to come down here today to defend what this body chose to do four years ago in the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments. It is even worse that the only groups objecting to this language in the VA HUD appropriation bill are doing so because they stand to gain attorneys fees.

The provision on arsenic in the VA–HUD Appropriations bill does one thing: preserves the original intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996. While Senator BOXER's amendment does one thing—promotes wasteful litigation.

To put this into context let me explain the history and reality of the situation. The Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996 clearly outlined a need to review the standard for arsenic. We all agree the standard needs to be reviewed. This is NOT a discussion about the standard. I repeat, the arsenic standard needs to be reviewed.

However, due to the complexity and science that was needed to develop the standard, we the Congress, very clearly dictated the time frame for developing this rule. Congress directed EPA to propose a rule on January 1, 2000 and to finalize the rule on January 1, 2001.

The Congress also made it very clear that we wanted to provide one year from date of publication of a draft rule to publication of a final rule. The reason was to allow sufficient time for public comment and EPA review to finalize this very complex issue. Thus, the Congress stated that the final rule should be published on January 1, 2001, one year after the publication of the draft rule.

Unfortunately, the EPA missed the January 1, 2000 deadline to publish the draft rule by six months. There may be very good reasons for why EPA missed this deadline, but the fact is EPA missed the statutory deadline for publication by six months.

EPA provided 90 days to comment on the proposed rule, however it is my understanding that EPA will be having an additional comment period on information that became available after the original draft rule was published. So basically, we are not done with the public comment period EPA, less than three months from the statutory deadline to publish the final rule has not even received all the public comments.

What do these dates and missed deadlines mean? They mean, and EPA will agree with me on this, that there is no way that EPA will meet the January 1, 2001 statutory deadline to publish this final rule. In fact, EPA will probably not publish the final rule until late spring. I support EPA taking the time to consider all the stakeholders comments and the very complex information they have received. I support the original intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments to provide one year to finalize this rule. Especially, in light of the controversy this rule has brought on by a host of very credible institutions like the EPA Science Advisory Board that questions the EPA proposal. But that is not what we are down here today to talk about.

What happens unfortunately, is a host of groups will sue EPA on January 2, 2001 for not publishing the final rule. Everyone knows that EPA will miss this deadline, YET, these organizations will waste everyone's time and tax payer's money by bringing an unnecessary lawsuit. So what am I down here to discuss today? I am here to discuss: unnecessary attorney's fees, waste of tax payer dollars, and place a burden on the judicial branch.

To avoid those three issues, I support the arsenic provision in the VA–HUD Appropriations Bill. This provision would extend the deadline for finalization of the arsenic rule to no later than June 22, 2001. This provides the EPA one year to finalize the rule—exactly the same time frame as the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments.

Why is this needed? Because this is a complex rule and the Congress realized that when they required EPA to take one year to finalize the rule. But just as important: we the Congress can make sure tax payers dollars are not wastefully spent on unnecessary judicial proceeding and attorney's fees.

Our constituents should not have to pay the price for the EPA's failure to follow the mandates of the Safe Drinking Water Amendments of 1996. This extension will have no impact on human health because it is completely consistent with EPA's time frame for finalizing the rule.

I am sure that is why the White House and the Council on Environmental Quality is not opposing this language.

Senator BOXER's amendment does absolutely nothing to protect human health. It only protects those environmental groups that want litigation will benefit. This is unfortunate because the litigation will produce the exact same outcome as this provision. However the litigation has consequences, it will produce: unnecessary attorneys fees, an unnecessary burden on the judiciary, an unnecessary burden on the EPA, and taxpayer dollars funding all of this. I cannot stand here and encourage unnecessary litigation. But I can proudly support the original intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act and allow EPA to take appropriate time to consider all the comments and information in proposing a final rule.

Now switching to the Clean Air Act issue. The motion to strike also contains language that touches on another one of those complicated Clean Air Act issues. I believe that this is exactly the type of thing that must be addressed by the committee of jurisdiction rather than through a rider.

Last year the Environment and Public Works Committee first addressed the issue of what limits were needed on the implementation of these air quality standards while the court was reviewing them. At that time, the committee was considering a bill to improve the transportation conformity provisions of the Clean Air Act. Senator INHOFE offered an amendment to deal with this matter and the amendment was adopted.

Even as the INHOFE language was accepted, there was discussion regarding how it might be improved prior to floor consideration. During the past few months, members of the Environment and Public Works Committee, and especially Senator INHOFE and Senator BAUCUS, worked hard to develop language that is now broadly supported—and included in this bill. The bill also contains controversial language on the same issue that came from a House appropriations bill and was not considered by the Environment and Public Works Committee. In fact, no authorizing committee in either body dealt with this language.

Mr. President, it seems to me that we are borrowing trouble by taking the House language because the language Senator INHOFE proposed speaks to precisely the same problem as the language Senator BOXER seeks to strike. We do not need both.

Let me briefly address the substance of the issue. As many Members know, the Supreme Court is currently reviewing the EPA's recently established air quality standards for smog and soot, ozone and particulate matter.

At the same time, implementation of the standards is proceeding. The EPA is required by law to identify areas that violate the standards, even though the court might throw the standards out. More importantly, designating areas as violating the standards triggers automatic requirements under the Clean Air Act. These include restrictions on highway construction and expanding or building new facilities that would emit air pollutants.

The problem we are trying to solve is that these requirements may be triggered and then the standards could be overturned, leading to planning chaos for many states. Senator INHOFE's language would delay the effective date of the automatic requirements under the Clean Air Act to allow time for the Supreme Court to act. The language from the House bill that Senator BOXER seeks to strike would bar the use of funds for making determinations about what areas would violate the standards; thus preventing the triggering of the automatic Clean Air Act requirements.

So we have two ways of skinning the same cat. Senator INHOFE's approach has bipartisan support and is the work product of members of this body's authorizing committee. The House language is controversial and has not received consideration from any authorizing committee.

The House language is controversial because many people believe that the air data collected by the states should be analyzed by the EPA and made public no matter what happens to the standards in the courts. Also, the limit on the use of funds could delay implementation in the event that the Court upholds the standards.

I believe that the Senate should recognize and reward the effort that Senator INHOFE has made to eliminate unnecessary conflict over this issue. I support the language in the bill developed by the Senator from Oklahoma.

If the motion by the Senator from California to strike the House language was not attached to the arsenic issue, I would support the Senator in her motion, and I would encourage the entire Senate to do the same. Because the arsenic matter is the overriding concern for me, I must oppose the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized to offer a second amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 4309

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER], for herself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. LEVIN, proposes an amendment numbered 4309:

(Purpose: Expressing the sense of the Congress regarding the cleanup of river and ocean waters contaminated with DDT, PCBs, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals)

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SEC. . (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) more than one-eighth of all sites listed on the Superfund National Priorities List are river and ocean water sites where sediment is contaminated with PCBs, dioxins, DDT, metals and other toxic chemicals;

(2) toxic chemicals like PCBs, dioxins, DDT and metals tend to be less soluble, and more environmentally persistent pollutants;

(3) toxic chemicals like PCBs, dioxins, DDT and metals polluting river and ocean sites around the nation may pose threats to public health, safety and the environment.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals in order to protect the public health, safety and the environment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I wanted the amendment read because I think it is a pretty clear statement of what we ought to be doing; that is, expediting the cleanup of the Superfund sites.

To respond to Senator BOND, the staff of Senator BAUCUS has informed me that they received one call and they objected to the riders. They don't believe Senator BAUCUS was ever called personally. We are going to check on that because I do want the record clear on it.

I ask unanimous consent that Senators MOYNIHAN, SCHUMER, and KERRY be added on as cosponsors of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I strongly oppose report language included in this conference agreement that will delay the cleanup of waters contaminated with toxic pollutants such as DDT and PCBs. We tried to work with my colleagues to change this language. We were unable to be successful.

The language will remain in because you can't strike report language, but we have a sense of the Senate that is very clear. Basically the operative language, which was just read by the clerk, is:

It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals in order to protect public health, safety and the environment.

The report language included in this bill—remember, this is an appropriations bill—prohibits the EPA from cleaning up river and ocean sites that are contaminated with these horrible pollutants until the National Academy of Sciences completes a study or until June of 2000, whichever comes first. That isn't the worst of it. The worst of it is, we believe this language opens up a whole new loophole, which is really going to mean we are going to have many more court suits. I will get to that in a minute.

We think this language could delay the cleanup of at least six Superfund sites nationwide. One of them happens to be in California. The report language that is extremely troubling, which we were unable to remove, requires EPA to ''properly consider the results of the NAS study'' before moving forward on the cleanup of these sites. Anyone who knows anything about litigation knows a lawyer will have a field day with the phrase ''properly considered.''

What does that mean? You must properly consider before you move ahead with a cleanup? You could have a whole year discussing what that means, and that is exactly what the polluters are going to do. They are going to haul this Government into court just to try to get out of their responsibility. It will give polluters a hook to get into court and to litigate.

I want to talk about a site off the Santa Monica Bay, the Montrose site.

Mr. President, will the Chair inform me when I have 5 minutes remaining of my time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will do that.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

The Montrose Chemical Corporation holds the distinction of being the largest producer of DDT in the world. That is not a great distinction since we know what a poison DDT is.

It discharges tons of DDT through storm sewers into the ocean off the Palos Verdes peninsula, and 100 tons of it sits on the ocean floor there.

DDT is classified as a probable human carcinogen. It is thought to have severe liver and neurological impacts, and it has also recently been identified as a chemical which may promote breast cancer.

We know DDT is causing harm to the ocean, i.e. Santa Monica Bay, because the DDT goes up through the food chain where it reaches the bald eagles. Of course, we know those bald eagles were brought to the brink of extinction by DDT, and we know it causes the eagle eggs to thin and to fail to successfully hatch. EPA estimates it will cost $150 million to restore the ocean where that dump is.

The report language, in our strong opinion, with legal authorities across this country, tells us that it would prohibit the EPA from cleaning up this site until the NAS report comes out. And then even after that, Montrose will go back into court. Mind you, they have already spent $50 million fighting the cleanup. Their position is: Let the DDT just sit there. Don't cap it off. Don't do anything. In the meantime, it is poisoning the environment there.

I don't understand why we do these things. When I talk to my constituents, their eyes roll. Arsenic, DDT, PCBs, these are not good things. If we could agree on one thing around here, it would be to get rid of them. We do everything we can to help people who are good actors to clean up their act, if they made a mistake. We have a State revolving fund.

It stuns me that in this century we are still arguing over cleaning up arsenic out of the water, cleaning up DDT that is harming wildlife.

As to this argument by Montrose that they should do nothing, imagine how strongly they feel. They have spent $50 million in order to do nothing. Why didn't they spend the $50 million cleaning up the site, and we would be rid of the DDT; we wouldn't have this poison moving up the food chain.

What we hope to achieve—and we hope the managers will support this—is a very simple sense-of-the-Congress amendment. It is so clear. What we say is: Look, we can't get your language out of the report. We understand you don't want to make changes because you don't want to go back to conference. All we are saying is, let's stand firm together. Let us pass the sense of the Congress. I will reiterate it, and then I will save my 5 minutes. I am hopeful others will come to the floor.

It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals in order to protect health, safety and the environment.

Now, my colleagues say nothing in this bill would harm that. I hope, therefore, they will support this amendment. I think it is very important.

Mr. President, I will take an additional 30 seconds to say Senator LEVIN wants to be added as a cosponsor. Senator BAUCUS was not personally consulted by anyone on this matter. That is clearing up the record, straight from Senator BAUCUS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I am sorry we have to get into this little battle over who said what and who said what, when where, and why. Let it be clear that we on both sides made our best efforts to assure that everyone was advised. Twice, Mr. Tom Sliter, a staffer on EPW, was notified and discussed this with my assistant, Ms. Apostolou. He also, I understand, participated in a briefing conducted by Mr. Carliner of the minority staff.

Not everybody agreed with all of those things, and we never said that we had 100-percent agreement. We don't get 100-percent agreement, but we do extend the courtesy to all of the Members who are interested to let them know what we are doing and give them an opportunity. I am sorry to get into this, but when it was said that we did this without notification in an attempt to hide this, that is absolutely wrong. That is an unfortunate and unfair slam at our staff. I do not intend to let it stand.

The next point I will make, just to call it to the attention of my colleague from California, is we have been advised that no California sites would be affected. EPA has indicated they will be sending a letter to assure the Senator that no California sites would be affected by the proposed managers' amendment, or the language in the statement of managers.

Let me say that while, technically, this issue is not before us at this time, we do intend to include a statement which has been carefully worked out at painstaking meetings that Senator MIKULSKI and I had, along with our House counterparts, with OMB Director Jack Lew and George Frampton, CEQ Director. This language will be included to address the concerns raised by EPA about House report language on this issue.

The report language simply requires EPA to take into consideration a National Academy of Sciences study on contaminated sediments, which has been worked on for the past several years and is expected within the next 3 months, before dredging or invasive remediation actions at sites where a plan has not been adopted by October 1, 2000, or where dredging has not already occurred.

Exceptions are provided for voluntary agreements and urgent cases where there is significant threat to public health. Furthermore, EPA is not prohibited from proposing draft remediation plans involving dredging or invasive remediation technologies.

In view of the time, effort, and resources that have gone into examining the efficacy of dredging contaminated sediments, it would truly be a shame not to consider the best science available before going forward. This is not going to result in undue delays, but it will result in an informed process.

Dredging is very controversial and it is very costly. What do you do with the dredge material if you dig up material that is contaminated? Where do you put it? I can tell you that the answer will be NIMBY—not in my backyard. That is the first thing everybody will say. ''Can't you find a better or safer place to put it?''

Also, does dredging cause more harm, potentially, to the health and environment than leaving the contaminated sediments in place? When you stir it up and dig into the contaminated sediments, do you spread more out and do you get more in the water supply or in the air? These are things that scientists ought to tell us. The National Academy of Sciences is working on it. What would you do with thousands of truckloads of dredge material if you dredged it up and the National Academy of Sciences says you should have left it in place?

Well, it is important that we act on science around this place. I know there are some groups that love to write letters and have their own agenda and say that we need to move forward. I believe most people in this body would agree that getting a peer-reviewed study by the National Academy of Sciences before we engage upon a massive and potential danger-causing activity—dredging up sediments, or other invasive remedies—makes sense. For that reason, I believe that carefully crafted language, which was agreed on by the OMB Director and the CEQ Director, is a far preferable resolution of this very serious question. Let's take the radical step of waiting to rely on the science.

I yield to my distinguished colleague from Maryland such time as she may require.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, how much time remains for the opponents to the Boxer amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Nine minutes.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, will the Chair inform me when I have taken 4 minutes in the event that others also wish to speak?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, the Chair will do so.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Boxer amendment and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

This amendment will have to be disposed of by the House. It will not be accepted by the House and therefore will kill this bill.

I would like to explain to my colleagues how our bill addresses the issue of contaminated sediments, why I am opposed to the Boxer amendment and, why the administration is opposed to the Boxer amendment.

The Boxer amendment is not necessary and its passage would effectively kill this bill.

Let me explain what we do in our bill.

The final version of the VA/HUD bill will contain report language in the statement of the managers that prevents EPA from dredging any contaminated site that does not have an approved plan in place by October 1, 2000 until the National Academy of Sciences, NAS, has completed its study on this issue and EPA has reviewed it.

This language sunsets on June 30, 2001. The NAS is expected to release its report in December. With an EPA review, the delay would last probably no more than 120 days.

We have included some exceptions to this language that are very important and I want to outline them for my colleagues.

First, if a site has an approved dredging plan in place by October 1, 2000, the language does not apply.

Second, if dredging or dredging activity is already occurring at a site, the language does not apply.

Third, if a site has a voluntary agreement in place with a potentially responsible party, the language does not apply.

Fourth, if EPA determines that a site poses a threat to public health, the language does not apply.

These exceptions are very important and were carefully negotiated with the administration.

This was no small victory for us.

The House passed VA/HUD bill included report language that would have directed EPA not to initiate or order dredging or other invasive remediation technologies, until the NAS report was complete and required that the results be incorporated into the EPA decision making processes.

This more extreme language would have effectively frozen work at affected sites for an indefinite period of time.

During our negotiations with the House, we successfully modified the provision to remove the extreme language.

The report language that will be incorporated into the final version of the VA/HUD bill still leaves EPA with some discretion and does not mandate any solutions.

Our language also allows EPA to take comment on proposed remedial actions such as that for cleanup of the Hudson River.

Our language would also allow all cleanup plans to be finalized by a date certain—June 30, 2001—even if the NAS report has not been completed in a timely manner.

The NAS is expected to use their final report, no later than January 1, 2001, allowing the report to be properly considered by EPA while sites without final plans work on their drafts.

Mr. President, the administration supports our language and I urge my colleagues to vote against the Boxer amendment.

I wish to also respond to my colleague and friend, the Senator from California, by saying this: No. 1, neither Senator BOND nor I wanted the riders. The House insisted on the riders. So we attempted to remove the draconian substance of the riders and put in more procedural issues, more procedural safeguards. The Senator thinks we wimped out. We think we had a victory because of the draconian aspect. We fought off the dragons.

Also, I want to be clear to my colleagues, we are in a very unusual parliamentary procedure. If we pass this bill without any amendments, it will go immediately to the House and can go through a process of ratification and will be done. If any of these amendments pass, we will have to go into a parliamentary situation where the House will not accept this and, therefore, the bill will be dead. So I just lay that out for everyone to take into consideration.

So the funds for EPA, which are quite robust—matching, in many instances, the President's request—housing, as well as veterans, science and technology, and other consumer protection agencies such as the Consumer Product Safety Commission—I believe will be jeopardized.

Having said that, I don't want to make my argument on jeopardizing the bill. I want to address the concerns that my conscientious colleague has raised about jeopardizing the environment.

This bill prevents EPA from dredging at any site that does not have an approved dredging plan by October 1 until the National Academy of Sciences has completed its study and EPA has reviewed it. In the arsenic ozone debate we heard, the National Academy of Sciences elevated it to an icon status that said don't do anything on this rider because of what the National Academy of Sciences says. By the way, I think the Senator from California and I would agree that we do need the National Academy of Sciences. On the dredging issue, what we are saying is that the dredging sites cannot move ahead until the National Academy has completed its study and EPA has looked at it. Guess when the study is going to be done. December 2000 or January 2001. Any delay will be micro—90 to 120 days. Guess what. I say to my colleagues in the Senate, this is not permanent. It only takes this language to June 30, 2001.

This language has a sunset provision of June 30, 2001.

What are these exceptions? The main one is that if EPA believes any site poses a threat to public health, the language does not apply.

Let me repeat to anyone who thinks wisdom lies in Washington, with 21 advocacy groups, that if EPA believes the site poses a threat to public health, this language does not apply.

Also, if the site has a voluntary agreement in place, it doesn't apply. If dredging is already occurring at a site, the language does not apply. If you have your plan approved by October 1, the language does not apply.

We have so many ''doesn't applys'' here that I don't think the arguments made by the proponents of this amendment apply really in any way that has validity or attraction.

If you are worried about public health—I salute you for it—remember, it would not apply.

I join with my colleagues to say let the National Academy of Sciences complete its work. Let the EPA review it. Then it can move forth on all of this. If there is a delay, it would be 90 to 120 days.

That is basically what the argument is.

I hope the amendment offered by my colleague from California will be defeated.

How much time did I consume?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Four minutes ten seconds remain.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I reserve the right for either Senator BOND or me to do rebuttal.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to support the Sense of the Congress amendment on contaminated sediments offered by the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER). I do so because I have concerns about the implications that the report language accompanying this bill may have for the remediation and restoration of the Fox River in my home state of Wisconsin.

My staff has tried repeatedly over the last several days to clarify the report language with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and has been unable to do so. I had wanted a letter from the EPA explaining the impact of this language on the Fox clean-up. In fact, my office was told by the Office of General Counsel that the EPA could not state with certainty the effects of this language on the Fox River, because it was one of the clean-ups that they had identified which might be delayed by this report language. This leaves me with concern that the next few actions Wisconsin is about to take to clean up the Fox River may be delayed, and my concern is shared by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

As members of this body know, the Senate's version of the VA–HUD bill did not contain any report language on sediments. Only the version which passed the other body contained report language on this issue, and this language is retained and modified in the report accompanying this bill. Therefore, I also raise concerns, Mr. President, because my Wisconsin colleague in the House (Mr. GREEN), who represents the Fox Valley, tried to clarify the House report language in a floor colloquy when the measure was considered in the House of Representatives. This bill before us now changes the very language my colleague from Wisconsin specifically tried to clarify, and adds new and explicit time lines which do not mesh with the upcoming actions that will be taken to clean up the Fox River. As a Wisconsin Senator, I have no choice but to try to enhance the understanding of what this language would do, and I believe that the amendment by the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER) makes it clear that Congress intends the EPA to move swiftly to clean up contaminated river and ocean sites.

I want to explain the status of the Fox River clean-up. The Fox River is currently not a National Priority List (NPL) site, commonly known as Superfund site. Nonetheless, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (WDNR) is working to develop a final Remedial Investigation and Feasibility Study (RIFS) and is expected to release that study in late December, 2000 or early January, 2001. The Wisconsin DNR intends to release the final RIFS jointly with the EPA, and the other trustees which include: the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Oneida Tribe of Wisconsin. A final Record of Decision (ROD) could be reached between March and early June, 2001.

If the National Academy study is not yet complete and ''properly considered'' by EPA before the final RIFS is issued, as the Conference Report language requires, the report language is unclear about whether public comment can be initiated on the final RIFS. The report language says that public comment can be taken on ''proposed'' or ''draft'' remediation plans but is unclear with respect to comment on a final RIFS. Further the language says that ''no plans are to be finalized until June 30, 2001 or until the Agency has properly considered the National Academy of Sciences report, whichever comes first.'' Potentially stalling comment on the final RIFS raises concerns, as the final RIFS will finally indicate a preferred alternative for cleaning-up the Fox, an alternative which was not indicated in the draft RIFS. Interests on all sides of this issue—the paper companies that are potentially responsible parties in the clean-up, local governments that are concerned about liability, and local citizens who have been waiting to see what will be done to address the contaminants in the river—deserve to know what the preferred alternative is and to express their views.

Moreover, if the final ROD is issued before June 30, 2001, its implementation could also be delayed by this language. Though some may view this as simply a delay of a few weeks, I remind my colleagues that Wisconsin is a cold weather state. My State needs the certainty of being able to plan to contract to implement the remedy during the summer and early fall construction season. If not, we risk having to put off the clean up for another calendar year due to cold weather delays.

Given these uncertainties, I support my colleague from California's (Mrs. BOXER) amendment. This report language may have consequences for my state which I simply feel must be addressed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to my friend from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from California. I had not expected to speak on this matter. I came to the floor to speak on the VA–HUD bill as a whole.

Let me share a couple of quick observations about these riders.

I congratulate my colleague from California for the fight she is making because it is an important fight as a matter of principle, and also it is a matter of science and common sense. These riders don't find their way into this legislation accidentally. There are powerful interests in the country that made sure these riders were here. We consistently see these attacks on environmental enforcement efforts in the country because there are people who just do not want a change.

On the air quality standards and nonattainment designations, the American Trucking Association is waiting for litigation with the EPA and wants to stop the EPA from keeping accountability with respect to the Clean Air Act.

That is what this is about. I have great respect for truckers and great respect for their efforts across the country. They are important to our economy. No one here is going to suggest otherwise. But every American has seen what happens at stoplights where they are sitting in a car that is living up to emission standards and a truck starts out at the stoplight. There is a great plume of black smoke that comes out of that truck. It is all over our highways. We know it. SUVs are presenting us with an increased problem because they come in under the light truck exception.

The fact is that the air standards of the country are not reaching the levels they ought to reach. The EPA is our chosen entity to enforce the Clean Air Act and to make sure that Americans are not subjected to pollution and air quality standards that are less than high.

We are told by the EPA what happens with this delay. There is the exposure of some 15,000 premature deaths in the country. Some 350,000 more Americans will suffer asthma as a consequence of the lack of air quality standards. That is the risk the Senate will take by allowing this kind of rider. However innocuous it may seem or however people make it sound going forward, there is a diminishment of the capacity of the EPA to enforce the law Congress has already passed to allow Americans to live by the highest air quality standards.

With respect to the dredging, I understand where that comes from. We have all been through that struggle in Massachusetts to try to clean up the Husatonic River. We are going to do some dredging there. There is now a struggle about the Hudson River, and other rivers, about whether or not those are going to be cleaned up.

The fact is the National Academy of Sciences has already provided us with not one but two studies that show dredging is a legitimate and important mechanism for cleaning up polluted areas. We are trying to do that in the Bedford-Hartford area where we have PCBs. They fear if this rider passes, that cleanup may in fact be jeopardized because people will use the excuse to say we don't have to proceed.

That is what is at stake. I know it is difficult to pull these bills together. There are a lot of different interests that have to be satisfied. But the fact is the Senate ought to take a vote on these riders. We ought to vote appropriately—that they don't belong in this legislation.

I thank my colleague for her efforts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, how much time is remaining on my side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Four minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Would you let me know when I have 1 minute remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will be glad to do that.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Massachusetts for his eloquent remarks. He is a leader on environmental issues in the Senate. It makes me feel really good that he came over.

I want to again try to set the record straight. Senator BOND said a letter is on its way from the EPA saying the California site is not in fact affected by the language in the bill regarding dredging. We have called them again. We called the general counsel last night. I told my friend from Missouri. They tell us that no such letter is coming.

Be that as it may, whether the letter comes or it doesn't come, the fact is if it does not affect California—and I hope he is right—I say to my friend, if he gets that letter, I will be very grateful. It is a bad situation because the language, in fact, we believe will really slow down the cleanup of Superfund sites. That is why you have Senators MOYNIHAN and SCHUMER concerned about the Hudson River. That cleanup will be stalled.

As my friend, Senator MIKULSKI, said—she calls me the gentlelady from California. She is the gentlelady from Maryland. That goes back to our House days. Senator MIKULSKI pointed out that she said these riders are less draconian. I believe that. They are less draconian. They are still bad, and they don't belong on their otherwise terrific bill. They do harm.

My friend points out that it is very clear the language said this will wreck the public health—no delay. It doesn't say ''affect'' the public health or the environment. When you have an effect on the environment by the fish eating DDT, you do not have to be a rocket scientist; if the fish eat DDT, it it is bad for humans. When do you prove that? It may not come down the line much longer.

I know my friend worked very hard on this. She had people in the room whom she trusted. But, again, I don't believe the administration sought out these riders. My friend is right; it was the House Members who did. They simply don't belong here. It would be very simple for us to agree to this sense of the Senate. I think it would be helpful because my friends say they don't want to delay these cleanups.

I want to make one point about science. Listen very carefully when people stand up here and say it is silly science and we must act on science. The EPA and the National Academy of Sciences acted on science with their new rule on the arsenic standard. Guess what. They are calling this silly science. This is the National Academy of Sciences. They say arsenic is very dangerous.

The bottom line is you can't seem to win around here. You get a report done by the National Academy of Sciences, and they say you have silly science; forget about it; throw it away. When you don't have the report, they say you can't act. As my friend pointed out, there have been many studies done by the National Academy of Sciences on port dredging as a way to get rid of these contaminants. We didn't know they were life threatening and dangerous. We know that now.

I hope we will have a good solid vote on these amendments.

I thank my colleagues. I retain 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, we are now in the concluding minutes of the debate.

First of all, on the three issues raised by the Senator from California, I want to say a couple of things.

No. 1, I am very proud of the Senate. When we moved our bill out of the full committee, we had no riders. We were not authorizing on appropriations. We had no riders, and we attempted to stand firm. Yes, we did face the dragons of the riders. What we ended up doing was not eliminating the dragons but we defang them. We defang the riders. We took the teeth out of them so they couldn't snarl up what this legislation is trying to do.

I believe the language we have adopted through the committee, through the managers' amendment, does have the riders. They are procedural. We acknowledge the flashing yellow light of the Senator from California with her terrible situation in California. We will do everything we can to make sure the Senator has that letter. I know it is not a substitute for the amendment. However, we want our colleagues to know the flashing yellow lights raised by the proponents are not valid.

Remember on the dredging, if the site has been approved by October 1, 2000, the language doesn't apply. If the dredging is already occurring, the language does not apply. If you have a voluntary agreement, the language does not apply. And if the EPA certifies that the site posed a threat to public health, the language does not apply.

I recommend the Boxer amendment does not apply to this bill and I urge its defeat.

I yield back the remaining time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes remain.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I take 1 minute to say the ranking member and I have been advised by EPA the California sites that would be affected by the language—and it is the clear understanding of the managers of the bill in the Senate—are either pilot sites already underway and would not be included or they are sites in which the final action would not be ready by the timeframe in which this action is delayed.

We have been advised, and it is our understanding, there is no application of this provision. It was intended to be included in the statement of managers on any California site.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask for an additional 30 seconds added to my remaining 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friends for the opportunity for the brief debate. I say to my friends, these are not harmless riders. You can say they will ''defang'' and that is in the eye of the defanger.

The bottom line is these are not harmless riders. It is not harmless to tell the EPA they are gagged from telling the people in my State and every other State that they live in a dirty air situation. That is what this rider does.

It is not harmless to tell the EPA they cannot set a new standard for arsenic, a standard that essentially was set with data collected in 1942. I will not tell anyone if I was born then or not. That is an old standard, folks. We know it is much more dangerous.

Finally, it is not harmless to delay the cleanup of PCBs and DDT and all the other hazardous toxins that sometimes get into the bay and the ocean floor and harm the wildlife and work up the chain.

Please support the Boxer amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. KERRY. I see we have more time than I anticipated. I ask unanimous consent for 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BOND. I want to make sure that there is time for the ranking member and myself.

What is the time situation, and how much time now does the Senator from Massachusetts have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts at the present time has 10 minutes.

Mr. BOND. And he is requesting?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Another 5 minutes.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I do not object.

I amend that to ask unanimous consent that the remaining 20 minutes prior to the 12:30 vote be divided between the ranking member and myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the legislation we will vote on shortly, the VA–HUD bill, with mixed feelings. I want to be clear to my colleagues, the distinguished Senator from Maryland and the Senator from Missouri, those feelings have absolutely nothing to do with the level of leadership they have provided on this legislation. I think they have done an outstanding job under exceedingly difficult circumstances. When I say ''difficult circumstances,'' they know better than anybody in the Senate what we are talking about.

This bill is traditionally knocked around, almost always begins with a significantly below realistic cap which makes it almost impossible for them to do their work for months on end. And then at the last minute they get some kind of a reprieve and they are allowed the opportunity to try to fit the pieces together, satisfy their colleagues, satisfy national priorities, and come to the Senate.

I think they have produced a housing budget that in light of recent years—I emphasize this—is a very strong budget. They have done an exceptional job with respect to the existing housing programs that we have in this country. They have increased funding for almost every significant Federal housing program that is already run by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. For that, I thank them—not just for me but for countless numbers of people across the country who depend on one or another of those efforts to have decent shelter and a competent housing program for their communities.

Let me share quickly a couple of examples where the work has been exceptional. They have provided about $6.2 billion for operating and capital costs in public housing, which is an increase over the administration's request. The HOPE VI program, which has been enormously successful in turning some of the Nation's worst public housing developments into healthy, mixed-income communities, including a number in my home State of Massachusetts, has received an additional $575 million.

The HOME program and the CDBG received significant funding increases. Any of us can go home and talk to a mayor and we will learn quickly how important those particular programs have been to the discretionary capacity of mayors to be able to make a difference for their communities.

The Community Reinvestment Act has been able to extend credit. That has assisted the communities. The bill also brought the homeless budget back up to where it was.

But let me just discuss, if I may, an area in which I know both the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Maryland share with me a sense of frustration and a sense of a priority not met by this legislation. There is something the Congress of the United States could have done about this, and has chosen not to do.

Very simply, we need a production program in this country. We used to have a production program, but over the last years we have seen a retreat from the commitment by the Federal Government to provide production.

Last night, in the debate between Vice President GORE and Governor Bush, there was an exchange where the Vice President said to the Governor that he didn't doubt his heart, or his goodness as a person but that he questioned his priorities. I come to the floor today to question the priorities of all of us in Washington, the Congress and the administration, with respect to one of the most evident, compelling needs that we face in this country, in community after community after community. This is not a Boston or a Massachusetts issue. It is not a New England issue. There is not a community in the United States of America that you go to today where there are not people having an extraordinarily difficult time being able to find adequate housing.

The reason is partly something we can celebrate, in the sense it comes out of an economy that is so extraordinarily strong. But, on the other hand, because it is so strong and so many people are able to afford the few available places, the rents have risen to a point where even some vouchers are being refused. So we are upping the number of vouchers in this legislation to some 80,000 new vouchers, but there is no place for anybody to take them.

The result is, even as we live in a time of extraordinary economic expansion, too many of our fellow Americans are not sharing on the up side and are finding it increasingly difficult to find decent housing. HUD estimates that 5.4 million low-income households have what we call worst case housing needs. These families are paying over half their income towards housing costs or they are living in severely substandard housing.

Since 1950, the number of families with worst case housing needs has increased by 12 percent. That means 600,000 more of our fellow citizens cannot afford a decent and safe place to live, even though the United States of America has the best economy we have had in maybe half a century. For these families, living paycheck to paycheck, one simple unforeseen circumstance such as a child getting sick or a big car repair bill or some other kind of emergency can send them into homelessness. That is not an exaggeration.

Earlier this year, on the front page of the Washington Post, an article detailed these problems right here in our own backyard, the Nation's Capital. That article detailed the plight of low-income families living in apartments that are no longer affordable because the owners decided to no longer accept Federal assistance. For those families, the loss of their affordable housing unit meant they could go without a home.

We have mistakenly viewed this crisis as limited to certain demographic groups. I really caution my colleagues not to fall into that stereotype. There is not one metropolitan area in the country where a minimum wage earner can afford to pay the rent for the average two-bedroom apartment. The minimum wage today—is it $5.15? You would have to earn over $12 an hour to afford the median rent for the average two-bedroom apartment in this country. That figure rises dramatically in many metropolitan areas.

An hourly wage of $28 is needed in San Francisco; $23 on Long Island; $19 in Boston; $17 in Washington, DC, $16 in Chicago and in Seattle, and $15 in Atlanta. In every one of these cases, the affordability crisis has grown worse over the course of the past year. Working families are increasingly finding themselves unable to afford a house. A person in Boston would have to make over $35,000 a year just to afford a two-bedroom apartment, and we know that is well above the median earnings of folks in that area—as well, I might add, as most of the country.

In Cape Cod, MA, a working mother of three children has been forced to live in a camper. The children actually live in a tent because the camper is not large enough. The mother cooks on an outdoor grill. She cleans the campground toilets to help pay the rent on her campsite. She works 40 hours a week, earns $21,000 annually, and she cannot find affordable rental housing.

There was another article in the Washington Post this week which emphasizes the impact of this issue. Because of the ability of higher wage earners in this area who have benefited from the booming economy to pay higher housing costs, we have seen a rise in the number of building owners who refuse to rent to households that are assisted by section 8 vouchers. In Prince Georges County, 300 tenants in an apartment complex were recently told they have to move because the owner is no longer going to accept section 8.

I know the Senator from Missouri understands everything I have thus far said and supports the notion that we need a production program. I am grateful to the Senator from Missouri for having not just seen that, but put $1 billion into this bill for housing production. That is how this bill went to the conference level. That bill could have received support from the House and the administration that would have left us in a position to fund.

When people say: Senator, what about the cap? What about the total amount of money? In this year, the 2001 budget cycle, as a matter of priority, the administration and others are choosing to pay down $200 billion of debt. I am all for debt paydown. I know that is a tax cut to all Americans. I have been one of those here who has supported the concept that we ought to pay off the debt as rapidly as we possibly can. But the key is in the words ''as rapidly as we possibly can.'' Maybe we should add words such as ''as is appropriate,'' or ''as is measured against other priorities of the country.''

I do not know where it is written in stone or otherwise made an edict of the budgeting process that we have to choose to pay down $200 billion instead of paying down $199 billion or $198 billion, or some other figure. Would it really be so bad if the United States took 1 year longer to pay off the entire debt while sufficiently addressing the question of adequate housing for American families today?

The Senator from Missouri sought to put $1 billion into this bill. So we are making our own priorities. I say to my colleagues, as a matter of common sense and sound investment policy in the future of the country, it makes sense to invest in production of housing for people who cannot afford it because the alternative is that you have a lot of kids who are dragged out of schools, moving from community to community, often becoming at risk as a consequence of the lack of adequate housing. We will pick up their costs. We will pick up their costs when some Senator comes to the floor and says we need more Federal assistance to build prisons; or we need more Federal assistance for the juvenile justice system to take care of those kids who are getting into trouble; or we need more Federal assistance for the drug program because we have too many crack houses and too many communities that are magnets for crime.

Why? Because we don't allow them to become the kinds of communities we want them to be by investing up front in creating the kind of housing the country needs. It is inexcusable, in a nation as rich as we are, doing as well as we are, that we cannot find $1 billion to make certain we have a production program to help build the kind of housing that will release the pressures on the marketplace and can be felt all up and down the ladder in housing costs in the country.

Some colleagues will say: Why should the Federal Government do that? Years ago, we made a commitment in this country about housing. We have come to understand that there are certain things the marketplace doesn't always do very well. I happen to believe we have the most efficient allocation of capital of any economic system anywhere on the face of the planet. I am proud of that. I support that in dozens of ways—through the Small Business Committee, Banking Committee, Commerce Committee, tax incentives, various ways in which we allow the private sector to do what it does best, which is create jobs. But sometimes there are certain sectors of the economy where the marketplace does not work as efficiently. We have always recognized that with one kind of tax incentive or tax credit or direct grant or other kind of incentive or another. Housing just happens to be one of them.

When the supply is very tight and the demand is very high, you have a capacity for rents to rise and you have builders targeting their building to that place where they can make the most money. That is a natural instinct in a marketplace where you are looking for the greatest return on investment. You do not get your great return on investment from the sectors where the people can least afford the rents.

That is why we need a production program, and that is why I hope in these final days before the Congress adjourns we will find our way to include in the omnibus bill the production program we need so desperately. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). The time of the Senator from Massachusetts has expired.

There are now 20 minutes equally divided among the managers of the bill.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, as we conclude our debate on the VA–HUD bill, there are differences of opinion on these riders. I do hope they are rejected. If they are adopted, it will have a serious parliamentary and maybe even fiscal consequence. However, it is a democracy; people need to work their will. I am very proud of this bill because we do meet the needs of our veterans, those who fought the war over there so we could have peace here. I am very proud of what we have done in housing and urban economic development because what we want to do is create an opportunity ladder so people can make sure they have the opportunity for a better life, that there is local control in decisionmaking, strengthening communities whether they are in rural or urban America.

I am very proud of what we have done on the environment. We have funded clean air, clean water, safe drinking water, the ongoing efforts to clean up the Chesapeake Bay and many other bays around the United States of America. Also, in terms of science and technology, again, we have increased the funding so we can come up with the new ideas that ultimately will save lives, generate jobs, and save communities. That is what this bill is all about.

There are little known provisions, such as funding Arlington Cemetery where brave people who died in war are buried, and where Navy diver Stethem, my own Maryland resident who died as a result of an act of terrorism, is buried. He was on an airplane, and he wore the Navy uniform. They beat him up. This bill is a tribute to what people fight and die for around the country: That people will have a better life.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I wish to follow up with some comments on the issues we have discussed today and express, again, my sincere appreciation to my colleague from Maryland for the tremendous cooperation and guidance and valuable assistance she has provided, and her staff, Paul Carliner and others. We have had a lot of difficulties in working out this bill under unusual circumstances, but we both extend our thanks to the chairman and the ranking member, Senator STEVENS and Senator BYRD, for assisting us and for providing us with the resources we needed ultimately to put together a bill that meets the needs in so many important areas, from veterans to housing to the environment to space to science and emergency management. It has been a challenging time.

The Senator from Massachusetts noted that we had made an effort with respect to the production of housing. Frankly, I believe there is nothing more important. I think we have finally gotten the attention of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which had heretofore focused solely on sending out new vouchers.

They wanted new vouchers overall. And my staff did what I thought was a very helpful report—completed it a month or so ago—which pointed out in so many areas vouchers simply cannot be used. There is no place to use them. The nationwide average is about 19 percent. I think in Jersey City some 65 percent of the vouchers cannot be used. In St. Louis County, MO, 50 percent cannot be used. It is an empty promise, a hollow promise, when we give a needy family a certificate that says this will pay their rent, and they take it out someplace and find out they cannot rent anyplace with that voucher, with that section 8 certificate. That does not do much good.

So we did fight hard for the production program. People have objected. I think they had legitimate concerns about the provisions. We agreed that these should be considered in an authorizing vehicle. We hope and we urge the Banking Committee next year to take up the problem of housing production. Let's get all these ideas out on the table.

My office has a lot of good ideas; I am sure others do. Let's get them all out and work them out in authorizing language. How sweet it would be if we had an authorized piece of housing legislation that would make it unnecessary for us to include housing provisions in the appropriations bill. It might be a lot duller, but I believe the ranking member and I could still pass the appropriations bill. So I urge them to deal with those housing questions.

We also thank our colleagues from the Environment and Public Works Committee for their helpful comments. As a member of that committee, I urge them to take a look at these many provisions which are included in our bill because of concerns over the direction we are moving in the environment. I would like to deal with them on the authorizing basis. I hope that we may do so in the future.

Mr. President, I thank all our colleagues for their help.

I reserve 2 minutes for the chairman of the committee at such time as he may choose for matters that he wishes to bring up.

Mr. STEVENS. Will the Senator yield now?

I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. President, I thank Senator BOND and Senator MIKULSKI, who have worked so hard on this bill and brought us a bill now, through the negotiations they have had with the House, that I believe will be signed. It has been a very difficult bill. In working together, it is nice to see a good bipartisan effort on our appropriations bills.

AMENDMENT NO. 4310

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent it be in order for me to offer an amendment at this time. The amendment is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] proposes an amendment numbered 4310.

Mr. STEVENS. I would like to have the amendment read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

At the appropriate place in the amendment, add:

DIVISION C

SEC. . In lieu of a statement of the managers that would otherwise accompany a conference report for a bill making appropriations for federal agencies and activities provided for in this Act, reports that are filed in identical form by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations prior to adjournment of the 106th Congress shall be considered by the Office of Management and Budget, and the agencies responsible for the obligation and expenditure of funds provided in this Act, as having the same standing, force and legislative history as would a statement of the managers accompanying a conference report.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4310) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to reconsider the vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Ms. MIKULSKI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I know we are concluding. I express my thanks to Senator STEVENS and to Senator BYRD, who enabled us to move forward with this very unusual process, and for the assistance they gave us in dealing with severe budgetary allocations.

I also thank Senator BOND, as well as Congressman WALSH, for including the Democrats as full participants, and also the courtesy extended to members of the executive branch at OMB and also to the Council on Environmental Quality.

I also thank Senator BOND's staff for, again, their really close work in relationship with us and for the professionalism that was afforded. And I thank my own staff. While we worked on this bill, a lot of people were off enjoying themselves. They went home to dinner; they went to fundraisers; they played with their grandchildren; and we were out here working. That is our job. We were happy to do it. But after we would go home, the staff would work, often until 10, 11, 12 o'clock at night and through weekends. I thank them for their hard work. But, most of all, I know the American people thank them for their hard work.

Mr. President, that concludes my remarks.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4308

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, my amendment strikes two riders which are harmful and unfair to the American people. That is why 21 environmental groups support the amendment. And the League of Conservation Voters has indicated they are going to score this on their environmental scorecard.

The first rider delays the setting of a new standard for arsenic in drinking water. The National Academy of Sciences tells us we must act on a new standard for arsenic in water because arsenic is now a known carcinogen. They urge swift action because they tell us that the old standard was based on 1942 data. Arsenic causes cancer. That is science. We should not delay.

The second rider gags the EPA from informing communities that their air quality is harmful to their health. That is, to me, in a democracy, an amazing thing that we would stand here and allow this to happen, where the EPA would be denied the free speech to go into communities and say: You have to watch out for your health.

Gag rules on clean air and delays on arsenic standards are bad riders. I hope we will strike them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri has 1 minute.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, with respect to the arsenic rider, the National Academy of Sciences says somebody must act, but the EPA has not determined what action must be taken. Give them the full year that the Clean Water Act envisioned. We are doing this so they can conduct the process and not wind up spending their time in court.

With respect to the ozone nonattainment designations, this is simply saying: Don't go out and put black eyes on communities when lower courts have said that the EPA doesn't have the authority to issue those designations. Wait until you find out whether they actually have the authority to go out and brand a community as being out of attainment with this particular standard until you find out whether it is lawful.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join with me in opposing this amendment.

Mr. President, I move to table amendment No. 4308, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 4308. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) and the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. GRAMS) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote ''no.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 63, nays 32, as follows:

CHANGE OF VOTE

Mr. DODD. Mr. President on rollcall No. 270, I voted aye. It was my intention to vote no. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to change my vote since it would in no way change the outcome of that vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The foregoing tally has been changed to reflect the above order.)

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, on behalf of the leader, I ask unanimous consent that the next votes in this series be limited to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from California.

AMENDMENT NO. 4309

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, do I have 1 minute to describe this amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, this is a simple amendment. It is a sense of the Congress and says the following:

It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the Nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metal, and other toxic chemicals in order to protect the public health, safety, and the environment.

I think this is very straightforward. I think we should all join hands and support the amendment. Why do I think we need it? There is report language in this bill that we believe delays the cleanup of these sites. The managers say, no, they don't think it will result in delay. If that is the case, then why can't we all join hands and support this sense of the Congress?

My goodness; we ought to protect our environment in this way. It seems to me if we have PCBs, if we have DDT with an ocean environment, a bay environment, or river environment, it is going to harm and it is harming the wildlife. That gets passed on to humans as the fish consume the DDT.

I urge a ''yes'' vote.

I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. First, do not be deluded by the phrase ''sense of the Congress.'' This is not a free ride on the riders. There are consequences if this passes. It is a dangerous amendment. This amendment will then go to a formal conference. The House will not accept our decision. This bill will then die as so many other things are dying. It will die quickly, as a matter of fact.

Second, in terms of the consequences to policy, first of all, there are so many exceptions in this bill, one of which is that this language does not apply if EPA says the site poses a threat to public health. It does not apply if a voluntary agreement is in place, if dredging is already occurring in a site. If a site has an approved plan by October 1, 2000, it doesn't apply.

Guess what. It sunsets on June 30, 2000. Let's just sunset the amendment and move on.

Mr. BOND. I move to table and ask for yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to a motion to table the amendment No. 4309. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

SECTION 404

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I would like to discuss with the distinguished chair of the Appropriations Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies the role of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) in the Section 404 permitting process. FEMA and the Section 404 wetlands permitting program are subject to the authorization jurisdiction of the committee I chair, the Senate Environment and public Works Committee, and receive their funding through this appropriations bill.

Mr. BOND. I would be delighted to discuss this matter with my colleague from New Hampshire.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. As the Senator knows, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was not established with the intent that it become a regulatory agency. Rather, the principal mission of the Agency is to administer relief to areas of our nation that are suffering from catastrophic events such as floods or hurricanes. The Section 404 permitting program under the Clean Water Act, as the Senator also knows well, is a complicated and controversial federal regulatory program administered primarily by the Army Corps of Engineers. However, the Environmental Protection Agency also has a major role in the implementation of the program that includes the ability to veto decisions by the Corps to issue specific Section 404 permits. I believe that two agencies implementing a federal regulatory program is quite enough.

Mr. BOND. I am familiar with the Section 404 program and agree with the Senator's observations.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I have two specific concerns regarding FEMA and the Section 404 program. First, I understand that a new rule on nationwide permits was issued by the Corps effective June 7, 2000. Nationwide permits are a streamlined permitting process that apply to minor wetlands disturbances that have a minimal impact on the nation's wetlands. These permits are very important to the operation of the program since as many as 85 percent of the permits issued by the Corps each year are nationwide permits. One aspect of this new rule makes it very difficult to obtain nationwide permits in the one hundred year floodplain. According to the Corps, 53 percent of the floodplain is subject to the jurisdiction of the Section 404 program. The rule provides that certain nationwide permits can be obtained in a portion of the hundred year floodplain if approved by FEMA or the local flood control agency.

Congress has not authorized a role for FEMA in the Section 404 permitting process. Is it your understanding that this new rule will be implemented in such a fashion that FEMA will not become a regulatory agency with respect to Section 404 nationwide permits?

Mr. BOND. I agree with the Senator that FEMA should not have a regulatory role in the Section 404 program and that there is some lack of clarity in the new nationwide permit rule regarding FEMA's role. The report of the Committee that accompanies this legislation contains language requesting detailed information from FEMA regarding their implementation plans under this new rule. I can assure the Senator that we will address his concerns as we work with FEMA on their funding needs and requests.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I thank the Senator for his attention to my concerns about FEMA's role in the 404 program. I would also call the Committee's attention to the related problem of the issuance of individual 404 permits in the 100 year floodplain. I believe it is important to emphasize that, just as in the case of nationwide permits. FEMA does not have a regulatory role in the issuance of individual permits under Section 404. Whether or not there should be such a policy in the hundred year floodplain is an issue that Congress may wish to address in the future. However, for now, I believe that it must be restated that FEMA has not been authorized a decisional role in whether or not an individual Section 404 permit should be issued nor the conditions of a Section 404 permit. We do not need a third federal agency with a decisional role in the Section 404 permitting program. Obviously, FEMA may comment on applications for Section 404 permits, as may any citizen or federal agency, but that opportunity must not be transformed into a decisional role. Does the Senator agree with me on this point? Is it the Senator's understanding that the funds in this bill will not be used by FEMA to play a decisional role in the issuance of individual Section 404 permits in the hundred year floodplain?

Mr. BOND. I agree with the Senator on this point. The funds in this bill are not to be used by FEMA to play a decisional role in the issuance of individual Section 404 permits in the hundred year floodplain.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from Missouri.

ASSISTING VETERANS WITH DISABILITIES

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Chairman of the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee yield for a question?

Mr. BOND. I will be pleased to yield for a question from the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. First, I want to compliment the Chairman and the Ranking Member, Ms. MIKULSKI, for bringing this bill to the Senator floor and for the Subcommittee's attention to the health, rehabilitation and research programs funded by this bill that are critical to our Nation's veterans.

I also want to compliment the Chairman and the Ranking Member for the subcommittee's report language that urges the VA's Rehabilitation Research Office to conduct a demonstration project to assess the impact of a new mobility technology on the ability of veterans to perform work functions, thereby leading to increased opportunities for veterans with disabilities to return to work. This innovative mobility device is a major advance in that it has the ability to climb stairs, traverse all terrain and balance the seated user at standing eye-level. It should, I hope, provide veterans who have mobility impairments with significant additional opportunities in the workplace. The demonstration project called for by the Subcommittee's language will help clarify the additional employment opportunities that such a device should create for our Nation's veterans. I thank the Subcommittee for its assistance in making process on this matter.

With new and emerging technologies becoming available that can assist veterans with disabilities, it is vital that the VA keep pace with the marketplace and ensure that veterans with disabilities have access to these advancements. I have had the pleasure of seeing this new mobility device perform its functions and it clearly holds great promise. I am hopeful that this demonstration project will show a significant impact that this device can have on the ability of veterans with disabilities to return to work and I am eager on review the findings of the demonstration. Would the Chairman agree that the demonstration that is requested in the Subcommittee's language be completed by May 1, 2001?

Mr. BOND. Yes, I think that the more than 7 months between now and May 1, 2001, is ample time to complete the demonstration project. I thank Senator LEVIN for his work on this important issue and for bringing it to the Subcommittee's attention.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chairman for his continuing leadership on this matter.

DREDGING

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this Manager's Amendment contains language which would direct the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to take no action to initiate or order the use of dredging or invasive remedial technologies where a final plan has not been adopted prior to October 1, 2000, or where such activities are not now occurring until the NAS report has been completed and its findings have been properly considered by the Agency. Would the Senator from Maryland be willing to clarify a few questions about this language?

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I would be pleased to offer information about this Amendment to my friend from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Is it understood that the Environmental Protection Agency has the discretion to define ''threat to public health'' and ''urgent case'' as those terms are applied to the exceptions? Further, is it understood that the EPA has the discretion to define ''properly considered.''

Ms. MIKULSKI. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. Does the Senator from Missouri, the Chairman of the Subcommittee, agree with these clarifications?

Mr. BOND. I agree with the Senator from Maryland and join in her interpretation of this language.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, as always, I appreciate the courtesy of the distinguished Senators from Maryland and Missouri.

GREAT WATERS PROGRAM

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, we congratulate the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Appropriations Committee for presenting the Senate with an Appropriations bill which addresses so many of the water quality issues confronting America today. We also want to reiterate our support for a program of great interest to our colleagues from the Great Lakes states.

Mr. LEVIN. The Great Waters program, authorized by the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, assesses air deposition as a source of toxic contamination to key water bodies, including the Great Lakes and Chesapeake Bay. Research suggests that at least half of all new toxic pollution loadings entering the Great Lakes may be transported and deposited by the atmosphere. Consistent funding for the monitoring of air deposition of toxic contaminants is especially critical at this time as the international community completes negotiations of an international treaty on persistent organic pollutants. The Great Waters program will provide a key component of the database used to judge the effectiveness of this international agreement in lowering the toxic contaminants entering the Great Lakes, and other great waters of the United States, from foreign sources.

Mr. DEWINE. I would like to ask the distinguished Chairman if the bill provides sufficient funding through the parent account to restore funding for critical monitoring under the Great Waters program to the fiscal year 1999 level of effort?

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I want to thank the distinguished Senators from Ohio and Michigan for highlighting the importance of the Great Waters program. We are pleased to recommend continuation of this program which is so vital to understanding the impact of airborne toxins on aquatic ecosystems. I assure the Senator that the intention of this bill is to restore sufficient funding to allow assessment of our progress in reducing the amount of toxic pollution entering the nation's waters.

THE CENTREDALE MANOR RESTORATION PROJECT

Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I appreciate the work of the subcommittee chairman and ranking minority Member in putting together this year's VA-HUD appropriations bill. I would like to clarify one matter of importance regarding removing an environmental threat in a Rhode Island community. The Centredale Manor Restoration Project is a Superfund site in North Providence, RI. With my encouragement, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has been moving quickly at this site. The site was only added to the National Priorities List in February of this year and several removal actions have been conducted at the site. Recently, the EPA released a proposed Engineering Evaluation/Cost Analysis that recommends replacement of the Allendale Dam and excavation of contaminated soils from residential properties along the Woonasquatucket River. These clean-up plans—requiring excavation of approximately 2,500 cubic yards of soils and sediments—were intended to be finalized later this year after the current public comment period, with design and construction work to follow shortly thereafter. There is a great deal of local support for getting on with this clean up and removing dangerous contaminants from North Providence neighborhoods.

I understand that the report attached to this bill contains language directing EPA to wait until completion of the current National Academy of Sciences study of sediment remediation technology, and proper consideration of the NAS study as it relates to EPA remedy selection, before finalizing any more dredging plans. The NAS study is scheduled to be completed no later than January 1, 2001. It seems to me this report language would allow the EPA to continue planning associated with the Centredale Manor cleanup, including replacement of Allendale dam and excavation of contaminated soils and sediments in and along the Woonasquatucket River, at the North Providence Superfund site. Ultimately, I believe that following consideration of the NAS study, EPA will be able to finalize the cleanup plan and implement that final plan during the 2001 construction season. I would like to confirm with the Chairman of the VA-HUD Appropriations Subcommittee that the report language is not intended to delay progress toward cleaning up contamination at the Centredale Manor Restoration Project in North Providence.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, the Senator from Rhode Island is correct. The conference report language on dredging and EPA review of the pending study by the National Academy of Sciences is not intended to delay progress towards cleaning up contamination at the Centredale Manor Restoration Project in Rhode Island. It is intended to ensure that EPA considers the findings of the NAS study in selecting remedies involving contaminated sediments.

Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I appreciate the chairman's clarification of this matter.

TEA–21

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I would like to engage the Chairman of the VA–HUD Appropriations Subcommittee in a brief colloquy on an important matter.

It is my understanding that the managers' amendment that we are adopting includes a rider which prohibits the EPA from making nonattainment designations under the new 8-hour ozone standard until June 15, 2001, or the final adjudication of the American Trucking Association vs. EPA case now before the Supreme Court, whichever comes first. Is that right?

Mr. BOND. The Senator from New Jersey is correct.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. While I believe that inclusion of this rider is unfortunate as it will slow progress toward cleaner air, I understand that it should have little practical effect. EPA is unlikely to make those designations much in advance of June 15, 2001, in any case, even though all but about 6 states have submitted proposed areas for nonattainment designation.

I would just like to make one thing very clear for the record. This rider is a prohibition on the expenditures of funds. It does not negate the requirement included in TEA–21 that areas be designated under the new ozone standard. It also does not in any way prejudice the litigation pending before the Supreme Court. Would the distinguished Chairman confirm that these points are true?

Mr. BOND. Yes, Mr. President, the Senator is correct. This language does not modify section 6103 of TEA–21, nor is it intended to affect the Supreme Court's consideration of the litigation on these standards in any way.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I concur with the Subcommittee Chairman and the Senator from New Jersey.

CERCLA

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I would like to clarify a section in the statement of the managers accompanying the conference report. The language directs EPA to take no action to initiate or order the use of certain technologies such as dredging until certain steps have been taken with respect to the National Academy of Sciences report, with exceptions for voluntary agreements and urgent cases. It is my understanding that after June 30, 2001, or when EPA has properly considered the NAS report, whichever comes first, the conferees intend that EPA could proceed to finalize any such plans and act on those plans through steps to initiate or order dredging and other technologies, as appropriate.

Mr. BOND. The Senator is correct. The statement of the managers is not intended to limit EPA's authority to act on a plan that is finalized in accordance with the conditions set out.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. It is also my understanding that in directing EPA to properly consider the NAS report, the conferees are not intending to change the normal criteria by which EPA selects remedies, such as the factors laid out in CERCLA, the National Contingency Plan, and applicable guidance. Instead, the conferees are asking EPA to disseminate the report to officials within the Agency who make remedy selection decisions and to ask them to review it as part of the larger body of research on scientific and technical issues associated with hazardous waste cleanup. The NAS report is not being singled out for special deference greater than it would otherwise receive.

Mr. BOND. The Senator is correct. The statement of the managers calling for EPA to properly consider the NAS report is not a change in the CERCLA remedy selection process, it is not a call for an EPA response to the report, and is not a direction to give the report more weight than it would otherwise receive.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. It is also my understanding that urgent cases would include situations in which contaminated sediments, either alone or through their accumulation in fish, cause significant risks to public health such as increases in cancer risks, reproductive effects, or birth defects.

Mr. BOND. The Senator is correct.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I concur with the subcommittee chairman and Senator LAUTENBERG.

EPA'S ENDOCRINE DISRUPTOR SCREENING PROGRAM

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I want to call the Senate's attention to a program that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is implementing in a way that I believe is inconsistent with the original intent of Congress. The Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program, EDSP, was created by EPA to implement language in the Food Quality Protection Act, FQPA, and Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996 requiring that EPA, and I quote, ''develop a screening program, using appropriate validated test systems and other scientifically relevant information, to determine whether certain substances may have an effect in humans that is similar to an effect produced by a naturally occurring estrogen, or other such endocrine effect . . .'' The Program was required to be implemented by August 1, 1999.

This program has been plagued by a lack of public participation from key constituencies, an expansive interpretation of the Congressional mandate, questionable decisions as to the validation of testing protocols, and neglect of money appropriated for the development of non-animal tests.

In October 1996 EPA formed the Endocrine Disruptor Screening and Testing Advisory Committee, EDSTAC, under the Federal Advisory Committee Act to advise EPA on risk assessment techniques for endocrine disrupting chemicals. EDSTAC included scientists and representatives from EPA and other government agencies, industry, national environmental groups, worker protection groups, environmental justice groups, and research scientists. More recently, EPA set up the Endocrine Disruptor Standardization and Validation Task Force to perform the work needed to develop, standardize, and validate the screens and tests proposed for the Program. However, one very important constituency was not included in either of these groups—in fact they were excluded—they are the animal welfare groups. Traditionally, these groups have been left out of the consultation process of EPA regarding the newly initiated chemical testing programs. Any program that includes testing of chemicals for toxicity or other effects involves the use of animals in such testing, however, the groups that advocate for animal welfare were excluded from providing early input in the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program.

As Chairman of the committee with jurisdiction over the testing and handling of toxic chemicals, the Committee on Environment and Public Works, I am particularly concerned about how this program is being administered. In addition to the lack of public input, a major concern deals with the large number of animals used in testing that could occur as a result of EPA's implementation plan for this program. On August 25, 2000, EPA published a report to Congress on the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program that sets forth the findings, recommendations and further actions of EPA in implementing the EDSP. The implementation plan that EPA has come up with is broader than the plain language of the FQPA. While obtaining better data on endocrine disruptors is certainly a worthy goal, I am concerned about the expansion of this congressionally mandated program. The broad interpretation by the EPA of the chemicals to test and the method of validation calls into question whether this program will be implemented in a manner consistent with the intent of Congress. All of these expanded interpretations increase the number of test animals needed to implement the program.

The law specifically states that EPA is to ''use appropriately validated tests.'' EPA has interpreted the law to mean that animal tests can be validated through the EPA's own Science Advisory Board, however, non-animal tests must be run through a more rigorous Interagency Coordinating Committee for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ICCVAM) process. ICCVAM was created as a standing committee in 1997 and is composed of representatives of fifteen Federal regulatory or research agencies that regulate the use of animals in toxicology testing; EPA is a co-chair of ICCVAM. The ICCVAM process with input from the EPA Science Advisory Board reviews can ensure that the tests, animal or non-animal, will produce good results. I believe all tests should be assessed for validation by ICCVAM.

My comments up until now have been critical of the plan that EPA has put forth for future implementation of the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program. Last year, Congress appropriated

$5 million for the development and implementation of the test methods including the high throughput prescreen, a non-animal screening process. After spending $70,000, the Agency has stopped working to integrate the high throughput pre-screen into the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program. Although this specific example concerns me, it is only one example of the general disinterest of EPA in integrating non-animal tests into the program. I urge the EPA's Office of Research and Development to apportion funds to prioritize research, development and validation of non-animal tests.

Mr. BOND. Thank you for your insight and comments on EPA's Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program. We are in agreement that EPA should implement the Program better. EPA should also pursue the validation and incorporation of non-animal testing as soon as practicable.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I want to thank the Senator from Missouri for his comments and hope we can continue to work together on the monitoring of this and other EPA programs.

MILITARY RETIREES

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, as you know, current law requires that for a military retiree to receive his VA disability compensation he must waive an equal part of his retirement pay. This issue is frequently referred to as ''concurrent receipt,'' because it would involve the simultaneous receipt of two types of benefits.

The service connected disabled military retiree is the only person that is forced to pay for their own disability compensation. A worker in private industry is not forced to pay for his own disability. Likewise, local, State and federal civil servants, appointed and elected officials are not forced to pay for their own disability compensation.

For several years I have worked closely with military retirees and veterans organizations to change the law to permit receipt of all deserved benefits. This is a step that this Congress must take. It is unfair that a person who serves his or her country and has a service-connected disability can't draw both benefits.

Legislation to fix concurrent receipt has been introduced during the past several Congresses. Last year, thanks in great part to the efforts of the Chairman and the Ranking Member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the Senate took a first step towards fixing this problem by authorizing a concurrent receipt provision for severely disabled military retirees. The existing concurrent receipt restrictions, however, remain in effect.

This year, the Senate again made an effort to solve the concurrent receipt problem. During debate on the Department of Defense Authorization bill, the Senate included an amendment to completely repeal concurrent receipt laws. This would allow all veterans to receive their full disability compensation along with their retired pay. When the conference report to the Defense Authorization bill reached desk of the conferees, however, they were faced with an insurmountable financial problem.

The Defense Authorization conference report that is being considered today contains crucial provisions that will enable the government to fulfill its first priority: to provide a strong national defense. In addition, the Act contains significant and necessary increases in overall defense spending, especially directed at improving morale and retention. One of the most important of these provisions is an amendment, fulfilling a broken promise, which will give the same health care benefits to military retirees as those available to active duty service members. Therefore, I will support the Defense Authorization bill.

However, I want to take this opportunity to declare my intentions and to call upon my colleagues for their support. As part of the annual budget process next year, I will work with my colleague from Nevada, Mr. REID, who has dedicated a great deal of time to this effort, to include budget cap room for concurrent receipt.

I want to remind my colleagues, the service connected disabled military retiree is the only person who is forced to pay for his own disability compensation. It is simply unfair that a person who serves his or her country and has a service-connected disability can't draw both his VA and disability benefits concurrently.

This is a situation that must be fixed and I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to ensure that our servicemembers, active duty and retired, receive the full benefits that they deserve.

HOUSING NEEDS

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I thank Senators BOND and MIKULSKI for their good work on this year's VA–HUD appropriations bill. Also, I would like to congratulate Secretary Cuomo on the hard work he has done to raise awareness of the critical housing needs many Americans are experiencing around the country.

As the ranking member on the Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee, I have a very keen interest in the portion of this bill that funds the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This year's budget is a strong step in the right direction. The bill contains increases in spending for many of the critical housing programs that serve middle- and low-income families.

It includes funding for nearly 80,000 new section 8 housing vouchers. These vouchers will provide additional housing resources for families experiencing critical housing needs.

Funding for the HOME and CDBG programs has been increased by $200 million and $300 million over last year's levels respectively. These are programs that local governments and non-profits rely on to build and rehabilitate affordable housing, as well as revitalize communities.

The Committee has also provided for an increase in the homeless budget, which includes emergency shelter, permanent housing, counseling, and job training services. For the approximately 500,000 people that are homeless in this country on any given night, this additional money will mean a better chance to find a bed in a shelter, a soup kitchen at which to eat, or a permanent home.

They also took the important step of providing a stream of funding to renew Shelter Plus Care vouchers. This will enable local providers to continue to build up the infrastructure they need to serve this vulnerable population.

This year's budget builds on the public housing reform legislation we passed two years ago by increasing the public housing operating and capital funds, enabling local public housing authorities to maintain and invest in their properties.

Also included is a two year extension of The Federal Housing Administration's Down Payment Simplification Program. This will allow the FHA to continue using the simplified formula to extend homeownership to more American families.

Additionally, there is an increase in spending for the Lead Paint Hazard program, a very important program for cities trying to abate the poisonous lead paint found in their housing stock.

Lastly, I want to thank Senators BOND and MIKULSKI for their efforts in pushing one provision that did not make it into the bill, that is, a new housing production program. While I am disappointed that we were unable to achieve this in the end, I appreciate their acknowledgment of the housing crisis our nation is experiencing.

The long-term answer to this problem will have to be the dedication of new resources to building additional housing. While the nearly 80,000 new section 8 vouchers will help to alleviate the severe housing crunch that many working American families experience, I hope we will be able to revisit the topic of production again next year.

All in all, this is a very good bill. I am very pleased and again congratulate my colleagues on a well thought out, well funded, piece of legislation.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, as all Senators are aware, I have taken the floor on a number of occasions, not only this year, but over the past several years, to express my concern about the manner in which the Senate was disposing of certain appropriation bills. This year—as in three previous fiscal years, fiscal years 1997, 1999, and 2000—the Senate has, until today, again been unable to take up and debate and amend several fiscal year 2001 appropriations bills; namely, Treasury/General Government, VA/HUD, and Commerce/Justice/State appropriations bills. I have been deeply concerned that the Senate is in danger of becoming a mere adjunct of the House, when it comes to consideration of appropriations bills.

In light of the circumstances in which we find ourselves, so near the end of the 106th Congress, I was pleased to support the unanimous consent agreement entered into yesterday. Under that agreement, the Senate has before it this morning the Fiscal Year 2001 VA/HUD Appropriations bill, as amended by the Senate Appropriations Committee. That Committee-reported bill has been amended by a Committee substitute offered by Senators BOND and MIKULSKI. Despite the fact that the Senate has not taken up the VA/HUD Appropriations bill until today, the fact is that Chairman BOND and Ranking Member MIKULSKI have worked tirelessly on the substitute before the Senate today. They have worked with the Administration and the other body to pound out an agreement that is acceptable to all parties involved in those negotiations. So, I am pleased that the many hours that they have devoted to this effort have resulted in the agreement now about to be adopted by the Senate. As is always the case, when it comes to appropriations bills, no one is fully satisfied with the final agreements that are reached. I am sure that there are areas where members would prefer to see changes made, but the time has come and gone for us to complete our work on the Fiscal Year 2001 appropriations bills—a fiscal year which began some 12 days ago.

Mr. President, as I explained earlier in my remarks, the Senate, until today, had not taken up the VA/HUD bill, or the Treasury/General Government bill, or the Commerce/Justice/State bill. The amendment at the desk places before the Senate the Committee-reported FY–2001 Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill.

This is the only opportunity that the Senate has had to consider the Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill, other than its being presented to the Senate on September 14th in a combined Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report, which was unamendable. The inclusion of the Treasury/General Government appropriations in the Legislative Branch conference report was not amendable and precluded the Senate's opportunity to debate and amend the Treasury/General Government bill on the Senate floor. Instead, on September 14th, Senators were asked to vote on the unamendable conference report, which contained not only the Legislative Branch Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2001, but also the Treasury/General Government Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2001. The vote on that combined conference report was 28 yeas and 69 nays. The motion to reconsider that vote is still pending.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that several adjustments to that Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report have been made in the form of amendments to the Transportation Appropriations bill, which were adopted in conference and were included as part of the Transportation conference report, which has now passed both Houses of Congress and is awaiting the President's signature. I do not intend to discuss those amendments in detail at this time, but instead will point out that a concern by Senator REID regarding the selection of a chief administrative officer for the Capitol Police has been resolved in that Transportation conference, together with substantial increases in funding for the IRS and certain other matters pertaining to the Treasury/General Government portion of that combined conference report.

As a result of these amendments regarding the Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report, it is my understanding that that conference report is now acceptable to the Chairmen and Ranking Members of those two Subcommittees, and I believe it is the intention of the Leadership to bring up and dispose of that combined Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report immediately following completion of consideration of the VA/HUD Appropriations conference report, which is currently before the Senate.

Mr. President, I urged the Leaders to allow for the amendment to put before the Senate the Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill, as reported by the Appropriations Committee, in order to preserve, at least to some extent, the Senate's right to take up appropriations bills prior to their being inserted into unamendable conference reports. I appreciate that the Leaders accommodated my request. Although, under the unanimous consent agreement, there will be no opportunity to amend the Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill, at least we have preserved the Senate's right to consider it. I am encouraged by the fact that the Majority Leader, at this late hour of the session, has attempted, as best he could, to allow some semblance of Senate consideration of the VA/HUD and the Treasury/General Government appropriations bills. I am hopeful that a similar agreement can be reached on the one remaining appropriations bill which the Senate has not yet acted upon—the Commerce/Justice/State Appropriations bill.

I am also very hopeful that we can find a way to ensure that the Senate can return to the regular appropriations process in the next Congress and all congresses thereafter, whereby appropriations bills are reported by the Committee and taken up in the Senate for debate and amendment prior to their being inserted into unamendable conference reports.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to explain my votes on the amendments offered by Senator BOXER to the VA–HUD Appropriations bill relating to legislative riders that were attached to the bill. Included in the bill were provisions that would potentially delay the issuance of rules on arsenic, the declaration of new ozone non-attainment areas, and ordering dredging for the clean up of PCB's. Senator BOXER offered amendments that would have eliminated or weakened these provisions. She has worked hard for our environment, and has been a leader on ecological issues, so I regret I had to vote against her proposals. Unfortunately I had to oppose her for several reasons. First, the amendments, if accepted would have seriously disrupted Congress's efforts to complete our work on the budget. These amendments would have resulted in additional delays, and could have jeopardized the fate of the bill.

I was also concerned because the Administration did not oppose, and did not agree with the dire assessment of the effects of these riders. Staff at the EPA do not believe that these riders will result in any significant delays. EPA does not believe that the dredging language included in the bill will delay action on the Fox River in my state, but it will ensure that we use the best science available when EPA develops clean up plans.

Senators BOND and MIKULSKI, along with the Administration, have done their best to neuter destructive language that was included in the House version of this bill, and I think they have done well. We would prefer that these riders not be included at all, but if they must, at least they were included in a way that is unlikely to have any negative effect on the environment.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am very pleased that this year's VA, HUD Appropriations bill contains $1 million for the City of Detroit for the Detroit River walkway or promenade. The riverfront is a focal point of Detroit's redevelopment efforts in connection with the City's upcoming 300th anniversary and plans are underway to construct an extensive, pedestrian-friendly walkway or promenade along the shoreline. I have personally been able to obtain support from this body for that purpose. The grant provided for in this bill will help defray the costs of the project, such as land acquisition, walkway installation and building demolition, and will help give Detroit a world-class waterfront.

We also have before the Senate today two very important amendments to this bill. The first would strike language in the report which delays the Environmental Protection Agency from making a final regulation for arsenic in drinking water. The National Academy of Sciences has found that the current regulations for the levels of arsenic in our water are unacceptable. The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed to lower the standard from the current 50 parts per billion to 5 parts per billion. I support that proposal and regret that I had to vote against this amendment. However, this amendment contained two provisions and it is the other provision I do not support.

That part of this amendment would strike language in the report which prevents the Environmental Protection Agency from designating an area in nonattainment under the Clean Air Act pursuant to the 8-hour national ambient air quality standard for ozone. I agree that an ozone standard should be in place to protect public health and the environment. However, the Environmental Protection Agency's authority to issue the 8-hour standard is currently under review by the United States Supreme Court. The Court will hear argument on November 7 to decide whether to uphold a Court of Appeals decision that invalidated the 8-hour standard on the grounds that the agency had assumed an ''unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.'' Even the EPA has agreed that it cannot actually implement efforts with respect to the 8-hour standard. Until the Supreme Court hears this case, we do not know whether the EPA even had the authority to make this new rule. Therefore, I agree that the EPA should refrain from using the standard—a standard that may be struck down as unenforceable—until the Supreme Court has made its determination regarding the constitutionality of the EPA's actions.

Now this isn't a frivolous matter. A nonattainment designation can detrimentally affect an area and, if not justified, would cause needless economic hardship, such as costly transportation conformity measures, should the Supreme Court rule that the 8-hour standard is unenforceable. Further, this standard could impose unfair economic burdens on a number of communities in Michigan that suffer from significant ozone and other pollution transported from more severely polluted areas. And it could be all for nought if the Supreme Court strikes down the standard.

Mr. President, I support the goals of the Clean Air Act. However, it needs to be applied in a common sense equitable manner if it is to retain the support of the American People. It is not equitable to designate an area in nonattainment if that designation may become null and void in a matter of months. For these reasons I voted against the Boxer Amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I am pleased that, with my support, the Senate took another step today toward fulfilling our country's commitment to provide health care for our veterans. The fiscal year 2001 VA–HUD Appropriations Conference Report that passed the Senate this afternoon contains a $1.4 billion increase in veterans health care funding from the last year's appropriations level.

While I am pleased that we have finally come around to talking about additional funding for veterans health care, as opposed to three years of flatline budget levels, I am disappointed that the funding level in the FY2001 VA–HUD Appropriations Conference Report falls short of the level proposed by veterans organizations.

The authoritative Independent Budget is produced by major veterans organizations including AMVETS, the Disabled American Veterans, the Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the VFW. The Independent Budget and The American Legion agree that the Veterans Administration will need at least $500 million more in funding than provided by this conference report.

I am pleased to have led the effort last year in the Senate to increase veterans health care funding. Through my efforts on the Senate Budget Committee and on the Senate floor, we were able to start reversing the negative effects of three years of flat-lined veterans health care budgets with an increase of $1.7 billion. I am pleased that my efforts appear to have convinced the Administration and Members of Congress to start talking about increases in veterans health care funding instead of keeping this budget stagnant.

This year, I was successful in getting a bipartisan amendment passed to the Senate Budget Resolution that added an additional $1.9 billion to last year's funding for veterans health care. The conference report that passed the Senate today fell $500 million short of this goal and will prevent the VA from adequately funding a number of important programs including medical care, research, long term care, and necessary facility construction and renovation.

While the $1.4 billion increase in this year's VA budget and the $1.7 billion increase from last year are important improvements, I'm afraid the funds are simply providing budgetary backfill for the years when the veterans health care needs were ignored. We need a VA veterans' health care budget that can adequately offset years of underfunding, the higher costs of medical care caused by consumer inflation, wage increases, and legislation passed by Congress. For the first time in a number of years, we're working with overall budget surpluses instead of budget deficits. Clearly, the funds are there to provide for veterans health care. It is simply a question of whether the political will is there to make veterans health care a priority instead of an afterthought.

As a member of the Senate Budget Committee, I will continue to do all I can to encourage my colleagues to approve adequate funding levels for veterans health care. I look forward to continue working on a bipartisan basis with my Senate colleagues as well as with representatives of the veterans community in South Dakota.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, the final version of the fiscal year 2001 Energy and Water Development appropriations provides $1 million for the Bureau of Reclamation to initiate a comprehensive Hopi/Western Navajo water development study. This funding was added to the bill at my request, and I would like to take this opportunity to detail the reason why I consider this to be a very important undertaking.

Efforts have been ongoing for several years to settle the various water rights claims of the Navajo and Hopi Indian tribes and other water users in the Little Colorado River watershed of Northern Arizona. Numerous proposals have been advanced in an effort to settle these water-rights claims, including identifying alternative sources of water, means of delivery and points of usage to help provide a reliable source of good-quality water to satisfy the present and future demands of Indian communities on those reservations. Cost estimates for the various existing proposals run into the hundreds of millions of dollars, the majority of which would likely be borne by the federal government. This study is needed to identify the most cost-effective projects that will serve to meet these objectives.

I have asked the Bureau to hire an outside contractor to complete this study to ensure that a fresh and objective analysis of existing studies and data is conducted. In addition, using a private contractor will enable the Bureau to complete the study in a timely manner without requiring the Bureau to divert personnel needed to accomplish other vital priorities. The study should be complete and submitted to the Senate Appropriations Committee as soon as possible, but no later than April 1, 2002.

I also want to assure the parties that this study is intended to be used to facilitate this settlement, and cannot be used for any other purpose in any administrative or judicial proceeding.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President. I rise to speak about a provision in the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations bill, which was passed by the Senate today. Specifically, I want to speak about the substantial backlog of civil rights claims that have been filed with the Environmental Protection Agency's, EPA, Office of Civil Rights, OCR.

As my colleagues know, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 provides that no person in the United States shall, on the grounds of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be otherwise subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance. For thirty-five years, this law has been a cornerstone of our nation's civil rights protections. To better implement Title VI in federal environmental programs, President Clinton issued an Executive Order in 1994 requiring each federal agency ''to make achieving environmental justice part of its mission by identifying and addressing, as appropriate, disproportionately high and adverse human health or environmental effects of its programs, policies, and activities on minority populations.''

Under EPA's Title VI implementing regulations, 40 CFR Section 7, EPA-funded permitting agencies are prohibited from taking actions in the permitting process that are intentionally discriminatory or have a discriminatory effect based on race, color, or national origin. Under these regulations OCR is required to ''promptly'' investigate all complaints filed under Title VI unless all parties agree to a delay [40 CFR Section 7.120]. OCR is first required to initiate complaint proceedings within 5 days of receipt of a complaint [40 CFR Section 7.120(d)]. Then it must review the complaint for acceptance, rejection, or referral to another agency and make a determination within 25 days of the receipt of the complaint [40 CFR Section 7.120(d)(1)]. If a complaint is accepted, EPA must make a preliminary finding in the matter, including recommendations, if any, for achieving voluntary compliance, and OCR must notify the recipient of these finding within 180 days of the start of the complaint investigation. [40 CFR Section 7.120(d)(2)].

Unfortunately according to the OCR's most recent log of cases filed on October 4, 2000, 103 Title VI claims have been filed since September 1993. Of these, over half, 56 cases, are still pending. The remainder were either rejected or dismissed over jurisdictional issues. Eleven of the still active cases have been pending for 5 years or more, without resolution. Only one case has been resolved by a decision of the OCR, which found that there was not a legally recognizable ''adverse impact'' on the community and denied the community's request for reconsideration.

To further complicate resolution for these civil rights claims, in 1998 a rider was inserted in the VA–HUD Appropriations bill that blocked the implementation or administration of the interim Guidance to enforce Title VI claims issued on February 5, 1998. This rider has effectively stopped the EPA from investigating and responding to claims of race or national origin discrimination that have been filed with the Agency after October, 1998. That same rider has been on all subsequent VA/HUD bills, including this one.

This summer the EPA revised it's Guidance, which was noticed in the Federal Register for public comment. The revision is titled ''Draft Revised Guidance for Investigating Title VI Administrative Complaints Challenging Permits.'' I am pleased that the rider, included in this VA/HUD Appropriations bill, would not apply to the EPA's revised Guidance.

However a there still remains a large backlog of cases to be acted upon. There were 35 complaints filed after the first rider in 1998. To date only one has been accepted for investigation. Although the step of acceptance or rejection is required under Federal Regulation within 25 days of the receipt of the complaint, 34 of these complaints are more than 25 days old and over half of them, 20 of 34 cases, have been ''under review'' for more than a year.

The EPA's own regulations are clear, regardless of any Guidance. Furthermore, the rider does not account for the entire backlog of unresolved complaints. There are still 21 complaints pending that were filed before the rider blocking the EPA's 1998 Guidance went into effect. Of these cases, 19 have been accepted, but no preliminary findings have been made. Two cases are still under review after 4½ years, and as you will recall the deadline in the federal regulations for accepting cases is 25 days from the initial complaint date. And again, half of the still active cases,—11 of 21—have been pending for 5 years or more, without resolution.

It appears the EPA is out of compliance with it's own regulations for processing civil rights complaints, both for cases filed before and after the effect of the rider. While the rider has no doubt been a hindrance to the Agency, it clearly does not absolve the Agency of its responsibilities under the 36 year old civil rights law. And the Agency's own regulations lay out a clear framework for processing and acting on complaints.

Several environmental and civil rights organizations have written to Congressional leaders on this backlog. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter to the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Subcommittee from the NAACP, and a letter from the Earthjustice Legal Defense Fund be entered into the RECORD following my statement.

In closing, I am pleased the Administration appears to be working to finalize the revised Guidance. However, I remain concerned that the EPA has established no clear way of dealing with the backlog of civil rights claims that have built up over the past seven years.

Therefore, as a Senator from Minnesota, I call on the EPA, as expeditiously as possible, to resolve the many backlogged civil rights claims, several of which have been pending for years. Only then will we be able to fulfill the intent of the landmark 1964 Civil Rights Act.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE,
Washington, DC, October 11, 2000.

Hon. CHRISTOPHER S. BOND, Chairman,
Hon. BARBARA MIKULSKI, Ranking Member,
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BOND AND SENATOR MIKULSKI: The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest grassroots civil rights organization, strongly opposes the anti-civil rights, anti-environmental rider in the House version of the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Appropriations bill that, for the third year in a row, attempts to interfere with the obligation of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to investigate and resolve Title VI Civil Rights complaints filed with its Office of Civil Rights. We urge you to not accept this rider in the final version of the bill, and to instead insist on bill language that requires the EPA to begin immediately resolving the growing backlog of civil rights complaints filed since 1993 by communities of color struggling for environmental justice.

The rider, as well as the backlog of civil rights complaints, has had the effect of undermining one of the most important laws in this country, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin. The NAACP worked for the enactment of Title VI and continues to work against any actions that may result in racial discrimination. Therefore, we are deeply troubled by acts of Congress and actions of government agencies that may result in having a disparate impact on communities of color.

Any community in this nation that feels that it is threatened by a state environmental agency decision must have access to legal recourse to address its concerns. Historically, these communities have been low-income areas with high concentrations of African Americans, Latino Americans and Asian Americans. The fact that communities of color are disproportionately over-represented among communities with these complaints leads to inevitable concerns that their basic civil rights are being violated. According to the EPA's Office of Civil Rights, there are now 56 complaints lodged with the agency that remain unresolved. Many of these claims were filed with the EPA several years ago. However, the agency has not even notified complainants about whether their complaints have been accepted or rejected—a duty required of the EPA by federal regulations. Of the 21 unresolved complaints that were accepted for investigation, over half were filed more than five years ago. The EPA has failed to render preliminary findings for all of the complaints accepted for investigation. However, federal regulations require the EPA to make preliminary findings within 180 days of the complaint's acceptance for investigation. EPA's failure to comply with federal regulations has blocked resolution of civil rights complaints. As a result, people of color who lack the resources for federal court civil rights litigation are effectively denied access to legal redress at the administrative level. This is a completely unacceptable situation.

The House anti-civil rights, anti-environmental rider makes a bad situation worse. For the last two years and as proposed for next year, the riders expressly prohibit the EPA from investigating and resolving new civil rights complaints. The result has been a maintaining the status quo of concentrating polluting sources in communities of color. By blocking the EPA from developing and implementing concrete manners of resolving these complaints, the rider creates a chilling effect on the EPA for investigating the backlog of complaints. As a result, the riders clearly have added to the problem of the growing backlog of unresolved civil rights complaints.

The rider is an unjust denial of a civil rights remedy for people of color struggling to protect their children and communities from environmental hazards and pollution. It violates the spirit, if not the outright language, of the Constitution of the United States that guarantees every American the right to ''life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.''

We urge you to delete all language from the final bill that could interfere with EPA's ability to investigate civil rights violations, and to insert into the final bill a provision that requires the EPA to resolve the backlog of civil rights complaints as expeditiously as possible. I hope that you will feel free to contact me with any questions or comments you may have on this matter. I look forward to working with you to ensure that the rights of all Americans are protected.

Sincerely,

HILARY O. SHELTON,
Director.

EARTHJUSTICE,
LEGAL DEFENSE FUND,
October 12, 2000.

Hon. PAUL WELLSTONE,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR WELLSTONE: EarthJustice Legal Defense Fund is a non-profit environmental law firm whose mission is to enforce laws that protect our environment through litigation and advocacy. One of these laws is Title VI of the Civil Rights Act, which expressly prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin in federally-funded programs. In 1993, the New Orleans office of Earthjustice successfully represented African American citizens groups in Mississippi by filing the first Title VI Civil Rights complaint with the Environmental Protection Agency (''EPA''), which was against the state's environmental programs that concentrated waste sites in African American communities. Our civil rights complaint protected Mississippi citizens, who were unfairly targeted for additional proposed waste sites.

Clearly, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act is an important remedy to protect people of color who are disproportionately burdened by toxic facilities and waste sites. There have been numerous governmental and academic reports that demonstrate the racial disparities that exist in environmental permitting decisions, which concentrate polluting sources in communities of color. The gains that people of color have made in the struggle for environmental justice have heightened public awareness about this form of racism and established institutional changes at the EPA and other government agencies to address this issue. However, actions taken by Congress over the past three years have taken away the ability of people of color to exercise their civil rights in defense of their health and environment.

The right of citizens to seek legal redress—a cornerstone of our democracy—is blocked by Congressional riders that have prevented the EPA from investigating civil rights complaints for the last two years. This rider is also inserted in this year's VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies bill. Through this rider, Congress has effectively repealed civil rights protections for people who live in fear of industrial accidents and daily breath a cocktail of toxic chemicals spewed by facilities and waste sites in their neighborhoods. As a result of the rider, there has been an increase in the number of civil rights complaints filed with the EPA by people of color that go unanswered. There are now 56 civil rights complaints pending before the EPA's Office of Civil Rights that remain unaddressed, in violation of the agency's own Title VI regulations requiring prompt resolution of claims. The rider's offensive prohibition against investigating new civil rights complaints with tools and analyses developed by the EPA silences people of color. We find that such legislation is a dangerous erosion of our civil rights, which opens the door to new riders that can dismantle civil rights protections in housing, education, employment, and transportation. We find it profoundly disturbing that with one brushstroke of a pen, Congress can set back the gains of the civil rights movement in this country.

The anti-civil rights and anti-environmental rider in the present VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies bill sets a dangerous precedent in this country for taking away the rights of citizens. We deeply appreciate your leadership in opposing this rider and supporting a safe and healthy environment for all communities.

Sincerely,

MONIQUE HARDEN,
Staff Attorney.
JOAN MULHERN,
Senior Legislative Counsel.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered? I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BOND. Before we begin the vote, I urge all my colleagues to support this measure. Senator MIKULSKI and I have worked long and hard. Obviously, we have not made everybody happy, but that is not in our power. We hope we have done well by all of the functions and all of the facilities and departments we serve. We hope our colleagues will be sullen but not rebellious and join us in passing a measure which has so many good things to provide for veterans, housing, environment, space, science, and emergency management.

Again, I thank all my colleagues for their indulgence as we had to go through this unusual episode. I thank our staff, Jon Kamarck, Carolyn Apostolou, Cheh Kim, and Joe Norrell. On the minority side, Paul Carliner and Alexa Mitrakos have been outstanding.

The most valuable ally I have on this measure is the very distinguished Senator from Maryland, Ms. MIKULSKI, to whom I am deeply grateful, and I appreciate her leadership and guidance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I echo the expression of thanks to our staff and to our colleagues. I urge we move immediately to a vote and serve the Nation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill, as amended, pass? The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. GRAMS) and the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote ''aye.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Resolved, That the bill from the House of Representatives (H.R. 4635) entitled ''An Act making appropriations for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, boards, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, and for other purposes.'', do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

DIVISION A

That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, boards, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, and for other purposes, namely:

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

VETERANS BENEFITS ADMINISTRATION

COMPENSATION AND PENSIONS

(INCLUDING TRANSFERS OF FUNDS)

For the payment of compensation benefits to or on behalf of veterans and a pilot program for disability examinations as authorized by law (38 U.S.C. 107, chapters 11, 13, 18, 51, 53, 55, and 61); pension benefits to or on behalf of veterans as authorized by law (38 U.S.C. chapters 15, 51, 53, 55, and 61; 92 Stat. 2508); and burial benefits, emergency and other officers' retirement pay, adjusted-service credits and certificates, payment of premiums due on commercial life insurance policies guaranteed under the provisions of Article IV of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, and for other benefits as authorized by law (38 U.S.C. 107, 1312, 1977, and 2106, chapters 23, 51, 53, 55, and 61; 50 U.S.C. App. 540–548; 43 Stat. 122, 123; 45 Stat. 735; 76 Stat. 1198), $22,766,276,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That not to exceed $17,419,000 of the amount appropriated shall be reimbursed to ''General operating expenses'' and ''Medical care'' for necessary expenses in implementing those provisions authorized in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, and in the Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992 (38 U.S.C. chapters 51, 53, and 55), the funding source for which is specifically provided as the ''Compensation and pensions'' appropriation: Provided further, That such sums as may be earned on an actual qualifying patient basis, shall be reimbursed to ''Medical facilities revolving fund'' to augment the funding of individual medical facilities for nursing home care provided to pensioners as authorized.

READJUSTMENT BENEFITS

For the payment of readjustment and rehabilitation benefits to or on behalf of veterans as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapters 21, 30, 31, 34, 35, 36, 39, 51, 53, 55, and 61, $1,634,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That expenses for rehabilitation program services and assistance which the Secretary is authorized to provide under section 3104(a) of title 38, United States Code, other than under subsection (a)(1), (2), (5) and (11) of that section, shall be charged to the account: Provided further, That funds shall be available to pay any court order, court award or any compromise settlement arising from litigation involving the vocational training program authorized by section 18 of Public Law 98–77, as amended.

VETERANS INSURANCE AND INDEMNITIES

For military and naval insurance, national service life insurance, servicemen's indemnities, service-disabled veterans insurance, and veterans mortgage life insurance as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 19; 70 Stat. 887; 72 Stat. 487, $19,850,000, to remain available until expended.

VETERANS HOUSING BENEFIT PROGRAM FUND PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the cost of direct and guaranteed loans, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the program, as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 37, as amended: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That during fiscal year 2001, within the resources available, not to exceed $300,000 in gross obligations for direct loans are authorized for specially adapted housing loans.

In addition, for administrative expenses to carry out the direct and guaranteed loan programs, $162,000,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

EDUCATION LOAN FUND PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the cost of direct loans, $1,000, as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 3698, as amended: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That these funds are available to subsidize gross obligations for the principal amount of direct loans not to exceed $3,400.

In addition, for administrative expenses necessary to carry out the direct loan program, $220,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION LOANS PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the cost of direct loans, $52,000, as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 31, as amended: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That these funds are available to subsidize gross obligations for the principal amount of direct loans not to exceed $2,726,000.

In addition, for administrative expenses necessary to carry out the direct loan program, $432,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

NATIVE AMERICAN VETERAN HOUSING LOAN PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For administrative expenses to carry out the direct loan program authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 37, subchapter V, as amended, $532,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

GUARANTEED TRANSITIONAL HOUSING LOANS FOR HOMELESS VETERANS PROGRAM ACCOUNT

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

Not to exceed $750,000 of the amounts appropriated by this Act for ''General operating expenses'' and ''Medical care'' may be expended for the administrative expenses to carry out the guaranteed loan program authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 37, subchapter VI.

VETERANS HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

MEDICAL CARE

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For necessary expenses for the maintenance and operation of hospitals, nursing homes, and domiciliary facilities; for furnishing, as authorized by law, inpatient and outpatient care and treatment to beneficiaries of the Department of Veterans Affairs, including care and treatment in facilities not under the jurisdiction of the department; and furnishing recreational facilities, supplies, and equipment; funeral, burial, and other expenses incidental thereto for beneficiaries receiving care in the department; administrative expenses in support of planning, design, project management, real property acquisition and disposition, construction and renovation of any facility under the jurisdiction or for the use of the department; oversight, engineering and architectural activities not charged to project cost; repairing, altering, improving or providing facilities in the several hospitals and homes under the jurisdiction of the department, not otherwise provided for, either by contract or by the hire of temporary employees and purchase of materials; uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901–5902; aid to State homes as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 1741; administrative and legal expenses of the department for collecting and recovering amounts owed the department as authorized under 38 U.S.C. chapter 17, and the Federal Medical Care Recovery Act, 42 U.S.C. 2651 et seq., $20,281,587,000, plus reimbursements: Provided, That of the funds made available under this heading, $900,000,000 is for the equipment and land and structures object classifications only, which amount shall not become available for obligation until August 1, 2001, and shall remain available until September 30, 2002: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, not to exceed $500,000,000 shall be available until September 30, 2002: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, not to exceed $28,134,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses'': Provided further, That the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall conduct by contract a program of recovery audits for the fee basis and other medical services contracts with respect to payments for hospital care; and, notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3302(b), amounts collected, by setoff or otherwise, as the result of such audits shall be available, without fiscal year limitation, for the purposes for which funds are appropriated under this heading and the purposes of paying a contractor a percent of the amount collected as a result of an audit carried out by the contractor: Provided further, That all amounts so collected under the preceding proviso with respect to a designated health care region (as that term is defined in 38 U.S.C. 1729A(d)(2)) shall be allocated, net of payments to the contractor, to that region.

In addition, in conformance with Public Law 105–33 establishing the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Care Collections Fund, such sums as may be deposited to such Fund pursuant to 38 U.S.C. 1729A may be transferred to this account, to remain available until expended for the purposes of this account.

None of the foregoing funds may be transferred to the Department of Justice for the purposes of supporting tobacco litigation.

MEDICAL AND PROSTHETIC RESEARCH

For necessary expenses in carrying out programs of medical and prosthetic research and development as authorized by 38 U.S.C. chapter 73, to remain available until September 30, 2002, $351,000,000, plus reimbursements.

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATION AND MISCELLANEOUS OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary expenses in the administration of the medical, hospital, nursing home, domiciliary, construction, supply, and research activities, as authorized by law; administrative expenses in support of capital policy activities, $62,000,000 plus reimbursements: Provided, That technical and consulting services offered by the Facilities Management Field Service, including project management and real property administration (including leases, site acquisition and disposal activities directly supporting projects), shall be provided to Department of Veterans Affairs components only on a reimbursable basis, and such amounts will remain available until September 30, 2001.

DEPARTMENTAL ADMINISTRATION

GENERAL OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary operating expenses of the Department of Veterans Affairs, not otherwise provided for, including uniforms or allowances therefor; not to exceed $25,000 for official reception and representation expenses; hire of passenger motor vehicles; and reimbursement of the General Services Administration for security guard services, and the Department of Defense for the cost of overseas employee mail, $1,050,000,000: Provided, That expenses for services and assistance authorized under 38 U.S.C. 3104(a)(1), (2), (5) and (11) that the Secretary determines are necessary to enable entitled veterans (1) to the maximum extent feasible, to become employable and to obtain and maintain suitable employment; or (2) to achieve maximum independence in daily living, shall be charged to this account: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, not to exceed $45,000,000 shall be available until September 30, 2002: Provided further, That funds under this heading shall be available to administer the Service Members Occupational Conversion and Training Act.

NATIONAL CEMETERY ADMINISTRATION

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For necessary expenses for the maintenance and operation of the National Cemetery Administration, not otherwise provided for, including uniforms or allowances therefor; cemeterial expenses as authorized by law; purchase of two passenger motor vehicles for use in cemeterial operations; and hire of passenger motor vehicles, $109,889,000: Provided, That travel expenses shall not exceed $1,125,000: Provided further, That of the amount made available under this heading, not to exceed $125,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for ''General operating expenses''.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

CONSTRUCTION, MAJOR PROJECTS

For constructing, altering, extending and improving any of the facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the Department of Veterans Affairs, or for any of the purposes set forth in sections 316, 2404, 2406, 8102, 8103, 8106, 8108, 8109, 8110, and 8122 of title 38, United States Code, including planning, architectural and engineering services, maintenance or guarantee period services costs associated with equipment guarantees provided under the project, services of claims analysts, offsite utility and storm drainage system construction costs, and site acquisition, where the estimated cost of a project is $4,000,000 or more or where funds for a project were made available in a previous major project appropriation, $66,040,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That except for advance planning of projects (including market-based assessments of health care needs which may or may not lead to capital investments) funded through the advance planning fund and the design of projects funded through the design fund, none of these funds shall be used for any project which has not been considered and approved by the Congress in the budgetary process: Provided further, That funds provided in this appropriation for fiscal year 2001, for each approved project shall be obligated: (1) by the awarding of a construction documents contract by September 30, 2001; and (2) by the awarding of a construction contract by September 30, 2002: Provided further, That the Secretary shall promptly report in writing to the Committees on Appropriations any approved major construction project in which obligations are not incurred within the time limitations established above: Provided further, That no funds from any other account except the ''Parking revolving fund'', may be obligated for constructing, altering, extending, or improving a project which was approved in the budget process and funded in this account until one year after substantial completion and beneficial occupancy by the Department of Veterans Affairs of the project or any part thereof with respect to that part only.

CONSTRUCTION, MINOR PROJECTS

For constructing, altering, extending, and improving any of the facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the Department of Veterans Affairs, including planning, architectural and engineering services, maintenance or guarantee period services costs associated with equipment guarantees provided under the project, services of claims analysts, offsite utility and storm drainage system construction costs, and site acquisition, or for any of the purposes set forth in sections 316, 2404, 2406, 8102, 8103, 8106, 8108, 8109, 8110, 8122, and 8162 of title 38, United States Code, where the estimated cost of a project is less than $4,000,000, $162,000,000, to remain available until expended, along with unobligated balances of previous ''Construction, minor projects'' appropriations which are hereby made available for any project where the estimated cost is less than $4,000,000: Provided, That funds in this account shall be available for: (1) repairs to any of the nonmedical facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the department which are necessary because of loss or damage caused by any natural disaster or catastrophe; and (2) temporary measures necessary to prevent or to minimize further loss by such causes.

PARKING REVOLVING FUND

For the parking revolving fund as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 8109, income from fees collected, to remain available until expended, which shall be available for all authorized expenses except operations and maintenance costs, which will be funded from ''Medical care''.

GRANTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF STATE EXTENDED CARE FACILITIES

For grants to assist States to acquire or construct State nursing home and domiciliary facilities and to remodel, modify or alter existing hospital, nursing home and domiciliary facilities in State homes, for furnishing care to veterans as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 8131–8137, $100,000,000, to remain available until expended.

GRANTS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF STATE VETERANS CEMETERIES

For grants to aid States in establishing, expanding, or improving State veterans cemeteries as authorized by 38 U.S.C. 2408, $25,000,000, to remain available until expended.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 101. Any appropriation for fiscal year 2001 for ''Compensation and pensions'', ''Readjustment benefits'', and ''Veterans insurance and indemnities'' may be transferred to any other of the mentioned appropriations.

SEC. 102. Appropriations available to the Department of Veterans Affairs for fiscal year 2001 for salaries and expenses shall be available for services authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

SEC. 103. No appropriations in this Act for the Department of Veterans Affairs (except the appropriations for ''Construction, major projects'', ''Construction, minor projects'', and the ''Parking revolving fund'') shall be available for the purchase of any site for or toward the construction of any new hospital or home.

SEC. 104. No appropriations in this Act for the Department of Veterans Affairs shall be available for hospitalization or examination of any persons (except beneficiaries entitled under the laws bestowing such benefits to veterans, and persons receiving such treatment under 5 U.S.C. 7901–7904 or 42 U.S.C. 5141–5204), unless reimbursement of cost is made to the ''Medical care'' account at such rates as may be fixed by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

SEC. 105. Appropriations available to the Department of Veterans Affairs for fiscal year 2001 for ''Compensation and pensions'', ''Readjustment benefits'', and ''Veterans insurance and indemnities'' shall be available for payment of prior year accrued obligations required to be recorded by law against the corresponding prior year accounts within the last quarter of fiscal year 2000.

SEC. 106. Appropriations accounts available to the Department of Veterans Affairs for fiscal year 2001 shall be available to pay prior year obligations of corresponding prior year appropriations accounts resulting from title X of the Competitive Equality Banking Act, Public Law 100–86, except that if such obligations are from trust fund accounts they shall be payable from ''Compensation and pensions''.

SEC. 107. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, during fiscal year 2001, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall, from the National Service Life Insurance Fund (38 U.S.C. 1920), the Veterans' Special Life Insurance Fund (38 U.S.C. 1923), and the United States Government Life Insurance Fund (38 U.S.C. 1955), reimburse the ''General operating expenses'' account for the cost of administration of the insurance programs financed through those accounts: Provided, That reimbursement shall be made only from the surplus earnings accumulated in an insurance program in fiscal year 2001, that are available for dividends in that program after claims have been paid and actuarially determined reserves have been set aside: Provided further, That if the cost of administration of an insurance program exceeds the amount of surplus earnings accumulated in that program, reimbursement shall be made only to the extent of such surplus earnings: Provided further, That the Secretary shall determine the cost of administration for fiscal year 2001, which is properly allocable to the provision of each insurance program and to the provision of any total disability income insurance included in such insurance program.

SEC. 108. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, collections authorized by the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act (Public Law 106–117) and credited to the appropriate Department of Veterans Affairs accounts in fiscal year 2001, shall not be available for obligation or expenditure unless appropriation language making such funds available is enacted.

SEC. 109. In accordance with section 1557 of title 31, United States Code, the following obligated balance shall be exempt from subchapter IV of chapter 15 of such title and shall remain available for expenditure until September 30, 2003: funds obligated by the Department of Veterans Affairs for a contract with the Institute for Clinical Research to study the application of artificial neural networks to the diagnosis and treatment of prostate cancer through the Cooperative DoD/VA Medical Research program from funds made available to the Department of Veterans Affairs by the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1995 (Public Law 103–335) under the heading ''Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide''.

SEC. 110. As HR LINK$ will not be part of the Franchise Fund in fiscal year 2001, funds budgeted in customer accounts to purchase HR LINK$ services from the Franchise Fund shall be transferred to the General Administration portion of the ''General operating expenses'' appropriation in the following amounts: $78,000 from the ''Office of Inspector General'', $358,000 from the ''National cemetery administration'', $1,106,000 from ''Medical care'', $84,000 from ''Medical administration and miscellaneous operating expenses'', and $38,000 shall be reprogrammed within the ''General operating expenses'' appropriation from the Veterans Benefits Administration to General Administration for the same purpose.

SEC. 111. Not to exceed $1,600,000 from the ''Medical care'' appropriation shall be transferred to the ''General operating expenses'' appropriation to fund personnel services costs of employees providing legal services and administrative support for the Office of General Counsel.

SEC. 112. Not to exceed $1,200,000 may be transferred from the ''Medical care'' appropriation to the ''General operating expenses'' appropriation to fund contracts and services in support of the Veterans Benefits Administration's Benefits Delivery Center, Systems Development Center, and Finance Center, located at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Hines, Illinois.

SEC. 113. Not to exceed $4,500,000 from the ''Construction, minor projects'' appropriation and not to exceed $2,000,000 from the ''Medical care'' appropriation may be transferred to and merged with the Parking Revolving Fund for surface parking lot projects.

SEC. 114. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act for ''Medical care'' appropriations of the Department of Veterans Affairs may be obligated for the realignment of the health care delivery system in Veterans Integrated Service Network 12 (VISN 12) until 60 days after the Secretary of Veterans Affairs certifies that the Department has: (1) consulted with veterans organizations, medical school affiliates, employee representatives, State veterans and health associations, and other interested parties with respect to the realignment plan to be implemented; and (2) made available to the Congress and the public information from the consultations regarding possible impacts on the accessibility of veterans health care services to affected veterans.

TITLE II—DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING

HOUSING CERTIFICATE FUND

(INCLUDING TRANSFERS OF FUNDS)

For activities and assistance to prevent the involuntary displacement of low-income families, the elderly and the disabled because of the loss of affordable housing stock, expiration of subsidy contracts (other than contracts for which amounts are provided under another heading in this Act) or expiration of use restrictions, or other changes in housing assistance arrangements, and for other purposes, $13,940,907,000 and amounts that are recaptured in this account to remain available until expended: Provided, That of the total amount provided under this heading, $12,972,000,000, of which $8,772,000,000 shall be available on October 1, 2000 and $4,200,000,000 shall be available on October 1, 2001, shall be for assistance under the United States Housing Act of 1937 (''the Act'' herein) (42 U.S.C. 1437): Provided further, That the foregoing amounts shall be for use in connection with expiring or terminating section 8 subsidy contracts, for amendments to section 8 subsidy contracts, for enhanced vouchers (including amendments and renewals) under any provision of law authorizing such assistance under section 8(t) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (47 U.S.C. 1437f(t)), contract administrators, and contracts entered into pursuant to section 441 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act: Provided further, That amounts available under the first proviso under this heading shall be available for section 8 rental assistance under the Act: (1) for the relocation and replacement of housing units that are demolished or disposed of pursuant to section 24 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 or to other authority for the revitalization of severely distressed public housing, as set forth in the Appropriations Acts for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies for fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1997, and in the Omnibus Consolidated Rescissions and Appropriations Act of 1996; (2) for the conversion of section 23 projects to assistance under section 8; (3) for funds to carry out the family unification program; (4) for the relocation of witnesses in connection with efforts to combat crime in public and assisted housing pursuant to a request from a law enforcement or prosecution agency; (5) for tenant protection assistance, including replacement and relocation assistance; and (6) for the 1-year renewal of section 8 contracts for units in a project that is subject to an approved plan of action under the Emergency Low Income Housing Preservation Act of 1987 or the Low-Income Housing Preservation and Resident Homeownership Act of 1990: Provided further, That $11,000,000 shall be transferred to the Working Capital Fund for the development and maintenance of information technology systems: Provided further, That of the total amount provided under this heading, $40,000,000 shall be made available to nonelderly disabled families affected by the designation of a public housing development under section 7 of the Act, the establishment of preferences in accordance with section 651 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13611), or the restriction of occupancy to elderly families in accordance with section 658 of such Act, and to the extent the Secretary determines that such amount is not needed to fund applications for such affected families, to other nonelderly disabled families: Provided further, That of the total amount provided under this heading, $452,907,000 shall be made available for incremental vouchers under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 on a fair share basis and administered by public housing agencies: Provided further, That of the total amount provided under this heading, up to $7,000,000 shall be made available for the completion of the Jobs Plus Demonstration: Provided further, That amounts available under this heading may be made available for administrative fees and other expenses to cover the cost of administering rental assistance programs under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937: Provided further, That the fee otherwise authorized under section 8(q) of such Act shall be determined in accordance with section 8(q), as in effect immediately before the enactment of the Quality Housing and Work Responsibility Act of 1998: Provided further, That $1,833,000,000 is rescinded from unobligated balances remaining from funds appropriated to the Department of Housing and Urban Development under this heading or the heading ''Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing'' or any other heading for fiscal year 2000 and prior years: Provided further, That any such balances governed by reallocation provisions under the statute authorizing the program for which the funds were originally appropriated shall not be available for this rescission: Provided further, That the Secretary shall have until September 30, 2001, to meet the rescission in the proviso preceding the immediately preceding proviso: Provided further, That any obligated balances of contract authority that have been terminated shall be canceled.

PUBLIC HOUSING CAPITAL FUND

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For the Public Housing Capital Fund Program to carry out capital and management activities for public housing agencies, as authorized under section 9 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1437), $3,000,000,000, to remain available until expended, of which up to $50,000,000 shall be for carrying out activities under section 9(h) of such Act, for lease adjustments to section 23 projects and $43,000,000 shall be transferred to the Working Capital Fund for the development and maintenance of information technology systems: Provided, That no funds may be used under this heading for the purposes specified in section 9(k) of the United States Housing Act of 1937: Provided further, That of the total amount, up to $75,000,000 shall be available for the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to make grants to public housing agencies for emergency capital needs resulting from emergencies and natural disasters in fiscal year 2001.

PUBLIC HOUSING OPERATING FUND

For payments to public housing agencies for the operation and management of public housing, as authorized by section 9(e) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1437g), $3,242,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That no funds may be used under this heading for the purposes specified in section 9(k) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

DRUG ELIMINATION GRANTS FOR LOW-INCOME HOUSING

(2) in section 209 by striking ''1994'' and inserting ''2005''.

SECTION 8 PHA PROJECT-BASED ASSISTANCE

SEC. 232. (a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (13) of section 8(o) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(o)(13)) is amended to read as follows:

''(13) PHA PROJECT-BASED ASSISTANCE.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—A public housing agency may use amounts provided under an annual contributions contract under this subsection to enter into a housing assistance payment contract with respect to an existing, newly constructed, or rehabilitated structure, that is attached to the structure, subject to the limitations and requirements of this paragraph.

''(B) PERCENTAGE LIMITATION.—Not more than 20 percent of the funding available for tenant-based assistance under this section that is administered by the agency may be attached to structures pursuant to this paragraph.

''(C) CONSISTENCY WITH PHA PLAN AND OTHER GOALS.—A public housing agency may approve a housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph only if the contract is consistent with—

''(i) the public housing agency plan for the agency approved under section 5A; and

''(ii) the goal of deconcentrating poverty and expanding housing and economic opportunities.

''(D) INCOME MIXING REQUIREMENT.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—Not more than 25 percent of the dwelling units in any building may be assisted under a housing assistance payment contract for project-based assistance pursuant to this paragraph.

''(ii) EXCEPTIONS.—The limitation under clause (i) shall not apply in the case of assistance under a contract for housing consisting of single family properties or for dwelling units that are specifically made available for households comprised of elderly families, disabled families, and families receiving supportive services.

''(E) RESIDENT CHOICE REQUIREMENT.—A housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph shall provide as follows:

''(i) MOBILITY.—Each low-income family occupying a dwelling unit assisted under the contract may move from the housing at any time after the family has occupied the dwelling unit for 12 months.

''(ii) CONTINUED ASSISTANCE.—Upon such a move, the public housing agency shall provide the low-income family with tenant-based rental assistance under this section or such other tenant-based rental assistance that is subject to comparable income, assistance, rent contribution, affordability, and other requirements, as the Secretary shall provide by regulation. If such rental assistance is not immediately available to fulfill the requirement under the preceding sentence with respect to a low-income family, such requirement may be met by providing the family priority to receive the next voucher or other tenant-based rental assistance amounts that become available under the program used to fulfill such requirement.

''(F) CONTRACT TERM.—A housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph between a public housing agency and the owner of a structure may have a term of up to 10 years, subject to the availability of sufficient appropriated funds for the purpose of renewing expiring contracts for assistance payments, as provided in appropriations Acts and in the agency's annual contributions contract with the Secretary, and to annual compliance with the inspection requirements under paragraph (8), except that the agency shall not be required to make annual inspections of each assisted unit in the development. The contract may specify additional conditions for its continuation. If the units covered by the contract are owned by the agency, the term of the contract shall be agreed upon by the agency and the unit of general local government or other entity approved by the Secretary in the manner provided under paragraph (11).

''(G) EXTENSION OF CONTRACT TERM.—A public housing agency may enter into a contract with the owner of a structure assisted under a housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph to extend the term of the underlying housing assistance payment contract for such period as the agency determines to be appropriate to achieve long-term affordability of the housing or to expand housing opportunities. Such a contract shall provide that the extension of such term shall be contingent upon the future availability of appropriated funds for the purpose of renewing expiring contracts for assistance payments, as provided in appropriations Acts, and may obligate the owner to have such extensions of the underlying housing assistance payment contract accepted by the owner and the successors in interest of the owner.

''(H) RENT CALCULATION.—A housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph shall establish rents for each unit assisted in an amount that does not exceed 110 percent of the applicable fair market rental (or any exception payment standard approved by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1)(D)), except that if a contract covers a dwelling unit that has been allocated low-income housing tax credits pursuant to section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 42) and is not located in a qualified census tract (as such term is defined in subsection (d) of such section 42), the rent for such unit may be established at any level that does not exceed the rent charged for comparable units in the building that also receive the low-income housing tax credit but do not have additional rental assistance. The rents established by housing assistance payment contracts pursuant to this paragraph may vary from the payment standards established by the public housing agency pursuant to paragraph (1)(B), but shall be subject to paragraph (10)(A).

''(I) RENT ADJUSTMENTS.—A housing assistance payments contract pursuant to this paragraph shall provide for rent adjustments, except that—

''(i) the adjusted rent for any unit assisted shall be reasonable in comparison with rents charged for comparable dwelling units in the private, unassisted, local market and may not exceed the maximum rent permitted under subparagraph (H); and

''(ii) the provisions of subsection (c)(2)(C) shall not apply.

''(J) TENANT SELECTION.—A public housing agency shall select families to receive project-based assistance pursuant to this paragraph from its waiting list for assistance under this subsection. Eligibility for such project-based assistance shall be subject to the provisions of section 16(b) that apply to tenant-based assistance. The agency may establish preferences or criteria for selection for a unit assisted under this paragraph that are consistent with the public housing agency plan for the agency approved under section 5A. Any family that rejects an offer of project-based assistance under this paragraph or that is rejected for admission to a structure by the owner or manager of a structure assisted under this paragraph shall retain its place on the waiting list as if the offer had not been made. The owner or manager of a structure assisted under this paragraph shall not admit any family to a dwelling unit assisted under a contract pursuant to this paragraph other than a family referred by the public housing agency from its waiting list. Subject to its waiting list policies and selection preferences, a public housing agency may place on its waiting list a family referred by the owner or manager of a structure and may maintain a separate waiting list for assistance under this paragraph, but only if all families on the agency's waiting list for assistance under this subsection are permitted to place their names on the separate list.

''(K) VACATED UNITS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (9), a housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph may provide as follows:

''(i) PAYMENT FOR VACANT UNITS.—That the public housing agency may, in its discretion, continue to provide assistance under the contract, for a reasonable period not exceeding 60 days, for a dwelling unit that becomes vacant, but only (I) if the vacancy was not the fault of the owner of the dwelling unit, and (II) the agency and the owner take every reasonable action to minimize the likelihood and extent of any such vacancy. Rental assistance may not be provided for a vacant unit after the expiration of such period.

''(ii) REDUCTION OF CONTRACT.—That, if despite reasonable efforts of the agency and the owner to fill a vacant unit, no eligible family has agreed to rent the unit within 120 days after the owner has notified the agency of the vacancy, the agency may reduce its housing assistance payments contract with the owner by the amount equivalent to the remaining months of subsidy attributable to the vacant unit. Amounts deobligated pursuant to such a contract provision shall be available to the agency to provide assistance under this subsection.

Eligible applicants for assistance under this subsection may enforce provisions authorized by this subparagraph.''.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—In the case of any dwelling unit that, upon the date of the enactment of this Act, is assisted under a housing assistance payment contract under section 8(o)(13) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(o)(13)) as in effect before such enactment, such assistance may be extended or renewed notwithstanding the requirements under subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) of such section 8(o)(13), as amended by subsection (a).

DISPOSITION OF HUD-HELD AND HUD-OWNED MULTIFAMILY PROJECTS FOR THE ELDERLY OR DISABLED

SEC. 233. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in managing and disposing of any multifamily property that is owned or held by the Secretary and is occupied primarily by elderly or disabled families, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall maintain any rental assistance payments under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 that are attached to any dwelling units in the property. To the extent the Secretary determines that such a multifamily property owned or held by the Secretary is not feasible for continued rental assistance payments under such section 8, the Secretary may, in consultation with the tenants of that property, contract for project-based rental assistance payments with an owner or owners of other existing housing properties or provide other rental assistance.

For necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for, in the conduct and support of human space flight research and development activities, including research, development, operations, and services; maintenance; construction of facilities including revitalization and modification of facilities, construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, facility planning and design, and acquisition or condemnation of real property, as authorized by law; space flight, spacecraft control and communications activities including operations, production, and services; and purchase, lease, charter, maintenance and operation of mission and administrative aircraft, $5,462,900,000, to remain available until September 30, 2002.

SCIENCE, AERONAUTICS AND TECHNOLOGY

For necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for, in the conduct and support of science, aeronautics and technology research and development activities, including research, development, operations, and services; maintenance; construction of facilities including revitalization, and modification of facilities, construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, facility planning and design, and acquisition or condemnation of real property, as authorized by law; space flight, spacecraft control and communications activities including operations, production, and services; and purchase, lease, charter, maintenance and operation of mission and administrative aircraft, $6,190,700,000, to remain available until September 30, 2002.

MISSION SUPPORT

For necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for, in carrying out mission support for human space flight programs and science, aeronautical, and technology programs, including research operations and support; maintenance; construction of facilities including revitalization and modification of facilities, construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, facility planning and design, environmental compliance and restoration, and acquisition or condemnation of real property, as authorized by law; program management; personnel and related costs, including uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901–5902; travel expenses; purchase, lease, charter, maintenance, and operation of mission and administrative aircraft; not to exceed $40,000 for official reception and representation expenses; and purchase (not to exceed 33 for replacement only) and hire of passenger motor vehicles, $2,608,700,000 to remain available until September 30, 2002.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

For necessary expenses of the Office of Inspector General in carrying out the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, $23,000,000.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for ''Human space flight'', ''Science, aeronautics and technology'', or ''Mission support'' by this appropriations Act, when any activity has been initiated by the incurrence of obligations for construction of facilities as authorized by law, such amount available for such activity shall remain available until expended. This provision does not apply to the amounts appropriated in ''Mission support'' pursuant to the authorization for minor revitalization and construction of facilities, and facility planning and design.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for ''Human space flight'', ''Science, aeronautics and technology'', or ''Mission support'' by this appropriations Act, the amounts appropriated for construction of facilities shall remain available until September 30, 2003.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for ''Mission support'' and ''Office of Inspector General'', amounts made available by this Act for personnel and related costs and travel expenses of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall remain available until September 30, 2001 and may be used to enter into contracts for training, investigations, costs associated with personnel relocation, and for other services, to be provided during the next fiscal year. Funds for announced prizes otherwise authorized shall remain available, without fiscal year limitation, until the prize is claimed or the offer is withdrawn.

Unless otherwise provided for in this Act or in the joint explanatory statement of the committee of conference accompanying this Act, no part of the funds appropriated for ''Human space flight'' may be used for the development of the International Space Station in excess of the amounts set forth in the budget estimates submitted as part of the budget request for fiscal year 2001.

No funds in this or any other Appropriations Act may be used to finalize an agreement prior to December 1, 2001 between NASA and a nongovernment organization to conduct research utilization and commercialization management activities of the International Space Station.

NATIONAL CREDIT UNION ADMINISTRATION

CENTRAL LIQUIDITY FACILITY

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

During fiscal year 2001, gross obligations of the Central Liquidity Facility for the principal amount of new direct loans to member credit unions, as authorized by 12 U.S.C. 1795 et seq., shall not exceed $1,500,000,000: Provided, That administrative expenses of the Central Liquidity Facility shall not exceed $296,303: Provided further, That $1,000,000 shall be transferred to the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund, of which $650,000, together with amounts of principal and interest on loans repaid, shall be available until expended for loans to community development credit unions, and $350,000 shall be available until expended for technical assistance to low-income and community development credit unions.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

RESEARCH AND RELATED ACTIVITIES

For necessary expenses in carrying out the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1861–1875), and the Act to establish a National Medal of Science (42 U.S.C. 1880–1881); services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; authorized travel; maintenance and operation of aircraft and purchase of flight services for research support; acquisition of aircraft; $3,350,000,000, of which not to exceed $275,592,000 shall remain available until expended for Polar research and operations support, and for reimbursement to other Federal agencies for operational and science support and logistical and other related activities for the United States Antarctic program; the balance to remain available until September 30, 2002: Provided, That receipts for scientific support services and materials furnished by the National Research Centers and other National Science Foundation supported research facilities may be credited to this appropriation: Provided further, That to the extent that the amount appropriated is less than the total amount authorized to be appropriated for included program activities, all amounts, including floors and ceilings, specified in the authorizing Act for those program activities or their subactivities shall be reduced proportionally: Provided further, That $65,000,000 of the funds available under this heading shall be made available for a comprehensive research initiative on plant genomes for economically significant crops: Provided further, That no funds in this or any other Act shall be used to acquire or lease a research vessel with ice-breaking capability built or retrofitted by a shipyard located in a foreign country if such a vessel of United States origin can be obtained at a cost no more than 50 per centum above that of the least expensive technically acceptable foreign vessel bid: Provided further, That, in determining the cost of such a vessel, such cost be increased by the amount of any subsidies or financing provided by a foreign government (or instrumentality thereof) to such vessel's construction: Provided further, That if the vessel contracted for pursuant to the foregoing is not available for the 2002–2003 austral summer Antarctic season, a vessel of any origin may be leased for a period of not to exceed 120 days for that season and each season thereafter until delivery of the new vessel.

MAJOR RESEARCH EQUIPMENT

For necessary expenses of major construction projects pursuant to the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended, including authorized travel, $121,600,000, to remain available until expended.

EDUCATION AND HUMAN RESOURCES

For necessary expenses in carrying out science and engineering education and human resources programs and activities pursuant to the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1861–1875), including services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, authorized travel, and rental of conference rooms in the District of Columbia, $787,352,000, to remain available until September 30, 2002: Provided, That to the extent that the amount of this appropriation is less than the total amount authorized to be appropriated for included program activities, all amounts, including floors and ceilings, specified in the authorizing Act for those program activities or their subactivities shall be reduced proportionally: Provided further, That $10,000,000 shall be available for the Office of Innovation Partnerships.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For salaries and expenses necessary in carrying out the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1861–1875); services authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; hire of passenger motor vehicles; not to exceed $9,000 for official reception and representation expenses; uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901–5902; rental of conference rooms in the District of Columbia; reimbursement of the General Services Administration for security guard services; $160,890,000: Provided, That contracts may be entered into under ''Salaries and expenses'' in fiscal year 2001 for maintenance and operation of facilities, and for other services, to be provided during the next fiscal year.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

For necessary expenses of the Office of Inspector General as authorized by the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, $6,280,000, to remain available until September 30, 2002.

NEIGHBORHOOD REINVESTMENT CORPORATION

PAYMENT TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD REINVESTMENT CORPORATION

For payment to the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation for use in neighborhood reinvestment activities, as authorized by the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation Act (42 U.S.C. 8101–8107), $90,000,000, of which $5,000,000 shall be for a homeownership program that is used in conjunction with section 8 assistance under the United States Housing Act of 1937: Provided, That of the amount made available, $2,500,000 shall be for an endowment to establish the George Knight Scholarship Fund for the Neighborhood Reinvestment Training Institute.

SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Selective Service System, including expenses of attendance at meetings and of training for uniformed personnel assigned to the Selective Service System, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 4101–4118 for civilian employees; and not to exceed $1,000 for official reception and representation expenses; $24,480,000: Provided, That during the current fiscal year, the President may exempt this appropriation from the provisions of 31 U.S.C. 1341, whenever he deems such action to be necessary in the interest of national defense: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated by this Act may be expended for or in connection with the induction of any person into the Armed Forces of the United States.

TITLE IV—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. Where appropriations in titles I, II, and III of this Act are expendable for travel expenses and no specific limitation has been placed thereon, the expenditures for such travel expenses may not exceed the amounts set forth therefore in the budget estimates submitted for the appropriations: Provided, That this provision does not apply to accounts that do not contain an object classification for travel: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to travel performed by uncompensated officials of local boards and appeal boards of the Selective Service System; to travel performed directly in connection with care and treatment of medical beneficiaries of the Department of Veterans Affairs; to travel performed in connection with major disasters or emergencies declared or determined by the President under the provisions of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act; to travel performed by the Offices of Inspector General in connection with audits and investigations; or to payments to interagency motor pools where separately set forth in the budget schedules: Provided further, That if appropriations in titles I, II, and III exceed the amounts set forth in budget estimates initially submitted for such appropriations, the expenditures for travel may correspondingly exceed the amounts therefore set forth in the estimates in the same proportion.

SEC. 402. Appropriations and funds available for the administrative expenses of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Selective Service System shall be available in the current fiscal year for purchase of uniforms, or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901–5902; hire of passenger motor vehicles; and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

SEC. 403. Funds of the Department of Housing and Urban Development subject to the Government Corporation Control Act or section 402 of the Housing Act of 1950 shall be available, without regard to the limitations on administrative expenses, for legal services on a contract or fee basis, and for utilizing and making payment for services and facilities of Federal National Mortgage Association, Government National Mortgage Association, Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, Federal Financing Bank, Federal Reserve banks or any member thereof, Federal Home Loan banks, and any insured bank within the meaning of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1811–1831).

SEC. 404. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 405. No funds appropriated by this Act may be expended—

(1) pursuant to a certification of an officer or employee of the United States unless—

(A) such certification is accompanied by, or is part of, a voucher or abstract which describes the payee or payees and the items or services for which such expenditure is being made; or

(B) the expenditure of funds pursuant to such certification, and without such a voucher or abstract, is specifically authorized by law; and

(2) unless such expenditure is subject to audit by the General Accounting Office or is specifically exempt by law from such audit.

SEC. 406. None of the funds provided in this Act to any department or agency may be expended for the transportation of any officer or employee of such department or agency between their domicile and their place of employment, with the exception of any officer or employee authorized such transportation under 31 U.S.C. 1344 or 5 U.S.C. 7905.

SEC. 407. None of the funds provided in this Act may be used for payment, through grants or contracts, to recipients that do not share in the cost of conducting research resulting from proposals not specifically solicited by the Government: Provided, That the extent of cost sharing by the recipient shall reflect the mutuality of interest of the grantee or contractor and the Government in the research.

SEC. 408. None of the funds in this Act may be used, directly or through grants, to pay or to provide reimbursement for payment of the salary of a consultant (whether retained by the Federal Government or a grantee) at more than the daily equivalent of the rate paid for level IV of the Executive Schedule, unless specifically authorized by law.

SEC. 409. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be used to pay the expenses of, or otherwise compensate, non-Federal parties intervening in regulatory or adjudicatory proceedings. Nothing herein affects the authority of the Consumer Product Safety Commission pursuant to section 7 of the Consumer Product Safety Act (15 U.S.C. 2056 et seq.).

SEC. 410. Except as otherwise provided under existing law, or under an existing Executive Order issued pursuant to an existing law, the obligation or expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for contracts for any consulting service shall be limited to contracts which are: (1) a matter of public record and available for public inspection; and (2) thereafter included in a publicly available list of all contracts entered into within 24 months prior to the date on which the list is made available to the public and of all contracts on which performance has not been completed by such date. The list required by the preceding sentence shall be updated quarterly and shall include a narrative description of the work to be performed under each such contract.

SEC. 411. Except as otherwise provided by law, no part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be obligated or expended by any executive agency, as referred to in the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 401 et seq.), for a contract for services unless such executive agency: (1) has awarded and entered into such contract in full compliance with such Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder; and (2) requires any report prepared pursuant to such contract, including plans, evaluations, studies, analyses and manuals, and any report prepared by the agency which is substantially derived from or substantially includes any report prepared pursuant to such contract, to contain information concerning: (A) the contract pursuant to which the report was prepared; and (B) the contractor who prepared the report pursuant to such contract.
